GROCERIES.

The feature that is most conspicuous in the week's trade is dulness. In every line the oppressive monotony of a low demand is experienced. The circumstances amply account for the fact. There was a good spell of buying at the outset of summer and this went farther in the way of slaking consumption than it was expected to go. A reason for its thus going farther is ready to hand in the hard times that have harassed the advance of trade so long. The staple article of the grocery trade at this season, sugar, has been in poor demand. That has given a depression to the general tone of trade, Lastly, it is a time of artful expectation on the part of the country generally, and towards the close of a long period of suspense the disposition to buy becomes weaker.

CANNED GOODS.

The goods for which there is the least demand are peas. The new raw material is now being gathered into the different canneries throughout the country and the unsold remnant of the '89 growth goes rather slowly into sale. Prices are still unchanged, however, and there is confidence among holders that the surplus will be small. The position of corn is weak, although prices so far have made no manifestation of this fact. The new crop promises to be a fine one, and there is reason to believe the stock of corn yet on the market is large. A part of the new pack of strawberries is now in the hands of the jobbers here. Every wholesale dealer is very well supplied. Prices are firm at $2.10 to $2.25. The estimate of the quantity canned places it at a low total. Tomatoes are moving off at a brisk rate. The stock here is low, and is not apt to be increased from any outside holdings. That of Montreal is the only one that is capable of supplying any, and it has turned out to be not large, but larger than it was supposed to be. Lots of 20 cases are going here at $1.20. The alarm about the salmon stock turned out to be unwarranted, as do most of the alarms that from time to time excite the market. Salmon appear now to be scarce, and prices are firm at $1.50 to $1.65. There is a demand that may be trusted to leave the ground pretty clear for the new stock. The "Star" brand of lobsters is selling at $2.20 to $2.25, and other brands for $2. Stocks are fairly large at present, but orders from the jobbers are tardily attended to.

The lobsters of the "Star" brand, which arrived on the market last week, are the finest that have yet gone out under this label. They are put up by the Portland Packing Co., Portland, Maine.

COFFEE.

Coffee went up ¼c. in Rio according to a cable advice on Tuesday. The price here is 22 to 23c. There has been no movement in any other centre of supply. The prices for Mocha and Java are firm at the advance chronicled last week. In all grades the trade is quiet.

DRIED FRUIT.

Valencia raisins have got into small compass. Some wholesalers are out. With the season of replenishment from the new crop two months yet in advance the prospect is one of very firm prices for the residue, and an early bareness of the market. The prices have not advanced since last report, but they are firm and lower than those ruling in New York. Currants are firm here, although the stock held in New York is large, as is that of case currants held in England. Most of the orders for foreign dried fruit have gone forward. They are larger than usual, and buyers placed them with more spirit. The past season has been a most satisfactory one to the local trade. All of them made money. The market is now bare, or almost so, while in former years there was usually considerable stock on hand. Prunes are now almost entirely cleared out. Late mail advices give favorable reports on the condition of Valencia raisins and currants, and the reports of a poor crop of Sultanas are confirmed. The Smyrna fig crop will not be as good as was anticipated.

New prunes, Turkish, for October shipment, are quoted by cable at 20s. for casks and 25s. 6d. for Atlas, prepared cases, which would be 5½ and 7c. respectvely. These figures are about 2c. on casks and 1c. on cases as compared with last year.

An estimate of the Sultana crop received by Lockhard, Watt & Scott shows 341,000 quintals against 359,000 last year, and of figs 50,000 as against 64,000—a load equals roughly 500 pounds. The shortage is attributable to the continued dryness of the season, which will also affect the size and quality of the fruit.

Bordeaux packers write that the prospects are still favorable for a large crop of French prunes, but that a strong feeling prevails there as to future prices. This feeling seems to be based upon a belief that England will take French in the place of Turkish prunes to a considerable extent the coming season, and the American market is looked to as certain to be a larger one this year than last for the French goods, owing to the alleged short crop in California.

NUTS.

The dulness of trade in nuts has not been relieved by any dealings on a large scale or by any run on a particular line. The prices current last week stand for this one. There is a very slack demand.

RICE AND SPICES.

Wholesalers who laid in a 1000-bag supply of rice before the advance in the Montral market are in a good position, as trade has been very good and the stock has been sufficient in this market to supply it. The advance will not be felt here till fall. The mills are refusing to make contracts now, as they claim the stock will be short. The trade in spices is without any feature of novelty. Cloves are easier in England.

SUGAR.

Raw sugar is slightly firmer abroad. Refined on the other hand, is easier in New York, the refineries of Clause Spreckels forcing the Trust to concede another sixteenth on refined. Here the fall has not been felt yet, although there has been a very dull week in sugar dealings. The shortness of the early crops has greatly contracted the capacity of the season's sugar consumption, and the gloomy general outlook for all our staple fruit crops this year has a depressing influence upon the sugar trade. Raws are 5¼ to 5½c. Refined yellows are 5⅜ to 6¼c., and granulated is 6⅞ to 7c.

A lot of 250 bbls. good medium yellow sold to a retailer the other day at $5.27½.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their weekly review of the market, say: In raws a good business has been done, and an improving tendency is to be noted. The senate is about to take up the tariff bill, and it is now thought that it will be passed by both houses and become a law at this session of Congress, notwithstanding the objections raised by the secretary of state. The supplies of sugar in the United States are large, and refiners carry about two-thirds of it at low cost. Total stock in all the principal countries, at latest uneven dates is 1,007,688 tons, against 623,643 tons at the same time last year.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

No trade worthy of mention was done in either commodity. Elsewhere in these pages will be found an account of the change in the mode of levying duty on molasses.

TEAS.

The want of the trade now is good Japans to sell at 18 to 20c. The quality of the tea now to be had at those prices is not nearly up to that of the same prices last autumn and winter. The balance of trade as between the United States and Japan is in favor of the latter country. This puts American bills of exchange at a discount, and increases the price of everything that comes from Japan through the New York market. Consequently there is not nearly the same value as there was last year in tea now bought at the same price. Country dealers will have to take commoner teas for the same money. In black teas the same value cannot now be got in England at 9d. or 1s. as was to be had two months ago, and there is a strong call for such value.

The local demand for Indian and Ceylon teas has been quiet. In London there is rather less enquiry for Indians and prices are a little easier, except Pekoe Souchongs up to 9d. a pound, which are keenly competed for. Ceylon teas are a little irregular, but teas for price remained firm. Some noticeable averages were obtained from the following estates: "Mayfield" 1s. 1¼d., "Bambrakelly and Deil" 1s. 0¾d. The average for the week of teas sold on garden account was 10¾d.

Russell & Co., Shanghai, report to June 13 as follows: Black teas—Advices from Hankow state that in first crop teas teamen are willing sellers, but buyers are handicapped through the rise in exchange, and there is only a small business doing. The stock has been well picked over and principally consists of undesirable and common kinds. The second crop is said to be of inferior quality and the supply will be very much under that of last season. No teas at present have been placed on the Shanghai market. Green teas—Few chops of Pingsuey teas have been shown, but no business been done. The quality is rather better than that of last season, and the make and style of the teas are quite up to the average.

PETROLEUM.

An advance in the price of crude oil has made itself felt in the prices of refined, which will be found at slightly higher quotations in this week's Prices Current. Trade in refined oil is still quiet.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

A better business is reported by wholesalers, chiefly in medicinal stock. There has been a decline in demand for insect powders and Paris green, as the plants have pretty well outlived the pests by this date. There is no change in prices.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The dealings in old tub butter have been confined to small lots. The market for it has been very dull. Prices have kept as a rule in the middle part of the scale that has so long reflected the low quality of the stock and the low vitality of the demand. Small sales have been made at 5 and 6c., though business has been done throughout the range of 4 to 8c. There is undoubtedly a considerable quantity of both old tub and old roll butter in the warehouses of commission men here, but the low demand and the warm weather are both against trade in it. The receipts of new tub are up to the demand. Prices run from 12 to 14c. The quality of the butter now coming in is good. The liberality of the supply leaves little chance for the accumulation of stock in the retailers' hands. That cause of depreciation may not be so operative this year as dealers have surely now learned that quick turns in butter are always the safest. The large rolls have not been so much in favor this week with shippers. Retailers who have them now make up crocks which are better for transit. These come in freely, bringing 13 to 15c. Farmers' pound rolls are selling well at 16 to 18c. Arrivals are about at the right rate to keep the tone of the market healthy. Creamery tubs are worth 18 to 20c. They are not offering freely yet, never are, in fact, at this time of year. Creamery rolls are 20 to 22c. A fair supply of them is reported.

Cheese is moving in response to a very good spell of consumption at 9 to 9½c;

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Have had a slight revival in buying interest, but with no advance in price, $1.60 to $1.80 representing the value of large and small lots respectively. Small lots are the almost unexceptional rule.

DRIED APPLES—There is a better demand than there was last week, but the stock has got within such small compass that the demand will be ineffective to make business. The quotation 5 to 5½c. is unchanged.

EVAPORATED APPLES — Are practically and almost literally off the market. The last transactions were 12½ to 13c.

EGGS—Have grown firmer and advanced, although there has been a very good supply. The price is now 14c. with no weakness indicated. The supply is above the scope of the home demand but purchases are made for the American market, and the home market is ruled by these dealings.

HAY—Is $10 to $10.50, with a declining inquiry. Bales are going out of demand before the advance of the new hay which is now mostly made and housed. Most of the old, however, has been taken up, for at the easy prices so long ruling consumption was stronger.

HIDES—Go at the prices mentioned a week ago; cured at 6½c., No. 1 green steers at 7c., and No. 1 green cows at 6c. The two lower grades of green in each class scale off a cent for each degree below No. 1. The market is capable of taking a large supply at these prices. The supply at present is but moderate.

HONEY—Clear is 9 to 12c. Sections are 14 to 18c. Trade is dull.

HOPS—A good demand is kept up, but on the large stock of old and new it has made no effect that is transmitted to prices. They are yet 12 to 14c. for '89 stock and 8 to 12c. for yearlings.

OATS—Are scarce and in strong request at 43 to 43½c.

POTATOES—There is a very good supply of new ones, native as well as southern. The sudden onslaught upon the market made by the former has greatly checked importations by the effect it had on prices. These are $3.50 to $3.75 per barrel. The chief source of home supply is the country lying about Hamilton, and back of St. Catharines. The prices of the new are likely to be rather firm for some time because of the smallness of the stock of old potatoes and the general belief that the new crop will be a short one. The old potatoes are becoming more valuable. They are not to be had in carloads, in fact there are no receipts in lots larger than 70 or 80 bags. In such lots the price is $1.20 per bag.

POULTRY—The market is kept stocked up to the point necessary for business at good prices, and the demand is active. Ducks are 60 to 65c., and chickens 55 to 60c.

SKINS—Have advanced. Pelts are 40c. and lambskins are 60c. The market is very fairly supplied. Calfskins are 8c. for No. 1 and 6c. No. 2.

STRAW—Is weak at $5 to $5.50.

TALLOW—Rough is 2c. and rendered is 5½c.

WOOL—New is still firm and in fair receipt at 21c.

FISH.

There is a very fair demand reported this week for nearly all the fish that are on the market at present. British Columbia salmon is an expensive fish to buy, and the people who can afford to buy them are mostly all out camping, so that the demand is behind. There is a better demand for lake herring than for any other fish on the market. There is always a very fair demand for pickerel in a community where there is a good representation of Jews, but the lack of them in our section makes the demand for pickerel rather poor. The close season for British Columbia salmon is on now, having started on the 20th of July. The prices have advanced in a few instances on account of scarcity. The prices are expected to remain the same now until the 1st of November, when the frozen fish will be coming on the market, making the prices a little higher. The prices are: Trout and whitefish 5½ to 6c., British Columbia salmon 15c., lake herring $1.75 per hundred, by count, pickerel 5c.

GREEN FRUIT.

There are no longer any Valencias. There are few oranges in stock anywhere, and all that we have here is of the Sorrento growth. These are received in small shipments, for though all stocks are light nobody cares to replenish largely when prices are so high, especially as there will be a relaxing of these prices when the Jamaica crop comes to hand. Furthermore there is not the demand to warrant heavy stocking, any more than there is the fruit at points of production or distribution. The demand will not spring back to oranges until it has become overwhemed or stranded by the new northern and native fruits. These will for some time absorb all the fruit consuming energies of the people. Sorrento oranges are $6.50. Lemons are receiving a large share of attention. They are plentiful, the late beginning of the season for their trade leaving stocks pretty full. They are selling at $5.50 to $6. A lot of Spanish lemons, rather fancy stock, is now on the market. Bananas are $1.25 to $1.75. They are plentiful and in declining request. Of California small fruit, pears are $5 to $5.50, peaches are $3.50, plums $3.50 to $4.50, and grapes $1.50 per 7 lb. basket. There is a good demand for these.

PROVISIONS.

The week's trade has been up to the high average that has been held since the close of the winter packing houses. Smoked meat continues to be favored by consumers with a very strong demand, which takes more ham out of stock however than it does of bacon. The receipt of hogs has been small this week but there has been no stoppage in it. Buyers expect that it will not run to a vanishing point but will or has come to a neck from which it will continue to swell until the winter slaughter. It is believed that the basis of an unbroken trade in dressed hogs is now established, and that we may look for a trade in them to be steady from the beginning to the end of the year.

BACON—Long clear is 8½ to 8¾c. Bellies are 11 1-2 to 12c. Backs are 11 to 11 1-2c. Spiced roll is 9 1-2 to 10c.

DRESSED HOGS—Are $6.50.

SALT.

Salt is still in poor request, the sale of barrel salt being very small, although the other quantities seem to be moving off fairly well. The sales for this week reported by the Toronto Salt Works are: 1 car sacks at 68c.; 1 car dairy, $1.18. Small quantities sell at $1.45 for bbls.; sacks, 80 to 85c.; ¼ sacks 45c.

DRY GOODS.

Trade moves along at the cautious gait. No prospective business can be done by travellers. The retailers are keeping up stock but not attempting any signal strokes of business in the way of anticipating the market. Prices in all lines are maintained, and the constitution of trade though dormant is healthy. The negotiations for the transfer of the cotton mills to an English syndicate have been put back somewhat, but the deal has not been brought to an issue of any sort.

MONTREAL

MONTREAL MARKETS.

JULY 24, 1890.

GROCERIES.

The past week has shown no improvement in business over the previous one. As stated in our last the city trade is quiet owing to the exodus of residents, and the country trade is quiet owing to the harvest, so that the market remains unchanged. Encouraging reports from all over the Dominion are received daily regarding the crops, which in some places are up to the average. Advices from England state that the crops there have been ruined by the heaviest rainfall known in any one week for years. Everybody admits now that it is likely to be the worst yield since the unprecedented disaster of 1879 The stock of English wheat is now all but exhausted, and under the influence of this and the evil prospects the growing crop prices have advanced about another shilling per quarter during the week. As to the real condition of the Russian crop much uncertainty exists. The official report of the month makes a very gloomy showing, but it is suspected in Berlin that this is done to favorably affect exchange, and that Russia, in fact has a tolerable crop. If this be true, Russia ought to make a great deal of money, because all Europe will perforce be buyers.

SUGAR.

There is very little demand whatever for sugar, which is rather unusual at this season of the year, in fact sales are below the average, this of course keeps the price down, while refineries are accumulating large stocks. The Beet sugar market in England is strong closing at 14d.

MOLASSES.

Advices from Barbadoes, dated 10th July, say that seven-eighths of the crop has been sold; for the remaining eighth 14c. was offered and refused, holders asking 15c., which means 35c. here, and very likely by this time the market is closed. Three cargoes are expected in a few days, viz.: the "Flind," "Constave," and the "Yuba," two of these are sold to arrive, the other one we understand will go in store. The price has been so low that large quantities have been sold. The rnling price for small lots is 34c.

COFFEES.

Since last week there is nothing of much moment to report. Prices are unchanged, and as far as we can learn there have been no orders placed for coffees in England. A consignment lrom Maracaibo direct of some three hundred bags, partly good Cuenta and partly Trigillo, arrived here on Saturday. As these cheaper kinds of Maracaibo have been wanted for some time, all that portion of the consignment has been placed, some of it going to Toronto roasters.

DRIED FRUIT.

The market continues without change. Valencias are still quoted at 8 to 8½c., and layers at 9½c. Currants have again advanced, and the lowest price quoted is 6½c. Higher prices may be looked for, as stocks in sight are very small. Eleme raisins, choice 8½ to 8¾c.

CANNED GOODS.

The only movement in canned goods is between the packers and jobbers. Packers are holding at the following figures: Strawberries $2.00; red raspberries $2.10; black $2.00; apples 3 lb. 90c., gal. $2.10; peas $1.00 to $1.15; pears $1.50 to $1.60, tomatoes $1.00; beans 85 to 90c. Gallon apples are very scarce, and jobbers are holding at $2.75. Lobsters are in good demand at $7.25 to $7.50 A small arrival of new dry cod is quoted at $5.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS—The strong tone to the egg market already noted has continued and we have to note a further advance of ½c. to 1c. per dozen. The receipts have been larger, for which the demand has been good and the market is fairly active with a good business at 14c. to 15c. per dozen, the latter figure being for choice canned stock.

HOPS—The demand for hops on spot has been limited and the market has ruled quiet, sales being principally confined to small lots for actual wants but there has been an improved demand in the foreign markets and a quantity of hops has been shipped from New York to England. We quote: Choice Canadian, 17 to 19c. per lb., fair to good, 13 to 16c., and old stock, 5 to 9c.

BEANS—There has been no change in the market for beans. The feeling is firm and prices have been maintained. The demand is fair for small lots and sales have transpired at $1.70 to $1.85 with old stock at $1.50 to $1.60. Later advices from the country have been more favorable and report the prospects for the coming crop somewhat improved.

ASHES.

There has been no change in the market for ashes, business having ruled quiet on account of the small receipts, but what few are coming in meet with a ready sale at steady prices. We quote : first pots, $4.10 ; second $3.70, and pearls about $5.25 per 100 lbs.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—The demand for butter continues slow and the market has ruled quiet, with only a small jobbing trade doing on local account. Creamery is offering in round lots at 16½ to 17c , and in a jobbing way at 17 to 18c. It is stated that holders in the country are offering freely at 17c., with buyers here bidding 16c. We quote: Townships choice to finest make, 15 to 16c.; fair to good, 13 to 14c.; Morrisburg and Brockville. good to finest, 14 to 15c.; Western choice to finest, 12 to 14c.

CHEESE.—There was a somewhat steadier tone to the cheese market to-day and the feeling generally was that the decline in prices has been checked for the present. The offerings at the boat this morning were 1,600 boxes of white and colored, of which the bulk sold at 7¾c., but outside of this business was quiet as it generally is on a Monday. The shipments for the week ending June 14 were, 105,324 boxes, through shipments, 40,515, as compared with 7,255 boxes, through shipments 28,278 for the same week last year, and 88,262 for the corresponding week in 1888. At Canton, on Saturday, three thousand one hundred cheese were sold at 7¾c., and 1,500 at 7½c. Seven hundred tubs butter were sold at 17 to 18c., the latter ruling. At Ogdensburg three thousand cheese offered and sold to-day, 1,500 at 7⅞, and 1,500 at 7¾c. At London about five thousand boxes offered at to-days market; one small lot sold at 8⅜c., factorymen holding for 8½c. or better. We quote : Finest Brockville (colored), 8½ to 8⅝c., white 8 1-4 to 8⅜c. Eastern and States (colored), 8 to 8⅜c.: white, 8 to 8¼c.

PROVISIONS.

The tone of the local provision market was steady and prices were unchanged. The demand continues slow, and business has ruled quiet and of a small jobbing character. Hams and bacon have also been moving slow on account of the cool weather. We quote : Canadian short cut pork, $17.50 to $18 per barrel; Armour's and Morgan's short cut, $16.50 to $17; do. mess, $16; Canadian lard, $1.65 to $1.70 per pail; ham, 13 to 13½c.; bacon, 10 to 12c.; and tallow 4½ to 5c.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

GRAIN—There has been no change in the local grain market, business on spot having continued quiet. In Manitoba wheat there is nothing doing owing to the fact that there is none offering, but it would cost laid down here to-day $1.19 to $1.20 for No. 1, and $1.17 to $1.18 for No. 2. Owing to the recent advance in corn in the West prices are quoted higher here at 53c. to 55c., duty paid. There has been some enquiry for rye and recent sales have been effected at 54c. Latest advices from Ontario are to the effect that the winter wheat crop will be a poor one, while late advices from Manitoba report the prospects for the crop fair, but it will be probably two weeks late, The stock of grain in store shows an increase of 1,921 bushels wheat, a decrease of 398 corn, an increase of 6,324 oats, and a decrease of 34,521 peas compared with a week ago, and a decrease of 315,768 wheat, 13,245 corn, an increase of 40,757 peas and 64,446 oats as compared with the same week last year.

FLOUR.—In flour business was quiet, there being only a small local demand to fill actual requirements. Tone of market steady ; prices show no change. Stock in store shows a decrease of 2714 barrels compared with a week ago and a decrease of 3860 barrels with the same week last year. We quote :— —Patent winter, $5.15 to $5.25; patent spring, $5.25 to $5.50; straight roller, $4.75 to $4.90; extra, $4.35 to $4.50; superfine, $3.25 to $3.75; fine, $0.00 to $0.00; city strong bakers, $5.15 to $5.25; strong bakers, $5.15 to $5.25; superfine, bags, $2.30 to $2.40; extra, bags, $2.00 to $2.10; fine, bags, $1.50 to $2.00; oatmeal, standard, per bag $2.25 to $2.30; oatmeal, granulated, $0.00 to $2.50; oatmeal, rolled, $0.00 to $2.50

MONTREAL NOTES.

Mr. John A. Moir, commission merchant, is enjoying a short holiday at the seaside.

Freights are now going up, and on the whole shipping is improving upon last month.

Chaput, Fils & Cie have a line of 50 bags canary seed they are offering to the trade at a low figure.

Mr. C. Chaput, of Messrs. L. Chaput, Fils & Cie. is at present enjoying a well earned rest at Old Orchard Beach.

The "Eliza," "Minnie Bride" and the "Medbor" with Barbadoes molasses for Hudon, Hebert & Cie are expected to arrive shortly.

The agency for Menier chocolate has been transferred to Messrs. Anderson & Miller, commission agents, 13 St. John street. They are sole agents for Canada.

Mr. Robert Thomson Dinahan, grocer, has assigned at the demand of Mr. Geo. Lanctot, with liabilities of about $6,000. The largest creditor is Mr. Lanctot himself, interested for $3,000.

The Ottawa Free Press a few days ago contained the following : "Mr. D. Sinclair, of the Canada Sugar Refinery is in the city to advise the Minister of Customs in regard to the question of molasses importation for the re-adjustment of an equal basis of the customs duties on molasses. Mr. Sinclair contends that the tariff should be used to prevent the importation of molasses as far as possible, because the use of molasses reduces the consumption of sugar, and the sugar combine insists that they are entitled to a monopoly of the business of supplying sweetning material in Canada." It was only in the imaginative brain of the reporter that the facts of the above item originated. On the face of it, it can be seen that the truth is being handled rather awkwardly.

It will be remembered that the forwarders and grain men, after a long agitation, induced the Government to grant to shippers of oats via the canal the same rebate of canal tolls as allowed on other grain. Lately it has been subject to general comment on the Corn Exchange that the allowance of the rebate of canal tolls on oats has been a complete failure so far as bringing American grain for export via this route is concerned. Not a barge load of American oats has yet been brought down the canals this season. The grain merchants who interested themselves in the movement to induce the Government to grant the rebate on oats state that there are large quantities of oats which would naturally come to Montreal for export were the freights lower. Shipping men explain that oats are placed in the lower holds of the steamships leaving the American ports, and as they require them to fill these spaces take them at very low rates of freight. There are plenty of deals offering at Montreal to fill the lower holds of the steamships, and as deals pay better and are better freight than oats, there is no reason for the shipping agents to offer lower rates for oats than for other grain.

THE GROCERS' PICNIC.

The annual picnic of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association is the leading event of its kind in Montreal during the summer months. Politicians, public men, as well as the city fathers are ready at a moments notice to join hands with the grocers for a days outing and fun. The picnic of '90 promises to eclipse former ones. The date chosen is Wednesday, July 30th, and the spot, the most charming within miles of Montreal, is the beautiful Park of Judge Foster at Knowlton, which has been thrown open to the excursionists.

Knowlton is reached by the C. P. R., which will carry the picnickers by two special trains leaving the Windsor station at 7.30 and 7.45. Hon. Peter Mitchell, M. P., Hon. James McShane, M. P. P., Mr. J. S. Hall, M. P. P., Mr. J. O. Villeneuve, M.P.P., Mr. R. S. White, M. P., Ald. Roland, chairman of the finance committee, as well as a dozen or more aldermen have accepted invitations.

The bands of the Victoria Rifles and the pipers of the Royal Scotts will accompany the excursion.

The programme of games consists of fifteen events—foot races, boat races, jumping and a tug-of-war.

The prices of the tickets are $1, and for children 50 cents.

Brandon merchants are boycotting the Northern Pacific and Manitoba railway owing to the differential freight rates being unsatisfactory.

W. Bro. R. R. Fulton, of Woodstock, passed through the city last week on his way to Kingston, where he has been attending the Grand Lodge.

Nearly all the retail grocers in Hamilton have agreed to close their stores on Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock for the balance of the summer. Some of the more prominent houses have not yet consented to the arrangement, however.

Mr. William Langton, Bothwell, reports a better business than for some years. He is having his store handsomely refitted, and it now presents a very attractive appearance. It has been covered inside and out with painted sheet iron.

Mr. N. W. Chisholm of Meaford has been appointed Deputy Collector of Inland Revenue at Owen Sound. Mr. Chisholm is a young man of high personal qualities, and the appointment gives general satisfaction. He is well known to the trade, having been in the grain and general store business with his father.

When the Noble liquor cases were called on Monday at the Toronto police court, Inspector Archibald said that an agreement had been reached, whereby Noble was to pay the fines imposed at his two prior convictions and the three remaining cases were to be dropped. The magistrate, therefore, ordered the cases to be erased from the court calendar.

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday s yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

JOHN BAKER EDWARDS, P.L.D., D.C.L., F.C.S.,

HECK'S COLUMN.

How is business in the West? That's what should interest many merchants throughout the Dominion, also the prospects for this season's trade. Three hours run from Toronto, via C. P. R. to Owen Sound, and we are landed at the wharf to go aboard the steamer Alberta for the Soo and Port Arthur. This trip takes two days, where one gets a chance to rest and prepare himself for the long run to the coast. Passing through the Soo, we have an hour or more to see how trade is at that place, and to give you an idea as to the scarcity of money and backwardness of trade one could hardly get a V changed if he tried. On we go to Port Arthur. This town has boomed, but I can safely say it is at a standstill to-day. Many merchants think trade will pick up later, others are making enquiries as to locating further west. My opinion is that those who stay will in time get repaid, but at present things are very flat. The merchants visit around each other's doorsteps. Leaving Port Arthur the next town of importance is Rat Portage, and across the river the town of Keewatin, where the Lake of the Woods Milling Co'y's head office and mill are situated. That's the only thing that has any stir in the town, except possibly the lumber business, a number of tows coming in most every day. Well, to go back to Rat Portage again, things are quiet. Still we can safely say that they are ahead of towns previously mentioned, and being a summer resort for a number of Winnipegers everything counts these days. Thus, we report trade better, but no rush can be seen. Some will wonder what kind of country lies between these towns. To this, I say very rough. Did not see a plot of ground large enough to play cricket on that was any way level. Nothing but rocks, lakes and mountains. We pass on to Selkirk, being here informed that nothing but poverty kept people from forsaking the place altogether. The country now becomes more level, and we once in a while see a fine crop of grain. The new wheat coming in will most likely cause flour to be cheaper, and every prospect of a good yield is entertained. Winnipeg is our next stopping place, where, at this season the days are very warm and evenings cool. Here the clerks close shop doors every evening except Saturday at seven o'clock.

IMPOSSIBLE!
So say Doctors, to say too much in favour of St. Leon Water. It puts down Bright's Disease and Diabetes, as water quenches fire. Cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, etc., completely if drank freely and rubbed in the skin.

SILVER STAR STOVE PASTE.
The following is the universal verdict of all who have used or sold it:
HAMILTON, APRIL 25th, 1890.
Messrs F. F. DALLEY & Co.,
GENTLEMEN:—In thus ordering a fresh supply of your SILVER STAR STOVE PASTE we cannot but express our appreciation of the goods and congratulate you on having been able to place on the market an article so superior in every respect to anything we have heretofore been able to get.
As we use it on the stoves in the wareroom, we know personally its good qualities—no dust, a quick polish, always ready and the work is done in the time it would take to prepare the Dome or other hard stove polishes, and one of the best features about it is that it is so clean to handle.
If a man sells us an inferior article we don't forget to tell him about it, and on the same principle when a firm gives us an Extra good one we believe in letting them know that we appreciate it.
We remain,
Respectfully yours,
J. WALLACE & SON.

When writing to our advertisers please inclose the above.

SOLUS. SOLE PRESERVER
Will preserve the soles of boots or shoes, and render them perfectly waterproof. One application to a pair of new shoes will double their wearing qualities.
Two-sized tins, 15 and 25 cents. Will cost you $1.20 and $2.00 per dozen.
We also manufacture the best line of Wigwam Slippers, and Lumberman's Oil Tanned foot wear in Canada.

B. T. BABBITT'S

BEST SOAP

Which has a world-wide reputation of being the best lard soap made; noted for its PURITY and QUALITY. Hundreds of Soap Manufacturers have tried for years to imitate and discover the process by which it is made—but all have met with signal failure. No soap ever made has the same Washing Powers. Millions of families, mechanics, railroad engineers, railroad men will attest to this fact.

ST. LAWRENCE CANALS.

RAPIDE PLAT DIVISION.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for the St. Lawrence Canals," will be received at this office until the arrival of the eastern and western mails on Wednesday, the 23rd day of July next, for the construction of a lift lock, weirs, etc., at Morrisburg, and the deepening and enlargement of the Rapide Plat Canal. The work will be divided into three sections, each about a mile in length.

A map of the locality, together with plans and specifications of the respective works, can be seen on and after Wednesday the 9th day of July next, at this office, and at the Resident Engineer's Office, Morrisburg, where printed forms of tender can be obtained

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender, the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted cheque on a chartered bank in Canada for the sum of $6,000, must accompany the tender for Section No. 1, and an accepted cheque on a chartered bank in Canada, for the sum of $2,000 for each of the other sections.

The respective accepted cheques must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the works at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted. The cheques thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

This Department does not however, bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,

A. P. BRADLEY,
Secretary.

Vol. IV. TORONTO AND MONTREAL, AUGUST 1, 1890. No. 31

SPECIAL TO OUR READERS.

As the design of THE CANADIAN GROCER is to benefit mutually all interested in the business, we would request all parties ordering goods or making purchases of any description from houses advertising with us to mention in their letter that such advertisement was noticed in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

OUR MONTREAL OFFICE.

Our Montreal Office is located at 115 St. Francois Xavier St. Our representative, Mr. Hugh C. McLean, will be pleased to have subscribers and advertisers call upon him there. He will also pay special attention to gathering business items and attending generally to the interests of this paper.

Changes in advertisements and new advertisements must reach this office not later than Wednesday morning of each week.

LOBSTER AND SALMON OF THE '90 PACK.

The bulk of new salmon required for this market has been contracted for at prices that will enable jobbers to sell at $1 30. The unconsumed remnant of last year's stock in England is said to be large, and the pack this year there is every reason to believe will be a good one, although recent despatches are not so favorable, some reporting a prospective failure. These appear to be the overruling circumstance to which the easy prices for September delivery correspond.

Lobster, on the other hand, has come upon the market at high prices. It now costs retailers $2 to $2.75. The strict regulations of the Dominion government are said to have limited the catch. These regulations have been in force for two years. They were needed to save the lobster species from extinction by prodigal fishing methods. The storms that swept the coast of Cape Breton Island are also alleged to have cut down the prospective catch to greatly diminished actual proportions. But all the conditions of the market are not known, and prices may not be secure at the altitude they are found at the outset of the season. There is no knowing what stock may be in England. Also, canners have not made money on lobster the last two years, and may be agreeing to reach for good prices to make profits unrealized in the past. The quantity of the stock is known to them alone. If they can launch it early at good prices, it makes little odds to them how prices may hold. Three years ago lobster was $1.15 laid down here. The Marine and Fisheries departmental regulations have been in force since then, and these no doubt would check the supply for one year at least.

England is the great market for both lobster and salmon. If her demand does not disturb the present relation of the two classes of goods to each other, and if the superficial appearance of that situation is the correct one, we may look for a strong and general consumption of salmon against a light and special consumption of lobster. If both were in equal supply and selling at the same price, there is little doubt that more of the salmon than lobster would by called for. Intrinsically, salmon is the more popular. Therefore, when the price is so much in its favor, a much greater comparative demand would be attracted to it. People will not prefer to pay 20 to 25c. a tin for a commodity when they can get what is more than its popular equivalent for 12½ to 15c. Lobster will be not so much a staple as a luxury if the present distance in price holds out between it and salmon. It will not be wanted by the people, and if the stock of it is not too large to balance the special demand that all luxuries receive, it may all go into consumption at high price. There are eventualities, however. If the English market should be overstocked, if an excess of the pack should be consigned to it, there is a chance that lobster might become cheap and be available from England at prices easier than those ruling here.

The old stock of salmon is going off at good prices, $1.50 to $1.70, and there is not apt to be much of it left here to embarrass the new year's business. There is a carload or two, however, that will be flushed over into next year's trade at $1.25 to $1.20.

SMOKED HAMS.

The sale of smoked hams has this year been unprecedently large. The cause was adverted to in a former article in this journal, namely, the increased popularity of Canadian cured meats. The basis of the popularity is the great improvement that has been made in the curing process. So rapid has been the consumption of hams that the opinion has been expressed that we shall have to import in order to maintain the supply. This, however, is not an immediate contingency. The quantity of smoked hams in the country is large. There never has been a large regular importation of this form of hog-product. When this market was open to American packers we consumed a large amount of their barrel pork but usually found in the supply of our own curers a sufficiency of hams. But the consumption of hams has now increased, and another reason that works along with the one already referred to is the less availability of American barrel pork. But, we repeat, the supply of hams in the country is large. It was made larger by importations brought in on the eve of the change in the tariff. A large stock of American hams was brought in at that time on account of the anticipated duty. That stock is held at various points and will be forthcoming for some time yet.

The sharp demand for hams has completely inverted the situation of a year ago. Then hams were in but little regard against the strong call there was for bellies. Now bacon is dull, there is a very slack demand for it, while the run on ham is exceptionally strong. The reason no doubt is the closeness of prices of the products. There is so little difference in prices that it is not worth while to let it stand against the more toothsome product. What appears likely from the comparative demand for the two classes of pork is that when the stock of hams runs low, importation will not be resorted to, but the bacon will go into consumption. There will be a large stock on the market available at reasonable prices, whereas ham can be got only through import sources and at greatly increased figures. Then the difference in prices will be an item that will make the side of the scale under the scale the heavier in popular demand. The import duty will do much to abate the consumption of ham.

On the other hand, importation will be perhaps as unnecessary to keep the stock of ham well supplied as it is inconvenient. Our own packing-houses are at work, and can put stock on the market in 35 days' notice, provided of course the raw material is to be had. It seems to be in pretty free supply at present. Live hogs are in liberal receipt just now. Hams will therefore hold out, although the dearth of them last year was an early feature of the market.

The run of dressed hogs has been continuous since December, a state of supply unprecedented in this market. The receipts are now pretty well dwindled down but have not come to a standstill. After harvest when more attention can be given to them, it is expected that they will come in quite freely. The demand for them, which has maintained prices at a good level, comes from the few packers who keep their houses open throughout the year, and who receive their raw material in the form both of live and of dressed hogs. The live hogs are coming in quite freely. The summer packers are chiefly engaged in making stock for exportation. As soon, however, as it becomes necessary to supplement the present sources of Canadian consumption, our own exporters will come on our market with hams. It will pay them to do it if it will pay Americans. For the latter have to pay a duty of 3c. per pound. Whenever the market here becomes good enough to support the price this would bring the American hams to, we may be sure it will be at least as good as the foreign market for which our summer packers are curing, and they will at once meet the demand. There is hardly a contingency imaginable which would favor the importation of American hams in the present circumstances.

WHOLESALERS ONLY.

We respectfully call the attention of the retail grocery trade throughout the Dominion to our advertising columns, where will be found leading wholesale houses advertising their business and any specialties they may be in receipt of, for the trade. We can safely say they are wholesalers only. We have many letters from the trade, complaining of the practice of wholesale houses selling goods to consumers, and we know the practice is in vogue and all such dealers should be boycotted by the retailer. Many of those complaints come from the vicinity of Kingston, and to such we would recommend such houses as Messrs. Geo. Robertson & Son, who are wholesalers only. The GROCER is authority on all matters pertaining to the grocery trade, and can be consulted with perfect freedom, privately or through its columns publicly. We wish to give our advertisers every possible benefit from our large circulation, and when a retailer recognizes the advertisement of the wholesale merchant he should in some way make the fact known. It will gratify the merchant, it will help us, and you will stand a chance of being benefitted by so doing. THE CANADIAN GROCER is the only medium in Canada that visits the grocery trade exclusively, and should be made use of by both the wholesale and retail trade as a medium for consultation, information, and the general good of all concerned in the grocery trade.

OTTAWA RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Retail Grocers' Association held its regular monthly meeting last week. The attendance was large, and the business transacted of considerable importance. Our society is progressing, as retail grocers are realizing the benefits that may be derived from organization. At every meeting we have added to our numerical strength.

We took action on the bread question at the last meeting. Competition is very keen among bakers in this city, and consequently a large quantity of light bread is being put on the market. A short time since we had the spectacle of some of the oldest and presumably the most reliable firms having hundreds of loaves of bread seized. These men had been engaged in a regular war for some time past, and nothing else could be expected. Small shop keepers must sell bread, and those of us who dealt with honest bakers were put at a great disadvantage by that illegitimate competition. We agreed to sell bread at one cent per loaf profit, and boycott those bakers who do not give full weight. So that it amounts to this: A four lb. loaf of bread is now being sold at 10c. To-morrow the next door grocer puts it down to 9 cents. The next morning I tell my baker that in order to enable me to compete with my neighbor I must sell bread at 9c., and have one cent profit on each loaf. If he refuses, I go to my neighbor's baker, and deal with him. I must have my profit. If the latter sells his bread under a living profit, the more he sells the more quickly he will go to the wall, and the sooner he does the better. We cannot regulate prices in this case, as we are the buyers, but can regulate our profits. The bakers, we expect, will in a short time come to an understanding among themselves about the retail price of bread.

For many years past manufacturers of temperance beverages in this city have been selling their goods to the consumer at the same price that they sell to retailers. At the Association's request the two leading firms, M. Drolet and Whitmarsh & Hague, have agreed to sell to private families at an advance of 10c. per doz. on ginger ale, ginger beer, etc. This has already had the desired effect, and created a profitable business among several shopkeepers. These manufacturers are only too glad they told me to get rid of the private family trade, and were only waiting for somebody to take steps in the matter. Another illustration of the benefits of organized action.

At that meeting I read some articles published in THE GROCER respecting pedlars' licenses. The suggestions were received with pleasure, and we took immediate action on the matter. Petitions will immediately be sent to the city council praying that a tax be levied on itinerant merchants. In this city anybody and everybody can blow a horn, yell, or rap at anybody's door at pleasure for the purpose of buying or selling his goods.

Ottawa, July 28, 1890.

[The Ottawa Association is evidently a live concern. The record of its work is well filled with achievements of progress. The example which our correspondent enables us to place before our readers, is one that should be the germ not only of good resolve but of imitation in many business centres. We hope to hear often from our correspondent.—Ed.]

CO-OPERATION AMONG CREDITORS.

Some eight years ago, in a Kansas town, says a correspondent in the Iron Age, of 2,500 population, the merchants felt asaured in their minds that some concerted action must be taken against those who were constitutional dead beats, and those who gave all the trouble they could before they would pay, under pressure. The exemption law was much in favor of the householder against the merchant; immigration was also large, and they had got to a point where they must do something. A meeting was called one evening at which a large enough number were present and enough interest manifested to justify an organization. The proper officers were elected to serve one year, and the plan in general was as follows: Each merchant or firm were to prepare a list of names of all on his or their books who had not paid their accounts as they promised to, or who had not paid for six months, having been requested either by mail or in person to do so. Care was to be taken to do no one injustice, nor were any to escape who had the semblance of beats. The names were to be copied into as many books as there were members, each member being entitled to a book. Letters were placed after each name to show the kind of business the party was indebted to, H. for Hardware, D. G. for Dry Goods, etc., but no one but the secretary would know which firm reported any individual. These books were to be revised each month, new names, if there were any, added, and those who had paid were stricken out. No merchant was to trust any one who was indebted to any other member of the association, and the strict observance of this rule was the life of the association. A fee for membership was charged, also small monthly dues, both to be applied to paying bills for stationery and secretary's salary. They met in the town hall, so had no rent to pay.

It did not take long for the man who owed to find that there was a concerted action being brought to bear upon him, not in public denouncement as a fraud or glaring printed cards or envelopes comming through the mails, stating by the printing on the outside that they were to be returned to a dead beat collecting agency if not called for in ten days. He was politely informed that he was indebted to a firm or firms in a certain line or lines, as the case may be, and that until satisfactory evidence that these accounts were paid the merchant could not extend him further credit. He was urged to pay his debt, that the merchant might trust him again. He would, perhaps, try some other store and meet with the same polite, but firm reply, until he was made to see in spite of himself the necessity of putting himself on a paid up basis, or thereafter pay cash for everything. The merchants who would not go into this arrangement—and about 25 per cent. would not—got this class of undesirable trade, and soon filled their books with uncollectable accounts. At last report this association was in a flourishing condition.

A WELCOME WEEKLY VISITOR

Mr. Alph. E. Provost, Ottawa, writes :—"THE GROCER is always a welcome weekly visitor in our shop. Your articles are always interesting and contain most valuable information to the trade."

OUR JOURNAL IN THE WEST.

Mr. G. Hector Clemes, representing the CANADIAN GROCER, published at Toronto, was in Winnipeg last week. He will go as far west as the Pacific coast in the interest of his journal, which the trade will find a valuable publication.—Commercial.

Mr. W. H. Matthews, head bookkeeper for the Lakeport Canning Co., and Miss Ella Chapin, daughter of Mr. S. Chapin, Colborne, were married in that village on the 22nd inst. Mr. W. Bellamy was groomsman, and Miss Gussie Colton first bridesmaid, assisted by Miss Gussie Matthews, sister of the groom. The nuptial ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's father by Rev. Mr. Duncan, in the presence of a large number of guests. The presents were numerous and costly. The happy couple left for an extended trip through the west.

One of our representatives wishes to convey his thanks through the columns of THE GROCER to the Truro Condensed Milk Company for a sample of their condensed cocoa and coffee. He says both give a better flavor than can be made from the ground material and many times the trouble saved, is worth more than the cost of the condensed article, as a teaspoonful stirred in a cup of hot water, outdoes the best French cook's production and once used by picnic or camping parties will ever after be one of the indispensible articles of a camping outfit. Even in the household it will prove a luxury. All first-class grocers should keep it in stock.

An effort is being made by R. W. Elliot, of R. W. Elliot & Co., wholesale druggists, to form an organization to resist the efforts of the distillers' combine to keep up the price of alcohol. In the circular sent to the trade, Mr. Elliot says: "We have been notified of an advance in the price of alcohol by the combine to $3.70 per gallon, with discounts of 5 per cent. for 25 barrels per month and 10 per cent. if 50 barrels per month are ordered. As no house wants to load itself with the obligation to dispose of 50 barrels per month, it is suggested that a number of drug firms should combine to take a minimum quantity each, aggregating 50 barrels."

On Monday morning the 14th inst. two persons were caught attempting to blow open the safe of James Holbert, merchant, Thomasburg. They were surprised and fled before doing any damage. They evidently came from the direction of Belleville, as some tools were stolen from the waggon shop of W. P. Hudson, Roslin, and left in Mr. Holbert's store. They also burst open the door of Miss Hewitt's store and rifled the cash drawer, scattering some papers over the floor, but nothing is missing. No doubt the object of the parties was to get possession of the sum of $800, the proceeds of the Orange demonstration held in Roslin on Saturday, and in possession of W. P. Hudson.

A sad drowning accident occurred in the Otonabee river at Peterboro, on Tuesday morning between the two dams at Dickson & Co's mills. The victim was Everett Kidd, a 9-year-old son of Mr. M. R. Kidd, grocer, of George street. The little fellow, in company with his brother, aged 11 years, was fishing from a pile of slabs which lined the river bank in the mill-yard. The pile of slabs shifted, throwing the unfortunate little fellow into the current, which is very swift at this point. His elder brother, noticing Everett struggling in the river, jumped in and heroically went to the rescue. He reached the drowning lad, and had brought him nearly to the shore when he lost his hold and the doomed boy was carried away out of reach. The parents of the unfortunate boy have the sympathy of the community.

Last week Cobourg received a visit from Mr. Carl Trostorff, of Germany, and Mr. Robt. H. Lawder, of Toronto, two gentlemen who are interested in the growth of beet root for the production of sugar. They propose to establish a factory somewhere near Cobourg provided the farmers will go into the extensive cultivation of the sugar beet, and the object of their visit was to see what success was attending the growth of the seed supplied to six or seven leading agriculturalists last spring for the purpose of testing the sugar beet root in the locality. Last year Mr. James Russell, of Hamilton township, grew a small patch which produced a large percentage of saccharine juice. This year Mr. W. J. Westington, John Bowman, Thos. Hoskin, jr., Walter Riddell, John Mulholland, David Dines and James Russell are making the same experiment and are succeeding beyond expectations. The Trostorff factory will have a capacity for turning out 300 tons per day. This will exhaust the season's crop on 3,000 acres. The seed is furnished free to the farmers, the company providing an inspector, whose instructions the beet growers are bound to follow. The crop at market value yields from $60 to $80 per acre, and costs $25 per acre. The establishment will employ about 300 hands during the sugar-making season, which lasts four or five months.

Clerks too often act in a sort of lack brain manner and by their indifference and carelessness lose to the proprietors of stores a good customer. I—did I own a store—would bounce all such clerks in a jiffy. "Taverder," that philosophical and observant writer, thus narrates an experience of his, and, as he says, "the story has a moral" : A few days ago a gentleman went into a well known store here in Boston with the intention of making a large purchase. Several of the clerks were laughing and chatting together, and as the gentleman made no demonstration of his purpose, none of them thought it worth while to interrupt the flow of good fellowship that happened to occupy them at the moment. The gentleman, who, by the way has succeeded in making a handsome fortune for himself and his partners in large measure through his strictness in supplying his customers, never keeping them waiting in his own store, and often telegraphing an order to New York when the cost of the telegram exceeded the amount of the purchase, waited eight minutes by his watch, and at last, coming to the conclusion that he might have to wait all day, turned to go out. Then only, a young man hastened up to him and asked him if there was anything that he could do for him. The intending purchaser replied that it was too late. This story has a moral.—N. E. Grocer.

THE PIC-NIC POSTPONED.

The Toronto retail grocers' pic-nic, which was to have taken place on Wednesday, has been postponed. Untoward weather was the cause. The day appointed opened pleasantly enough, but before one o'clock a heavy rain began and continued for above two hours. Consequently the crowd did not gather, the grounds were in bad condition and the afternoon was bleak. We wish the grocers better fortune with the day of their second choice, Wednesday the 6th inst.

A TEMPTATION WHICH SHOULD BE RESISTED.

A merchant who starts out in business with a determination never to handle new brands of goods or novelties of any kind will certainly make little headway nowadays when eager competitors are availing themselves of every opportunity to extend their trade, but it is a question whether such a line of action is not wiser than that of dealers who cannot resist the temptation to substitute for old reliable brands less meritorious articles because they are a trifle lower in price and afford a bigger profit. The temptation is no doubt great in many cases, owing to the persistent efforts of the seductive salesman, whose "just as good" has become almost proverbial. Sometimes the difference between the two kinds of goods is very slight, but the tendency is invariably to kill trade, whenever inferior goods are substituted for articles that have given steady satisfaction. Serious damage has been caused to the business of many merchants by the mere substitution of goods of equal value to the brands inquired for, in cases where the substitution has been due to goods being sold out, and it is therefore obvious that where the motive is a desire to obtain a greater profit, the penalty must be paid in a loss of custom. Not the retailer only is met by this temptation and succumbs. Manufacturers are not above using inferior materials in order to undersell rivals and at the same time obtain better returns ; wholesalere are tempted to handle the cheaper because inferior brands for the same reasons ; but the chief odium for these deeds always falls upon the shoulders of the retail distributor, because he is supposed to stand as a protection to his patrons from the consequences of the chicanery of the higher branches of trade. Strange though it may appear to people not familiar with the mercantile business, there are undoubtedly more than a few retailers who have not sufficient knowledge of the goods handled by them to know whether their quality is up to standard, hence cannot easily distinguish between their merits and those of other goods that are slightly inferior. To such the price must be the criterion of merit, and if the new article or brand is offered at a materially lower price, the most prudent course will be to stick to the goods that have always given satisfaction to their trade, and not to meddle with novelties until they, the merchants, have acquired the requisite knowledge to be able to judge between the new and old goods. There is probably nothing more annoying to most consumers than the deception, innocent or otherwise, of dealers by which the former are persuaded into purchasing a brand on the plea that it is "just as good if not better" than some well tried article, only to find when it is put to the test that it is sadly wanting in important respects. There is not only the sense of being cheated, but the customer is subjected to more or less inconvenience, and it would be surprising if his or her indignation were not extreme and lasting.

SUCCESS.

Success is a big word, and one that may be variously defined. It means one thing to one man and another thing to another. In one walk of life its interpretation is entirely different from that in some other, and what is success from one point of view is almost failure from another. But there is this in common to all kinds of success, it comes as the result of effort. Whatever falls at one's feet, whatever is received by inheritance, whatever is natural endowment, or comes by bequest is not success, however much of good fortune there may be about it. Success is that which is striven for—that which comes as a victory to the warrior, or that which is as laurel on the poet's brow. To achieve success, therefore, effort must be put forth. Very generally it must be persistent aggressive persevering effort—that kind of effort that is so happily summed up in the little word "push." To be a prosperous merchant or manufacturer requires push. To be an acceptable clerk or bookkeeper requires push, and to be really useful in any walk of life, from the most exalted to the most common place requires push. "Push" is a word also with as many different shades of meaning as there are persons to whom it may be applied. It is wonderfully elastic, but in all its definitions there is this idea about it : To drive forward. Strength and energy of whatever kind the individual may possess, are to be used as he is able to use them and as circumstances permit, to drive something forward. Very generally this something is the work or duty in hand, or the business venture upon which he is engaged, or the social project he has in view. To be unsuccessful in this world—for failure may come however hard we may strive—commands pity, but to be without push is to be contemptible. When we want to say something extremely severe about a young man, when we want to condemn him unconditionally, when we want to convey the idea that he will never achieve success or be of any particular usefulness in the world anywhere, we say "He has no push about him." Without push, one floats with the tide, driven hither and thither by the wind and currents. He may get into port, but the chances are that if he does accidentally drift that way he will not be able to anchor so as to remain there. With push one is like a steamship, with full complement of machinery under the guidance of a captain ; the port is reached in spite of wind and tide, the anchor is cast and success is achieved and held.—The Office.

"DISJOINTED CAPABILITIES."

The Detroit Herald of Commerce has received a veritable lusus naturae in the shape of a trade newspaper (?) published at Fort Worth, Tex., under the startling title of Fort Worth Trade Review. If the generally recognized efficient representatives of the trade press of the country are not as yet in receipt of this comet-like disturber of their equable poise and assured equilibrium on terra firma, they may anticipate a regular mid-summer cyclone of extravagant diction and a heterogeneous concatenation of disjointed capabilities. The following paragraph in the issue of this remarkable emanation from Fort Worth, Tex., for July 5, 1890, seems strongly tinctured with a q. s. decoction of tangle-foot, fire-crackers, "and last, but not least" in the language of a departed barrister of most gracious memory, "Bombastes furioso bunkum," in an eulogistic tribute to one of its departed local celebrities : "He scoffed at the frivolity of excess; he frowned at the egotism of gain; he laughed at the wisdom of Mammon; he mocked the reasoning of aristocraoy; he frowned at perfidy; he acknowledged the superiority of labor; he extolled virtue; he hated vice; he loved the holy communion of his church; he loved Christ, and daily gave to the world his beneficial influence."

Fort Worth has truly a prophet (?) in its midst, who must, if he go on in this way, astonish the world and bring to that wonderful town its supreme ambition of excessive celebrity. This maudlin measurer of meaningless chaff and brazen impudence includes with his long bottled-up cacoethes scribendi in extravagant paragraph and senseless dribble an uncredited half-column editorial from the Detroit Herald of Commerce, and has the unmitigated cheek to send a copy of his filched and besotted inspirations to this office. Besides this, he makes up his announcement of purpose to represent the interests incident to his special province in trade journalism with the declaration of principles of the Detroit Herald of Commerce as defined in its initial issue. Brethern of the trade press, shall we admit this enemy into the ranks of the initiated, or shall we relegate him to Siberian exile to cool off? — Detroit Herald of Commerce.

An injunction was obtained on Monday by Mr. R. E. Kingford, solicitor, acting on behalf of a client threatened with the yellow poster scandal of the Retail Dealers Protective Union. This is the first kick in the courts, and a great deal of talk has been created about it. The objects of the associaton are well known and adequately described in their title. The injunction is returnable on August 5.

AN OFFICIAL BUTTER TEST.

The Department of Inland Revenue has just issued an interesting bulletin on butter. By the Act "to prohibit the manufacture and sale of certain substitutes for butter" (49 Victoria, chap. 42), assented to 2nd June, 1886, trade in oleomargarine or butterine was prohibited in the Dominion, and its importation for consumption made impossible. Nevertheless, it has been rumored that artificial butter was being manufactured in Canada and offered for sale in Ottawa, and on one occasion an offer was made to the department to give, for a consideration, such information as would lead to the detection of such illegal sales. In order to ascertain with certainty whether the law was being contravened, orders were issued by the commissioner about the beginning of March last for the collection and analysis of a large number of samples of butter. While obtaining these the inspectors made diligent enquiry for imported butters, but were unable to obtain a single sample. Among the 150 samples examined there are 33 to the quality of which exception has been taken, on account of rancidity or of a deficiency in butter fat. The latter defect is, in other words, an excessive percentage of water and salt. With reference to the former constituent, it varied from 19.70 to 3.84 per cent., the general average being 8.97.

Mr. Macfarlane, chief analyst, says these averages and the determination in the analyses are certainly not too high; for in the majority of cases water separates from the sample, with which it cannot again conveniently be incorporated. With reference to the quantity of salt present in these butters, the variation is almost as great as in the case of the water. The maximum percentage is 15.16, the mimimum 1 per cent. The following are the averages:

District of Nova Scotia	5.60
" New Brunswick	6.11
" Quebec	5.75
" Montreal	5.21
" Kingston	6.40
" Toronto	3.65
" Windsor	4.87
" Manitoba	3.58
General average	5.15

It is difficult to understand why such excessive quantities of salt should be used as 15 or 10 per cent. It may be intended in some cases to check incipient rancidity, but there are other samples in which the rancidity of the fat runs high while the salt averages about 5 per cent. The analyses prove the absence of foreign fat from the samples of butter analyzed, and plainly show that oleomargarine is not offered for sale in Canada.

In order to compare the results obtained in examining these pure butters with those yielded by oleomargarines, samples of the latter were obtained from the United States. The results ascertained give rise to some considerations which ought to interest the producers of butter in Canada, and which may with advantage be mentioned. Fresh grass butter possesses acidity of only 0.8°, whereas tub butter shows 6°, and during long and perhaps careless storage an extreme rancidity of 26.4 can be reached. On the other hand, the oleomargarines test only 1.4 to 1.7°, and are said to keep very well, and to have the advantage of butter in this respect. This, Mr. Macfarlane says, is no doubt owing to the care bestowed upon their manufacture in large and well-appointed factories. So long as Canadian butter continues to be made in small dairies there is not likely to be much improvement in quality. If the home market is to be supplied with a better article, and exportation is to be attempted, it will, without doubt, be found that this can only be done successfully by the adoption of a co-operative system of making butter in factories, such as now exclusively prevails in Denmark.

Indurated fibre ware has become a staple article of merchandise with all first-class grocers, as well as hardware merchants and stove dealers. The merchants throughout the Dominion as well as the United States find it to their advantage to recommend it as the best ware in use. The stove dealer finds it to his advantage to recommend the kettles and pans, as he finds his stove is less apt to warp when very hot than with a heavy iron kettle filled with water. Messrs. E. B. Eddy & Co., Hull, Que., are the sole owners of the patent for Canada, and are the only manufacturers of the ware in the Dominion. Messrs. H. A. Nelson & Sons, Toronto and Montreal, are their sales agents, and any communication sent to them or the manufacturers will meet with prompt attention. The prices to merchants will be found in the prices current of THE CANADIAN GROCER.

In the report of a fire which almost wiped out the village of Minden we see the names of two general merchants figuring as losers. Mr. A. B. H. Carl suffered a loss of $5,000 on his stock, which was insured for $2,000. Mr. E. Noice lost $10,000 on stock and building, the insurance on both amounting to $3,150. It is indeed regretful that after a man has steered clear of the rocks that lie so thick in the early course of a business man's career he should meet with so disastrous a thorn of fortune.

The monthly meeting of soap manufacturers was held at Woodstock last Friday for the discussion of matters connected with the trade. Those present were hospitably entertained by D. Richards & Co., who took them for a drive about the town, showing them the points of interest in that thriving place. There were present:—Messrs. Taylor, Dalton and Davidson of Toronto; Robt. Henry, Brantford; W. H. Judd, Hamilton; H. D. Long, London; Linton, Guelph; Elliott, Galt and D. Richards, Woodstock.

Bronte, Ont., July 23.—In Bronte on the 23rd ult., a fire broke out in the general store occupied and owned by Robert Joyce, consuming the contents and building. It originated in the store and was caused by the stove. The store and stock were fully insured in the Western Insurance Company.

A. C. Miller & Co., canners, Picton, Ont., have received some very flattering letters complimenting them on the perfect condition and excellence of their goods this year. The pack of strawberries was exceptionally good although much smaller than anticipated, and found ready sale at outside figures. They say the peas are perfect and all that could be desired in flavor and assorting. Mr. Miller thinks there will be no over production this year, and prices will be maintained.

The Lakeport Canning Co. reports great dissappointment at the result of the strawberry pack this year. At the beginning of the season the outlook was excellent. They expected to put up more than last year. The result however is less than four hundred cases this year, as against over eleven hundred last year.

An extraordinary meeting of the Executive Board of the C. T. Association of Canada was held in their rooms, Public Library building, on Wednesday, 2nd July, to consider the advisability of purchasing a valuable property on King street west, south side, between Yonge and Bay. The matter was thoroughly discussed and hois ed.

It appears from numerous letters of enquiry received at the Department that there are differences of opinion in the minds of customs officers as well as among dealers as to the rate of duty payable upon apricots. As this variety of fruit is not enumerated in the tariff it is officially announced that apricots are dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem.

A circular to the Executive Board of the C. T. Association of Canada was issued, calling a meeting for Friday, 11th inst., to consider the recommendation of the leasing of a certain property on Yonge street, near King, viz., the Central Bank building, and it is understood the Board has ratified the leasing of the property for ten years, with the option of purchase.

Mr. J. W. Tabor, Fredericton, N.B., dealer in groceries and provisions, looks back on a very successful business in the past nine years. At the beginning of that time he commenced the grocery business in Fredricton. Three years previous he came to the city with fifteen dollars in his pocket. He now owns a fine store and residence on Brunswick street. His sons are at present taking hold of the business, and from all appearances will make satisfactory successions in that line.

At the next meeting of the Philadelphi Retail Grocers' Association the series of debates which has been one of the most interesting features of the meetings will be continued. "Co-operative Buying" will be the subject and a number of shrewd and eloquent merchants have signified their intention to participate. Such debates must be of great value to the members, and other associations might with advantage copy this feature of the live Philadelphians.—Merchant's Review.

At a meeting of the Port Hope town council, last week, the proposition to assist a firm of cigar manufacturers with tax exemption and a financial grant yearly, providing they locate there and employ a certain number of men, was passed. A syndacate of ten residents of the town has been formed to purchase a suitable building to rent to the manufacturers, and the council agreed to guarantee to the syndicate six per cent on their investment as long as the manufacturers continued to employ the required number of men.

The increase of duty upon American lard imposed at the last session of the Dominion Parliament has had such an adverse effect upon the sale of the American product in Canada that the Fairbanks, of Chicago, have come to the conclusion that if they desire to retain their Canadian trade they must start a branch manufactory in this country. Accordingly premises have been leased in Griffintown, and are now undergoing extensive alterations, which will be soon completed in order to allow operations to be begun early in the fall.

GROCERIES.

Dealers have had little to complain of. There was a very fair section of the business current between the two ends of the past week. The trade of the week gains by comparison with that of the week before. Sugar buying, which was flat last week, was moderately active this week. A good steady demand for canned goods is also to be credited to the trade done between the 24th and the 31st. Dried fruit was in fair request, as was likewise tea. Payments are up to the average of promptness. Taken all in all, the week's grocery trade was rather satisfactory.

CANNED GOODS.

Fruits and vegetables are quiet with small sales at unchanged prices. Packers are not doing much business as they and their buyers are apart in their views. There are a good many strawberries still on the hands of some packers, but there are others who not only are completely sold out but are over sold. Values are nominally unchanged. The strength in salmon continues; stocks are rapidly running down; a 25 case lot of Horse shoe sold on street to-day at $1.65, and $1.70 was asked for small lots from retailers; medium to good brands sold at $1.50 to $1.60; new pack are on the way and are offered at $1.35 to arrive for good brands. Prices of lobsters are strong at $2.20 to $2.25 for "star" brand and at $2 to $2.10 for other. Mackerel steady at $1.55. Three cars of canned salmon arrived from British Columbia towards the end of last week, and it was reported that a big cut had been made in the selling prices. On Monday, however, Robert Ward & Co., telegraphed their Toronto agent: "A very short catch on the Fraser river; prospective failure." A similar report was received from the British American Packing Company a few days ago. Other packers have not yet been heard from. Should these reports of a prospective failure be verified handsome profits will be reaped by the local trade, who have bought freely at low prices. It must also be remembered that reports of this sort are usual at this time of the season. These reports checked the cutting movement.

The New York Bulletin says: The tendency of prices of canned corn towards a higher level continues unabated. and has the substantial support of an unusually good demand for this period of the year, besides that which may result from unfavorable crop reports received from various localities and more or less speculative action. State pack that has been sold for 75c per dozen within the past ten days does not appear to be obtainable now at less than 85c from first hands. In point of fact, bids of 85c are said to have been refused for new pack of certain brands for future delivery, and Philadelphia letters report that 85c was paid there. Tomatoes are in practically the same position as corn, reports from Delaware and Maryland stating that the weather continues very unfavorable for the growing crop, and those from other sections are not particularly bright. One Delaware packer is credited with having booked orders for 14,000 cases, and refused to take more orders at less than 80c net cash f. o. b. An offer of 82½c was said to have been refused for 5,000 cases new standart Jerseys, for future delivery. Baltimore brokers write that they are overrun with orders for spots and futures, and that very few packers will quote firm prices on the latter.

COFFEE.

The week's sales have been light, and prices have held firmly at the point reached in the last advance. New York letters say that the first arrivals of new Rio coffees will be sold at high prices. They are firmer abroad.

DRIED FRUIT.

Currants are now nearly in the same position as Valencia raisins have been in for some time, that is, they are almost as cheap here as in New York. At all events, New York staples cannot be laid down here at less than 5½c. Prunes are firm, with a fair enquiry; very few are offered; hogsheads are selling at 6c. Figs and dates dull and unchanged. Valencia raisins are offering at 7¾c. for ordinary off stalk to 8½c. for choice. Sultanas steady at 11½ to 12½c. The position of Valencia raisins in New York is disappointing to holders, as they expected that there would not be enough goods to go around before the new arrive, which will be in five or six weeks. The new crop of Malaga raisins is not expected to exceed that of last year, say 600,000 boxes. First shipments are expected to begin early in September. Owing to the neglect of the lower grade for shipment to America, it is thought that a large portion of such goods will find their way to England branded as two-crown black loose.

Bendelari & Co. in their fruit report issued last week say:—

Valencia raisins—Advices from Bordehore & Co. and Rafael Pon, Denia, report a continuation of conditions favorable to the growing crop, and low prices are expected to rule.

Malaga fruit—Mr. Casado in a letter received to-day informs us that crops in their district have been favored by the weather, and the outlook is for fruit of excellent quality this season.

Sultana raisins—C. Whitehall & Co. in a letter just received confirm previous estimate of this crop, viz., 10 to 15 per cent. less than last year's, which fell short of the crop of 1888 by 37 per cent.

Figs—Same shipper now estimates the crop at 50,000 loads, or 6,000 less than their estimate of ten days previous. Bad weather may further reduce this.

Currants—Crop is progressing well and will exceed that of last year. Moderate prices are expected.

Prunes—Mail and cable advices from J. & W. Liebman & Co., inform us of most unfavorable reports from Bosnia and Servia, but their opinion is that until the end of July it is too early to judge as to extent of shortage. They believe the crop will be a very short one, but say allowance must be made on all estimates from producing districts.

It is reported, on very good authority, that the first steamer of the season with raisins will leave Denia between the 6th and the 12th of August.—New York Bulletin.

NUTS.

Business is on the wane rather than up to the low activity it has been heretofore reported at. Brazils and filberts are scarce, while the outside demand is strong enough to stiffen prices at points of production.

RICE AND SPICES.

A fair trade with no change in prices is all that can be said about this market. But any one who should go on the market now with a big order would find the prices of importers very stiff.

SUGAR.

The price of granulated has undergone no change here, holding at 6⅞c. for quantities of 15 barrels or over, and 7c. for quantities below 15 barrels. The lowest grade of brown is easier than it was a week ago, now selling for 5¼ to 5⅜c. Yellows run up from 5⅜ to 6¼c., but the stock of extra bright refined is run very low. It is doubtful if there is a ton of it in the warehouses at the moment of writing. The demand for this sort has lately been rather active, and to that fact must be attributed the lowness of stock in it. The Canadian sugar market appears to be weaker than outside markets, no doubt because of the shortage in the fruit crop. Recent private cables report the English market up 3d on sugars, and New York reports are strong. Stocks in retailers hands are now large, and they are buying in small quantities. The question of the strength of prices depends upon the growing beet crop. Expert observers have come to no conclusion about the beet prospects. Also our refiners may have underestimated the lasting capacity of the quantity sold in the winter and spring. If so, and their stock now is to be clogged on its way to trade by a fairly good supply in retail stores, and by the slackened demand consequent upon a poor fruit yield, the market may grow weaker, independently of any contrary movement outside.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

In syrups and molasses there is very little business doing, and prices are a shade easier. The sale of a large lot of syrups is reported, but the price is "p.t." There appears to be no D or M Redpath in stock.

TEAS.

There has been a good demand from retailers for low grade teas of all kinds up to 18c., which are scarce. Mediums are also in light supply. A good trade has been done with jobbers in Japans, and anything up to 19c. has found a ready sale. Fourths, thirds and seconds Young Hysons are scarce and in demand. A cable quotes exchange higher at 3s. 8d. against 3s. 2d. These figures mean that buyers have to pay about 96c. for teas they bought a year ago at 75c. The American markets are almost bare of Young Hysons, and there is nothing to arrive until September. A New York letter says: "All business in Young Hysons has been stopped owing to the advance in freights." Cables report that some green teas have been bought in Shanghai costing as much as 25 per cent. more than the prices of the same teas sold for in New York last season. London mail advices of July 17 say that greens are very scarce there, and as they have had no news yet from China of any probable opening dates of shipment from China they think a sharp rise quite probable. The total shipment of teas from Shanghai to the United States and Canada from May 31st to date were 1,542,300 lbs. all blacks, against 4,145,700 lbs. same time last year, made up of 1,844,000 lbs. blacks and 2,301,700 greens. In Indian teas there is not much to report. The demand is very quiet but steadily improving. From London there is no change. Teas with quality have maintained their value, and advices from India speak of improving quality. The market in Calcutta is high, and exchange has reached 1s. 7⅝d. A few weeks ago the value of the rupee was only 1s. 5d., which puts the price up and tends further to harden prices. The quantity of Ceylon teas offered was very limited and no change in prices to report.

PETROLEUM.

The advance of crude oil has forced up the prices of certain brands of refined. Canadian is ½c. to 1c. dearer, and Carbon Safety is higher by ½c. The price of crude is expected to go farther before next report, and may be followed by a general advance in refined. Trade is quiet.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

A quiet trade has been done this week at steady prices. The drug business is but little affected by crops. Quotations are unchanged.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The stock of old butter that was not disposed in spring of by our commission men appears to be waiting for waning chances. There is no call for large quantities, and but for transactions in small lots. There would be no trouble in making up a carload now at 5c. Some of the old butter that had been selected in the buying is still held against low bids, the holders believing 8c. a sufficiently low figure. New tubs are coming in quite freely, as are also pails and crocks. The butter they bring in the market is worth 12½ to 14c. It is very fair butter, taken all around, but below the average quality of what was marketed a few weeks ago. Its keeping qualities are not as good as in former years, when the herbage was less rank. There are a few large rolls brought in from time to time. They are 12 to 13c. There is little advantage to the dealer in handling them now, as they usually contain weights that need to be encased to protect the butter from the hot weather. Pound rolls are in fair supply at 16 to 18c. There is a very good demand for deserving butter put up in this form. Creamery tub is 18 to 20c. and rolls are 20 to 22c. A considerable amount of all classes appeared on this week's market.

Cheese is in very good demand and in ample supply at 9 to 9½c. This price is not very firm.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—As has been the case for some time there is no heavy buying, although inquiries warrant the belief that the market will outlast the stock. Prices run from $1.55 to $1.75.

DRIED APPLES—Are scarce and higher. They run from 5 to 6c. The market will soon be bare.

EGGS—The collections that have been made and are making throughout the country for the American market are bringing up the price. The supply that reaches Toronto dealers is below the local demand, so that the higher prices are also firm. They are 15½ to 16c.

HAY—Is down to $9 and $9.50 with a light trade.

HIDES—Cured are now 6¼c. There are no green steers' now to be had, and cows' are worth 6½c. for No. 1. The lower grades of cows' decline 1c. for each grade below the highest, and go at 5½ to 4½c. for No. 2 and No. 3 respectively.

HONEY—The reports are unanimous in declaring the present run an extraordinary one. If the fine weather continues there will be gathered the largest stock we have had for years. In the meantime the '89 honey is in low demand at the old prices, 9 to 12c. for clear, and 14 to 18c. for comb. It is expected that there will be a large consumption of honey in the coming year on account of the prospects of its being so plentiful and on account of the scarcity of fruit.

HOPS—Are 12 to 14c. for '89 grown, and 8 to 12c. for yearlings.

OATS—There is a good demand at higher and firm prices. They are now worth 49c. laid down here in car loads. Receipts are far from liberal.

POTATOES—The old crop has been marketed and mostly consumed. They are no longer quotable. The new potatoes are coming in quite freely, and have got down to prices that shut off American competition. The crop is now far enough on to supply the home demand. They are $2.75 to $3 per barrel. There is a good demand.

POULTRY—Ducks are 55 to 65c., and chickens are 50 to 60c. All that come on the market find ready purchasers.

SKINS—Pelts are 40c., lambskins 60c., No. 1 calf is 8c., and No. 2 calf is 6c.

STRAW—Is now scarcely saleable at $5.

TALLOW—Is unchanged at 2c. for rough and 5½c. for rendered.

WOOL—All that come is readily taken at 21c.

FISH.

The request for fish this week is not so good as the preceding weeks. Trout is beginning to be scarce now. They will be more plentiful towards fall, as they run in upon the shore, which makes them easier caught. White fish are reported to be more plentiful than trout. British Columbia salmon is in very fair demand. The daily supply consists of a very good quality, mostly all being large. The local fish dealers cannot get as large a supply of British Columbia salmon as they would wish, the canners using nearly all that are caught for canning. It is also reported that the catch this year up to date is behind last year. Lake herring is rather scarce at present with a fair demand. Pickerel is reported to be in better demand Towards the end of the week the sales have improved. The following are the prices: Trout 6c., white fish 5½ to 6c., British Columbia salmon 14c., lake herrings $1.75 per hundred, pickerel 5c.

GREEN FRUIT.

For oranges there is a listless market. The coming in of the firmer seasonable fruit is engaging the consumption of the people. Oranges are also in poor supply, only Sorrento stock being now on the market. It is worth $6.50. Lemons are selling well and have advanced, 360's being worth $6, and 300's worth $6.50. Bananas are in reduced demand, from the same causes as have worked against the consumption of oranges. Bananas are $1.75 to $2 for fine bunches, and $1.25 to $1.50 for ordinary.

PROVISIONS.

Trade was quieter this week than any other week of the past portion of the summer. Nevertheless there was a good deal of smoked meat sold. Long clear was quiet, and the trade in barrel pork was low. The long receipts were small but prices were good. No large sales are reported.

BACON—Long clear is 8½ to 9c. Bellies are 11½ to 12c. Backs are 11 to 11½c. Roll is 10c.

DRESSED HOGS—Are $6.50 to $6.75.

HAMS—Smoked are firm at 12½c. Sweet pickled are 11c.

LARD—Is 10c. in 20 lb. packages, and 9c. in 50 lb. pails.

MESS PORK—Is $15 for heavy and $16.50 to $17. for family.

SALT.

The demand is very fair this week with a few alterations in prices. The sales reported by the Toronto salt works are 1 car sack at 72c.; 1 car dairy at $1.25; small quantities sell at $1.50 to $1.55 for bbls.; 80 to 85c. for sacks, and 50 to 55c. for ¼ sacks.

DRY GOODS.

The past week has been unlike its predessors. Its contents in the way of business in dry goods houses have been far beyond those of any former week for many months, one wholesale man says for many years. The trade in staples has been especially good. We are now in the midst of the crop-gathering, and the result is seen in the greater confidence of the people and the trade. Prices have not been weak in any line.

MONTREAL

MONTREAL MARKETS.

JULY 31, 1890.

GROCERIES.

The market has been featureless the past week, the only movement noticeable was in molasses and currants.

The crop prospects in the North-West are magnificent, and in Ontario equally as good.

SUGAR.

There has been a better demand for sugar the past week, still the market is dull. Yellows are a shade easier, and we quote 5⅛ to 6c.; granulated, 6¾ to 7c. In New York the market is up 1-16c.

MOLASSES.

We note a more active demand for molasses. Holders are not at all anxious to sell. There are no new arrivals as yet. Quotations are 34 to 34½c. These prices are shaded. Advices from Barbadoes, dated 18th July, say that the crop is about closed, buyers offering 14c. On this market the cargoes of the three vessels noted in our last has been sold except one, which goes to store.

DRIED FRUIT.

This market usually at this time of the year is very quiet. There has been some activity in currants which are very scarce, in fact the market as far as can be seen is almost bare. Vostizzias are quoted at 6¾ to 7c. The near approach of the new crop has eased the market on Valencia raisins, but although prices have not changed our quotation of last week will be shaded. Eleme raisins are offering at 7¾ to 8c.

CANNED GOODS.

There is no movement whatever in canned goods, and we have no change whatever to note except the firmness of the salmon market. The demand this season has been good. Several new brands offered at a low figure had the effect of weakening the market, but during the last couple of days it has become very firm as advices from Fraser River and other places state that the catch has been a failure. One house here went to San Francisco for 1,000 cases "Lynx" brand and received the following answer :—"Catch on Fraser River complete failure." B. A. salmon is quoted here at $1.45.

Gaspe dry Codfish is meeting with a large sale. The Company prepare their Codfish specially for the Canadians, and buyers speak highly of its keeping qualities. Some 200 cwt. placed at 4 75 per cwt. here and in the west. The same Company offer cases of Codfish at 4.75, and large orders are now coming to hand for Mackeral. We quote at at 5¼. Lobsters continue in good demand and we quote sales this day of some 200 at 7.25 to 7.50 per case.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

GRAIN.—The market remains quiet but steady. Values are unchanged. We quote as follows :—Wheat, No. 1 hard Manitoba, $1.14 to $1.16, No. 2, $1.12 to $1.13; peas, per 66 pounds in store, 00 to 77½c. peas, afloat, July delivery, 00 to 70c.; Quebec oats, 00 to 00; Ontario oats, 41 to 42c. ; corn, duty paid, 00 to 55c ; corn, cargoes in bond, 41 to 43; barley, feeding 00 to 40; barley, good malting, 52c.

FLOUR. — The market was firm to-day, with an active local demand. 8,600 sacks Strong Bakers sold at $5.25; 1,120 at $5.55; We quote Patent winter, $5.25 to $5.50 ; patent spring, $5.45 to $5.55; straight roller, $4.80 to $5.00; extra, $4.40 to $4.65; superfine, $4.00 to $4.50; fine, $3.25 to $3.90; city strong bakers, $0.00 to $5.25; strong bakers, $0.00 to $5.25; superfine, bags, $1.50 to $2.00; extra, bags, $2.20 to $2.30; fine, bags, $1.50 to $2.00; oatmeal, standard, per bag $2.25 to $2.35; oatmeal, granulated, $2.40 to $2.50; oatmeal, rolled, $2.40 to $2.50.

Eggs are firm at 14½c. to 15c. per doz.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.—Butter is dull and easy. Creamery, quoted at 16 to 17½c.; Townships 13 to 16c.; Morrisburg, Brockville, 13 to 14c.; Western, 12 to 13c. Cheese is firmer. Finest white and colored, are quoted at 8¼ to 8⅜c.; medium, 7¾ to 8⅛c.

MONTREAL NOTES.

Mr. A. D. Turner, of Turner, Rose & Co., is spending a few weeks at Gaspe.

A very general change took place Tuesday, in the personnel of the wholesale grocery firm of Turner, Rose & Company. Notice was filed in the Court this morning that the firm of A. D. Turner and J. C. Rose, of this city, were general partners, and the estate of the late Hon. James Turner, of Hamilton, Ont., were special partners, has been dissolved, and the business will be continued under the old style of Messrs. Alex. D. Turner, J. C. Rose and W. Stirling Laflamme, all of this city.

Riviere du Loup, Que., July 23.—At 2.30 a. m. on the 23rd ult., fire was discovered in Talbot & Girard's general store Frayerville, P. O. At 3 o'clock the whole building was a mass of flames and at 5 o'clock it was in ashes. Although the pumps worked well and water was plentiful, nothing could be saved from the store, but the firemen succeeded in saving the outbuildings and contents with little damage. Loss, about $30,000 on stock; insured for $20,000. Loss on building, $10,000; insured for $5,000. Mr. Gauvin had some furniture and furs in the building, which were also destroyed. He has an insurance of $500 on them.

Several days ago Mr. Isidore Bernadin, a general merchant of Buckingham, Que., notified the police that an unknown party had broken into his place of business and stolen some articles which could be easily identified. The other evening a man named William Scott was arrested by Constable Ferry on William street Montreal, for being drunk and exposing firearms a little too freely. When searched Scott was found to be the possessor of several articles stolen from the Buckingham store. The authorities consider that they have made a good capture, as Scott has already served terms in the penitentiary under the name of Wilson and McFarlane. The accused was remanded for additional proof.

Mr. W. H. Arnton, Auctioneer, made an official abandonment of his estate Tuesday, with liabilies of $27,000. The principal creditors are the Inland Revenue $8,000, and W. Arnton $4,000. D. Nightingale $700 ; J. R. Barclay, $500 ; J. R. Hutchins, $475 ; J. C. McLaren Belting Co., $1015 ; W. T. Costigan, $567 ; William Scott and Sons, $1,158 ; William Evans, $560 ; Estate of late Alfred Brown, $29 ; Mrs. Lonsdale, $553 ; Mrs. Marcelot, $500 ; The Gazette Printing Compuny $487 ; R. K. Thomas $459. There are seventy creditors altogether. The prothonotary attended this afternoon attended at Miss Gee's hospital and got the abandonment, Messrs. Caldwell, Tait and Wilks were appointed provisional guardians. The assets are $6,000.

THE EDITORIAL IS LIBELLOUS.

In a leading article headed "The Posters are Libellous," the Toronto Evening News of Tuesday makes a libellous statement about the Retail Grocers' Association. This body, it alleges, "has adopted the questionable method of advertising by way of posters those who run bills and will not pay them." It hasn't. This thing is said to have been done, and legal proceedings are said to have been taken to restrain the concern accused of it from doing it in the case of a particular debtor. But the alleged offender is a private collecting agency having nothing to do with the Retail Grocers' Association. There is nothing of resemblance in the name of the Association and that of the collecting agency which should confuse the two bodies in the mind of anybody. Neither is there anything in common in their methods of collecting long-standing debts. Further, the nature of the case which the debtor is reported to be prosecuting against the agency shows that it was not a grocers' account that was threatened to be exposed. It was a plumber's. As a matter of news surely some one of these three facts was known to the newspaper which published the article referred to. The News speaks of the wrong that might be done to worthy persons by advertising their indebtedness. It should consider the wrong it has done to an association of worthy persons, and make haste to repair the injury.

SELF WRINGING MOPS.

In calling the attention of our patrons to this heading, in connection with advertisement, which appears in another column, we wish to say that in these days when people of means reared in comparitive ease often find it impracticeable to obtain domestic help, every device that promises to lighten the work devolving upon the ladies of the family finds warm appreciation.

The Self Wringing Mop is just one of those contrivances which is particularly acceptable to persons of refinement, compelled by special circumstances to perform offices generally associated in the mind with the word "drudgery." To ladies who properly object to handle a filthy rag, it will be interesting to learn how a kitchen, oil cloth or verandah can be scrubbed and dried without the least occasion to go down on the knees or to handle a greasy rag. Being strongly constructed of the best materials, steel wire and malleable castings. The Self Wringing Mop will stand a racket for twenty years.

We are told by the Messrs. Tarbox Bros. who manufacture these mops—with other special lines of household goods—that the demand has been so great that they have been able to rearrange their prices so that a large percentage is made by the retailers in selling the mop, complete, with the special cloth at 50 cents ; without the cloth—as any old garment can be used in its stead—it can be sold at less. We are persuaded that this is bound to become a standard article of trade, judging from home appearances. The mop is on sale in nearly every store carrying that class of goods in Toronto, and the manufacturers state that many have repeated their order, as many as three times since June 1st.

EXAMINING EGGS.

An hour with an expert in a curious but profitable business—some peculiar trade secrets. It was a room about 10x10 feet, without windows, and with only one door. The walls, ceiling and floor were painted black, and the funeral gloom seemed deeper and blacker under the rays of a single gas jet of many candle power.

Seated in front of the gas jet, and so close that he could touch the flame easily with his extended hands, was a smooth-faced, medium-sized man, whose grey eyes had a preternatural pupil dilation, like those of a cat. On either side of him was a box, half filled with eggs, while he was engaged in shifting from one box to the other.

Taking five in his left hand and three in his right he juggled the lot before the light, shifting the eggs from the top to the bottom of his hand with astonishing rapidity. For a moment each egg was brought to the level of his dilated eyes, which were directly opposite the gas jet, and did not blink in the powerful light. As the eggs were thus held each was skilfully turned, until every portion of the shell was critically inspected.

"Yes," said he, "I am an egg-tester, and the process you have just witnessed is what we call 'candling' eggs. Formerly a candle was used, but it is not as satisfactory as gas. The burner we use is made specially for the purpose and gives a very powerful light. We have tried electricity, but it doesn't work. Every egg that comes into the establishment passes through my hands. The lot that I have just examined contains an unusually large number of what are known to the trade as 'floaters.' You will notice, if you hold the egg between your eyes and the light, a dark, almost black, substance close to the shell. It is caused by allowing the egg to lie too long on one side."

"In the spring and summer we get a great many 'swimmers,' or half-hatched eggs. They have been under the hen two or three days."

"When we receive more eggs than we have a market for, we store them for future use in an air tight room, which is kept at a uniform temperature of 35 degrees. They are packed in flour barrels, in oats that are extra cleaned. In the bottom of the barrel we put two or three inches of clean hay, then a couple of inches of oats, on which we put a layer of eggs, with the flat side down. Between each layer are oats, and on the top of the filled barrel we put more hay. The barrels are placed on their sides, and they will keep in that condition for eighteen months, perfectly fresh and good."

"Sometimes we wax eggs, to preserve them, but this gives the shell a glossy appearance that injures their sale. In this process beeswax is melted, and when very warm the eggs are dipped into it and the pores of the eggs are thus stopped up. There are also liming and pickling as means of preservation. The shell of a limed egg is always rough, while that of a pickled egg is smooth. If you examine the latter before a gas jet the white looks watery, and if broken and eaten the albumen will taste salty. You cant boil either a limed or pickled egg. Both lime and pickle eat into the shell, and make it very thin and fragile. When you put them into hot water the shell cracks open and the albumen oozes out."

"What do you do with the bad eggs?"

"If they are too utterly bad we throw them away; ones that are a little 'off' bring three cents a dozen."

"To what possible use can those eggs be put?"

"The yolks are used by morocco finishers in their business.

"And the whites?"

"You'll be surprised if I tell you that confectioners use them in making fancy cakes. They can't use a musty egg, though. A frosted egg becomes watery and cracks. The cracks close, though, when it is thawed out, and will open again when it is placed in boiling water. An egg that is six or nine months old is graded by dealers as fresh. Cracked eggs bring two-thirds price."—N. E. Grocer.

We regret to notice that Mr. T. S. Corrigan, grocer, Yonge street, Toronto, also of Port Perry, is in financial difficulties. He is an energetic business man with more than average ability and should have been suceessful. Even the best men fail, however. His trouble is the result of extending his business too much.

The Toronto Pedlars' Association held a well-attended meeting in Richmond hall on the evening of the 23rd ult., when ten new members were admitted. President Pocock was in the chair. A resolution condemning the delinquency and unfairness of the license inspector was adopted, and also condemning the delinquency of the police magistrate and other police officers in the recent pedlars' trials. The Association is said to have spies on the watch, and as a result have secured summonses against grocers for violation of the by-law in combining canvassing for orders and the selling of fruit.

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday s yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

JOHN BAKER EDWARDS, P.L.D., D.C.L., F.C.S.,

Public Analyst for the District of Montreal, and Professor of Chemistry.

CHEMICAL LABORATORY, MEDICAL FACULTY, McGILL UNIVERSITY.

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Company:

GENTLEMEN,—I have taken and tested a sample of your "EXTRA GRANULATED" Sugar, and find that it yielded 99·88 per cent. of Pure Sugar It is practically as pure and good a Sugar as can be manufactured.

Yours truly,

G. P. GIRDWOOD.

Armstrong, general and lumber dealers, of McKellar, was held at the Walker house last week, and a proposition to compromise at 40 cents on the dollar, with equalized payments in four, eight, twelve and sixteen months, with interest at 7 per cent., the three latter to be secured by William Beatty, Henry Armstrong and R. B. Armstrong, was unanimously accepted. Messrs. William Beatty, of Parry Sound, and Fred. Kennedy and J. W. Laing, of this city were named as inspectors. The statement presented placed the liabilities at about $15,000 and the assets at $13,800. The latter are made up of personal assets of $8,800, and an estimated interest in real estate of $5,000.

HECK'S COLUMN.

The trade of Winnipeg is in proportion as good as that of any other city in the Dominion, but, unlike other cities, it has not the country trade to fall back on. The land for twenty miles around is held by mortgage or investment companies, thus preventing farmers from cultivating it. The soil is heavy, dark and rich, but being held at such a high price, it is impossible for any to attempt to settle just now. The crops are at their best, in fact there never was known such prospects for a rich harvest in the West. The greatest yield was some few years ago and amounted to some 12,000,000 bushels. Since then more land is under cultivation, more people are in the country, and it is expected that this year's yield, will be close on to 20,000,000 bushels. That will mean money in the country, so that while to-day things are moving quietly, to-morrow we expect a rush. If the land is worked there is profit for the worker from here westward there is plenty of land. The city is growing steadily, it has some very fine stores, the largest of which is the Hudson's Bay Company's, situated on Main street, which is well worthy of a visit. Some eighteen or twenty different railroads run trains into the city thus making it easy of access for the travelling public.

"HECK."

SHODDY.

In view of the complaints recently made to the Minister of Customs by manufacturers that at certain ports shoddy, under the name of nails, wool waste, etc., is being allowed to enter duty free, and numbers of samples received at the department for examination show the charge to be well founded, collectors of customs have, therefore, been cautioned against permitting this evasion of the tariff. Shoddy is a non-enumerated article, dutiable at 20 per cent., and after being combed and dressed is sometimes not easily distinguished from wool waste, and requires very careful examination.

The Inland Revenue Department has recently issued a bulletin of about thirty pages which is devoted exclusively to the subject of baking powder and which shows that the majority of the goods in the market are adulterated and unfit for use. Prof. A. McGill, who has had charge of this important work for the Government, says that "imperial baking powder is an excellent baking powder." A word to the sensible housekeeper should be sufficient.

THE CANADIAN GROCER PRICES CURRENT.

TORONTO, July 31, 1890.

This list is corrected every Thursday. The prices are solicited for publication, and are for such qualities and quantities as are usually ordered by retail dealers on the usual terms of credit.

Goods in large lots and for prompt pay are generally obtainable at lower prices.

All quotations in this department are under the direct control of the Editor, and are not paid for or doctored by any manufacturing or jobbing house unless given under their name; the right being reserved to exclude such firms as do not furnish reliable information.

IMPOSSIBLE!
So say Doctors, to say too much in favour of St. Leon Water. It puts down Bright's Disease and Diabetes, as water quenches fire. Cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, etc., completely if drank freely and rubbed in the skin.

SILVER STAR STOVE PASTE.
The following is the universal verdict of all who have used or sold it:
HAMILTON, APRIL 25th, 1890.
Messrs F. F. DALLEY & Co.,
GENTLEMEN:—In thus ordering a fresh supply of your SILVER STAR STOVE PASTE we cannot but express our appreciation of the goods and congratulate you on having been able to place on the market an article so superior in every respect to anything we have heretofore been able to get.
As we use it on the stoves in the wareroom, we know personally its good qualities—no dust, a quick polish, always ready and the work is done in the time it would take to prepare the Dome or other hard stove polishes, and one of the best features about it is that it is so clean to handle.
If a man sells us an inferior article we don't forget to tell him about it, and on the same principle when a firm gives us an Extra good one we believe in letting them know that we appreciate it.
We remain,
Respectfully yours,
J. WALLACE & SON.

SOLUS. SOLE PRESERVER
Will preserve the soles of boots or shoes, and render them perfectly waterproof. One application to a pair of new shoes will double their wearing qualities.
Two-sized tins, 15 and 25 cents. Will cost you $1.20 and $2.00 per dozen.
We also manufacture the best line of Wigwam Slippers, and Lumberman's Oil Tanned foot wear in Canada

BEST SOAP

Which has a world-wide reputation of being the best lard soap made; noted for its PURITY and QUALITY. Hundreds of Soap Manufacturers have tried for years to imitate and discover the process by which it is made—but all have met with signal failure. No soap ever made has the same Washing Powers. Millions of families, mechanics, railroad engineers, railroad men will attest to this fact.

ST. LAWRENCE CANALS.

RAPIDE PLAT DIVISION.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for the St. Lawrence Canals," will be received at this office until the arrival of the eastern and western mails on Wednesday, the 23rd day of July next, for the construction of a lift lock, weirs, etc., at Morrisburg, and the deepening and enlargement of the Rapide Plat Canal. The work will be divided into three sections, each about a mile in length.

A map of the locality, together with plans and specifications of the respective works, can be seen on and after Wednesday the 9th day of July next, at this office, and at the Resident Engineer's Office, Morrisburg, where printed forms of tender can be obtained.

In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender, the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of the same, and further, an accepted cheque on a chartered bank in Canada for the sum of $6,000, must accompany the tender for Section No. 1, and an accepted cheque on a chartered bank in Canada, for the sum of $2,000 for each of the other sections.

The respective accepted cheques must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the works at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted. The cheques thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

This Department does not however, bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
A. P. BRADLEY,
Secretary.

SPECIAL TO OUR READERS.

As the design of THE CANADIAN GROCER is to benefit mutually all interested in the business, we would request all parties ordering goods or making purchases of any description from houses advertising with us to mention in their letter that such advertisement was noticed in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

OUR MONTREAL OFFICE.

Our Montreal Office is located at 115 St. Francois Xavier St. Our representative, Mr. Hugh C. McLean, will be pleased to have subscribers and advertisers call upon him there. He will also pay special attention to gathering business items and attending generally to the interests of this paper.

Changes in advertisements and new advertisements must reach this office not later than Wednesday morning of each week.

SHOPKEEPERS' HOURS.

In the Early Closing Act the storekeepers of this province have as much legal recourse against the hardships of night trade as is consistent with the liberty of the subject. The local option principle is the only one that could be applied to the regulation of the business of proprietors, when that business is not under the control of the state, as the trade in liquor, for example. Sumptuary legislation is also well enough for the protection of children, and is provided in the Factories Act. But trade is free, and any law regulating it should be based on the free choice of those whose conduct is to be controlled by it. The Early Closing Act is thus based. A vote of three-fourths of the traders in the municipality, signified in favor of closing regularly at a particular hour, suffices to make that the lawful hour of closing, provided the vote is submitted to the council in the form of a list of signatures affixed to a petition, praying that the hour of closing may be the one specified as agreed upon by the dealers. In such a measure there is only the legal compulsion that theoretically should always be obtainable against a man for the enforcement of a moral responsibility. The moral responsibility may be formally assumed by barely three-fourths of the traders, but this is sufficient to represent the moral sense of the municipality, and to make the will of that three-fourths morally binding on the remaining one-fourth. It is the legal binding that was long wanting. Communities of dealers have time and again voluntarily undertaken to maintain an early closing agreement. and the great number of transgressions of such a self-imposed rule had almost demonstrated the impracticability of it when the Early Closing Act became law. That Act did not create early closing agreements. It simply recognized them, as they were numerous before, and gave validity to them in certain circumstances of majority and municipal authorization.

Yet this measure seems to be found irksome, and there seem to be fewer pretences of early closing sentiment than there were when there was no security for the establishing of the custom. The reason appears to be that the supporters of early closing have now to enter into the adoption of it in good faith. Members of a movement for it cannot feel that they are at legal liberty to withdraw from the compact to limit business hours, whenever its restrictions gall them. It almost seems that formerly the prospect of violating an agreement that was simply based on honor was premeditated without horror by some men at the time of signing, for when the chance of so shuffling off their engagement no longer exists they more usually decline entering into the engagement. One thing we know, and that is that formerly there was but little coherence in an agreement to close at a particular hour, and there were plenty of agreements. Now there must be coherence in the agreements, and there are fewer of them.

England, as in some other respects, is behind us in this one. She is but now considering legislation for the shortening of storekeepers' days. The legislation proposed in both bills having this end in view, look at the question from the shop-assistants' standpoint, and thus aim at the protection of the subject, as represented by the assistant, after English law has so long refrained from any interference with the liberty of the subject as represented hy the employer. These attempts to shorten business hours are philanthropic, as the Act for punishing cruelty to animals, and it therefore overrides the employers' right to oppress anybody, or the employee's liberty to make a slave of himself. Sir John Lubbock's bill appears to be the one most likely to pass.

Traders in every village, town and city should pull together to have a by-law fixing an early closing hour. There is nothing gained by making a day's trade long-drawn out when it can be condensed. The volume of buying is just so large, and it can as well be kept between the boundaries of 7 a.m. and 6 p.m., as between those of 7 a.m. and 11 p.m. Clerks as well as employers need rest. Their physical, intellectual, moral and social health demand it. He who has a fair measure of recreation is a better man in every way, other things being equal, than the man who simply works, eats and sleeps. His chances of prosperity are better. The employer who earnestly goes in for a working-day of reasonable length is following his own interests and is philanthropic.

MINIMIZED INSURANCE CLAIMS.

Insurance plays a very important part in the business of to-day. The wholesaler gives credit to the man who keeps his store and stock insured, with greater confidence than to him of equal financial strength who carries no insurance. An insurance policy is an asset. Goods sent to a store covered by one are in some degree like goods in a bonded warehouse. Some measure of the value of them is conditionally recoverable in case of fire. Insurance is therefore desirable as a promoter of business. There is a large amount of business done to-day that would not be done if insurance did not give some security for the safety of it. But faith in the honesty of insurers has been weakened in some quarters, and solely on account of the conduct of certain companies. These make it a rule to evade as much as possible of the loss that has been suffered by country dealers. They employ men to investigate the claims, apparently upon the strength of their ability to browbeat policy holders into a settlement that is advantageous to the company. The representative of the company is often either a wary diplomat or a bull-dozer, who uses his special capabilities to reduce the loser's claim to an amount that is far below the extent of the reality of the loss. There are other expedients besides those in the resources of the character of the man who makes the overtures for settlement. There are technicalities, legal omissions, etc., which are in the policy application, that are as so many snares for the undoing of the retailer. That application is usually filled in by the agent who solicits the trader to insure. Those agents stick to the retailer until they usually get an application from him. The application is made in a form supplied by the agent. That form is also generally filled in by the agent. Not unusually the agent insists in filling it in. Very often the applicant desires the agent to do it. Any errors in it are therefore made by the agent. When the time comes to send in a statement. of claim based on the policy that has been issued in response to such application, what often happens? The claim is disputed, because of some catch in the application. The policy holder may declare that the agent, the company's representative, made the slip. He is answered that the person who filled in the application, was in that act not the agent of the company, but of the applicant. It would pay the applicant for insurance, when he is not well versed in business of this sort, to have the form examined by a lawyer, and filled in so as not to leave any openings for protests.

But it would pay the applicant better not to do business with any company that has a reputation of meeting claims by such scaly devices. A company that has entered into a contract to protect a man against loss from fire either will carry out its agreement or will shirk as much of its obligation as possible. With the latter class of company nobody has any business to have dealings. Certain mutual companies are especially charged with quibbling, protesting and virtually intimidating claimants who have conscientiously and literally observed every condition imposed by the policy, and have made no excessive appraisement of their loss.

What will be the upshot of this mode of doing business? It will be either that all companies will settle down to reputable methods of adjusting claims, or that all business will settle down to the companies that are now assuredly first-class. There are plenty of these companies which honorably pay every just claim. There are men who make it a point to keep posted in the record of every insurance company. These are the wholesale dealers, and manufacturers who do business with retailers. Insurance of the right sort has become so important a safeguard of the interests of these men that they keep constantly on the watch to learn of anything that will impair their confidence in a company. They have their lists of the sheep and the goats, the worthy and the unworthy. Consequently, when a dealer finds his application for credit is rejected, in spite of his being insured for a large amount, he may find some explanation of the matter in the status of the company he is insured in. Insurance to be serviceable to a man in these days must be not only adequate protection against fire loss, but must also be a good prospective asset and basis of credit. From both these points of view the dealer should look into the insurance question, and should choose according to his convictions, not according to the persuasive loquacity of any agent. Wholesalers in the end are likely to be the arbitrators who shall decide what companies are to do the business.

HOLIDAY HOTEL CHARGES.

The wholesale trade in this city should use its influence on holidays and special occasions to prevent the excess of greed from getting the upper hand among the hotel keepers. These useful members of the community have been on several public occasions rather overcome by the temptation to make money out of the crowd. The late summer carnival illustrates this. Several dealers throughout the country came to the city then with the view of combining business and pleasure. They found that while the railway companies reduced their rates because of the largeness of the crowd, the hotel-keepers and some large restaurateurs raised their rates on the same account. The crowd was here. It had to be fed during the day and housed at night. The visitors were therefore at the mercy of their hosts, and if these chose to be extortionate they might. They chose to be so, and with a very few honorable exceptions they doubled their usual charges. This must have a bad effect upon the prosperity of the city. It must go far towards making the place unpopular on big days and will consequently tend to make such days less of a success. For men who come here to do business will prefer some other day, and as the popularity of a place is identified with that often of individual establishments in it, the latter are apt to suffer in business favor. If the hotels do their part to prepossess the outside public in favor of Toronto, they will be discharging a leading function of their calling, as the stable elements in a city look to the hotels to do. They can drive not only the pleasure-loving but the money-spending crowd to other cities, or they can attract it to this one. Wholesalers should consider themselves bound by the laws of hospitality as well as of self interest to see that dealers coming to the city on such occasions should not be over taxed for hotel accommodation. The next event that is to be provided for by the city is the Industrial Exhibition. Everybody is interested in the success of that, and the places of accommodation should show their participation in the general interest by keeping down to their ordinary charges. Business men are the people who usually make these occasions, and the hotel and restaurant men should reciprocate by their resistance to the temptation to make fancy prices. They do not give so good value on such days as they do on other days. Their service is much more hurried, the guest gets less attention, more confined sleeping accommodation, and poorer fare. Also, on account of a bigger call, they should rather lower than increase their rates. This is a question that should be taken up by the directors of the Industrial Exhibition, and by the Toronto Board of Trade. They should endeavor to bring hotel men and restaurant keepers to an agreement not to levy special charges on the people who visit the Exhibition.

CANNED PEAS.

The canned goods packers started the season intending to put up a largely increased quantity of canned peas. Sales for future delivery were freely made at low prices. It now appears as if they were not likely to get as many peas as they expected. The crop has been a good one but much of it has ripened to quickly to make the peas suitable for packing. Canners must have them neither to ripe nor to tender. If too ripe they have to be processed so hard that they frequently burst. One packer writes that he arranged for three tons to the acre and he is only getting one: This packer made arrangements to pack about 10,000 cases but will only have a little over 3,000. Another packer writes that he cannot fill all orders. Prices in consequence are stiffer and likely to advance. Orders will not now be taken at the figures that would be accepted some time ago. The fact that the stock of old peas has been reduced to the lowest point in some years is a favorable factor in the situation. The pack in the States will be short and some canners bothered to fill their contracts, many of which will be sealed down. It is predicted prices will advance, as the supply has been so shortened by the small pack. In Baltimore the stock in first hands is light, and the trade would not be surprised to see peas creeping up in price inside the next sixty days. In New York marrowfats are quoted at $1.10 to $1.30; Early Junes, $1.25 to $1.50. A Baltimore letter says: "Whilst the orders for peas have not been large, yet they have been going out in such quantities as to greatly reduce the stocks held in hands here. I rather think that prices on peas will advance within the next week."

The New York Retail Grocers' Union Mutual Benefit Horse Fund is reported to be in a healthy condition, with 116 policies in force.

THE RISING MARKET.

For the first time in twenty years the world is treated to an almost universal rise in the price of many manufactured goods. Year after year our importers and manufacturers have experienced the pleasant sensation of being able to buy their finished article and raw material for less money than the season previous, and as a consequence have been enabled—by their opposition compelled—to reduce their own selling prices. It has in fact become a habit of the buyer to expect an annual reduction on almost everything—a habit which has been provocative of most pernicious results ; for manufacturers finding that they could not reduce their price on the same quality of article have in many instances resorted to tricks which for a time deceive the eye, but which are soon discovered when the test of "use" has been administered. Perhaps no country in the world is so willing to disregard worth in order to cheapen the price as is Canada. So strongly has this impression imprinted itself in Europe that "Goodenough for Canada" has become a by-word, and many and frequent are the complaints sent across the ocean by our agents and wholesale dealers. A change has now come, however, and our advice to the storekeepers of the Dominion is to seek quality first and price afterwards. It would be difficult with the small resources at our disposal to explain the many reasons of the present steady leavening of process, but certain it is that raw materials have increased in price almost universally, and to an astonishing extent. Metal, raised by the Parisian combine of '78 has never again reached its previous low point, and is now on a sharp upward march. While copper with its attendant brass was the article most troubled before, steel has lately dropped into line, affecting to no small extent cutlery of all kinds. Razors and knives are up about ten per cent., while scissors are likely to become almost scarce owing to the extensive strikes in Germany. Rubber, owing both to a cornering of the market and to two light crops in succession, is perhaps the firmest commodity to-day. Instead of falling in price in August in anticipation of the fall crop it has experienced a fourth rise in price since May, and what used to cost 53 cents is now bringing 88 cents. Pure rubber goods, when the material is a more important item than the labor, are of course mostly effected, but even hard rubber lines such as combs have had three changes this year. It is well known how on but small provocation the German hog "got his back up" last fall, stiffening his bristles nearly 100 per cent. It was thought at the time that this was due principally to the fact that pigs were being killed in a large way by packers contracting for the German army, who waste all the bristles, instead of by farmers who save everything saleable. If such a surmise was correct it is at least expected to be a permanent change. Just now Canadians experience great difficulty in buying any kind of brushes at all, for in anticipation of changes in their tariff the Americans have placed enormous orders in Europe. The silk worm, too, has combined with the rest of living nature to make us pay more for our requisites and has managed to hoist the cost two or three rungs in the ladder. Pure silk is about 20 per cent. dearer, while mixed grades of plush, satin and velvet are firm at 10 per cent. advance. Many lines of fancy glassware controlled in Bohemia are unobtainable at any price owing to strikes, which have lasted for months. Fancy woods, such as cherry and walnut, are daily becoming scarcer, and buyers are glad to obtain second quality for one per cent. more than they paid two years since for prime first quality.

And so the story could be prolonged without, we believe, omitting a single commending line. Two other important considerations must not, however, be omitted. The Emperor of Germany, by championing the cause of the workman, has strengthened the price of labor the world over ; and whether it be a cause or an effect, the Bank of England has raised its rates to five per cent. Money in Europe has as a consequence become scarce, and the cost of manufacturing has become proportionately higher.

MISLEADING TARIFF MANUALS.

Certain parties have been distributing for sale throughout the country what purported to be official tariff schedules. Business men were warned at the time that all such were unofficial and thus liable to be misleading, and that the only official and reliable tariff schedule was that being issued by the Customs Department. An instance of the unreliability of these outside lists was shown on Wednesday, when Mr. George C. H. Lang, of Berlin, Ont., representing the tanners of that district, called upon Hon. Mr. Bowell, Minister of Customs, in reference to the duty on stearine. Mr. Lang claimed that according to a tariff schedule, which he produced, tallow stearine was subject to a duty of one cent per pound. The Minister, upon examining the list which Mr. Lang brought, found that it was one of those which had been published as a private speculation and sold throughout the country. It was, as might have been expected, incorrect in this particular instance, inasmuch as it stated that "tallow, tallow rendered and tallow stearine are dutiable at the rate of one cent a pound." Hon. Mr. Bowell explained that the amended tariff provides that "paraffine wax, stearic acid and stearine of all kinds are subject to a duty of three cents per pound." It will therefore be seen that stearine, from whatever material manufactured, is dutiable at the rate of three cents a pound, as stated. This, Mr. Lang pointed out, would be a somewhat heavy tax on tanners, as stearine manufactured from tallow is largely used in their business.

IN QUEST OF ADULTERATION

The annual report of the chief analyst has been published in the shape of an appendix to the report of the Minister of Inland Revenue. Prof. Ellis, public analyst at Toronto, reports that during the year he examined 70 samples of lard. In all these samples the action of nitrate of silver, the amount of iodine absorbed and the specific gravity of the temperature of boiling water were determined. In 22 examples the quantity of water and of matter insoluble in either were also ascertained and a special microscopical examination made for beef fat crystals. The result of these examinations was to show that none of the lards contained water and that the quantity of matter insoluble in ether in no case exceeded 4 per cent. ; also, in all cases where the nitrate of silver and iodine tests led him to infer the presence of cotton seed oil, crystals of beef fat were found, leading to the conclusion that the most common adulteration by far is a mixtnre of cotton seed oil and beef sterine. Of 70 samples examined, 32 were found genuine and 38 adulterated. Of 15 samples of cream of tartar. 10 were pure and 5 adulterated. In four cases the adulteration was of wheat or corn starch, varying iu quantity from 8 to 33 per cent. One sample consisted almost entirely of calcium sulphate, with a per centage of starch; two samples were adulterated with a quantity of burnt alum. Twenty-six samples of baking powder were analyzed. Ten were cream of tartar powders of good quality, one was cream of tartar powder with a small quantity of carbonate of amonia, fourteen samples were alum and phospaate powders. These gave off from 8 to 53 cubic centimeters of carbon dioxide per grain. All contained a very small percentage of ammonia. All these alum-containing powders were reported as adulterated in such a manner as to injure health.

"No, I won't hear a word said against that man," remarked Allbrake, as his grocer drove by "it's all owing to him that we manage to live !"

THE TORONTO RETAILERS' PIC-NIC.

The pic-nic of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association was held on Wednesday, and was all the success that an auspicious concurrence of circumstances could make it. The weather could not have been better had it been at the bidding of the Association. It was bright, but tempered by the freshness that was blown from the vicinity of showers that were falling not many miles away. Such a day, falling in the torrid spell by which the month has been introduced, was like an oasis in a desert. It was good for the spectators and good for those in the arena. The crowd was large. Two days before, it would have been a sweltering, impatient one. On Wednesday it was cool and satisfied with the weather, the games and with itself. The programme, varied to suit both those who love sport for its own sake and those who love amusing diversion in any connection, had a store of entertainment in it, which could only be guessed at from the inventory of the competitions we have published. No game went by default ; honors were not easy. Every winner had to work for his trophy, and the tale of many who failed is nearly as much to their glory as if they had won. The ample fund which the liberality of friends subscribed was one of the chief beneficent circumstances. Not only did it make many prizes one of the desirable possibilities, but it enabled the committee to bestow worthy prizes. They were all deserving of a place in the cabinet of any amateur fortunate enough to win them.

The spectators, between four and five thousand in number, found the programme interesting from its beginning at 2 p. m. till its close at 7 p. m. The intervals between events were short, thanks to the excellent management of the committee in charge, and to the enlivening music of Lubar's band, which filled them with a selection of general favorites. The success of the pic-nic would have been even greater but for the fact that two days had to be lost by many people to enjoy it, as a great number of stores were as good as closed on Wednesday of last week, the day originally chosen. Of course, as a matter of fact, there were few not open late in the afternoon of that day, but as customers were notified before hand that the stores would be closed, there was little business done. Another thing that took from the full due of the day was the happening upon it of the butchers' outing. Many more of the butchers would have been present at the Exhibition park, were it for nothing else than on account of their interest in the butcher boys' race. The judges, Messrs. Jas. Parke, jr., R. H. Ramsay, L. Gibb, F. Gallow, Andrew Park—for the footsports—and Messrs. H. B. Smith, R. McClary, Dr. Campbell—for the horse races—gave the best of satisfaction. The clerk of the course—Mr. Herbert Tolchard—the manager of the games—Mr. Frank Smith—and the starter—Mr. Cornelius Burns—showed themselves tactful, prompt and all but ubiquitous. The above named and the pic-nic committee—Messrs. R. Mills, chairman; J. Westren, treasurer; J. F. Thackray, secretary; Messrs. A. R. Williamson, J. Partridge, A. G. Booth, H. W. McCulloch, F. Johnson, R. Barron, A. E. Saunders, F. S. Roberts, J. Berwick, J. G. Gibson, J. Butcher, A. White, D. W. Clark, W. Binnie, F. Britton, D. Killen—are deserving of the highest praise for the large meed of success that each of them individually contributed. The following is a detailed account of the issue of the events of the programme :

1. Boys' race — 220 yards, entrance fee 10c., 3 prizes, open to all grocers' sons and employes under 16 years of age. 1st prize, Ink Stand, value $6; 2nd prize, Silver Cup, $4; 3rd prize, Napkin Ring, $2. 1st prize, D. Colville ; 2nd, Walter Stainland ; 3rd, Alfred Cooke ; 4th, Wilbert Babe. The claim of the first was protested, so we add the name of the fourth, as he may be given the 3rd prize.

2. Sack race—100 yards, 3 prizes, entrance fee, 10c., open to grocers' and grocers' employees over 20 years of age. 1st prize, Silver Cup, value $6; 2nd prize, Gold Pin, $5; 3rd prize, Caddy of Tea, $3. 1st prize, James Ross ; 2nd, Thos. Shirley ; 3rd, W. Milner.

3. Fat Man's race—100 yards, entrance fee 25c., 3 prizes, open to all grocers' of 200 lbs. and over, and 43 inches girth. 1st prize, Silver Fruit Dish, value $13; 2nd prize, Silver Sugar and Cream Jugs, $11; 3rd prize, 1 box Dingman's Soap, $3.75. This was the only event that did not take place, and it was passed over on account of lack of entries.

4. Man's race — 150 yards, entrance fee 25c., 2 prizes, open to members of the Association over 45 years of age. 1st prize, Silver Pitcher, value $25; 2nd prize, Silver Tea-Kettle, $15. 1st prize, M. Smith ; 2nd S. Oldham.

5. Ladies' race—150 yards, 3 prizes, ladies of 20 and over, entrance fee 10c. 1st prize Jewell Gase, value $8 ; 2nd prize Breakfast Castor, $5.50 ; 3rd prize 1 Box Fancy Creams. There were 19 entries for this race. The fair competitors who won were—1st prize, Alice Dean ; 2nd, Ellen McGregor ; 3rd, Mary Ann Miller.

6. Race once round the ring—entrance fee 10c., 3 prizes, open to grocers' sons employed at the business only, and assistants who have been employed for the past 6 months. 1st prize Silver Pitcher, value $10 ; 2nd prize Dressing Case, $7 ; 3rd prize Gold Pin, $5. 1st prize, A. Forrester ; 2nd, W. Milner ; 3rd, C. Matthews.

7. Commercial Travellers race, once round the ring—entrance fee 50c., 3 prizes, open to city commercial travellers' representing city houses connected with the trade, and who have been travelling 6 months in the city. 1st prize Silver Mounted Vause, value $20 ; 2nd prize Sardine Dish, $12 ; 3rd prize 1 Box Baking Powder, $5. 1st prize, J. Park ; 2nd, A. E. Skinner ; 3rd, W. Park.

8. Donkey race for members of Picnic Committee only, in costume. No entrance fee. 2 prizes. 1st prize 1 Silk Umbrella ; 2nd prize 1 case Gordon & Dilworth's Catsup. This race was very laughable and very humiliating to more than half-a-dozen eager competitors, who had not alone the mortification of losing, but the ignominious mischance of being many times shifted from their seats. The costumes were funny. 1st prize, Frank Britton ; 2nd, R. Mills.

9. Three quick jumps—entrance fee 10c., 3 prizes, open to all, excepting professionals. 1st prize, 1 box Ivory Bar Soap ; 2nd prize, 1 box Dingman's Electric Soap ; 3rd prize, 1 case Breakfast Cereals. The winners were : 1st prize, J. Umpleby, 27 ft. 10 in.; 2nd, T. Law, 27 ft. 7 in.; 3rd, J. Lyon, 27 ft. 6 in.

10. Sack race, 100 yards—entrance fee 10c., 3 prizes, open to boys under 20 years of age. 1st prize, 1 box Corn Starch ; 2nd prize, 1 Ham ; 3rd prize, 1 case Fruit Syrups. 1st prize, J. Tingle ; 2nd, John McWilliams ; 3rd, H. Sampson.

11. Trotting race—twice round horse ring, entrance fee $1, 3 prizes, for horses the bona fide property of grocers' owned 2 months previous to race. No buggy less than 250 lbs., horses which have never entered for public money. Entries to be made on or before 29th of July. If made on 30th $2 will be charged instead of $1. Previous 1st prize winners debarred (horses and owners.) 1st prize, 1 sett Harness, value $32 ; 2nd prize, 1 Rug, $15 ; 3rd prize, 1 Blanket, $6. 25. Obstacle race—half mile, entrance fee 25c., 3 prizes, open to all excepting professionals. 1st prize, silver cup, value $10; 2nd prize, silver cup, $5 ; 3rd prize, 1 box Dingman's Soap, $3.75. There were 14 entries and three obstacles. A very hurly-burly race it was. The winners were, 1st prize, J. Ross ; 2nd, S. Michie ; 3rd, J. G. Lockhart.

26. Fowl race—3 prizes, entrance 25c., entries limited to 12, open to members of Toronto Retail Grocers' Association. Fowls provided by the committee. 1st prize, 1 Silver Egg Dish, value $14 ; 2nd prize, 1 Sugar and Cream Jug, $10 ; 3rd prize, 1 Silver Biscuit Barrel, $4. In this race there were 12 fowls, geese, turkeys, ducks and cocks, tied to numbered stakes. Tickets were given to contestants. Each had to untie and drive the fowl whose number corresponded with that on his ticket. It was a jolly race. W. J. McClary took first with a cock; H. W. McCulloch 2nd with a turkey, and F. Britton 3rd with a goose.

27. Tug of war—no entrance fee, open to members pf Pic-nic Committee only. 8 men and captain on each side; captains, Mr. R. Mills and Mr. J. Berwick. Prize, $3 hat to each member of winning team. Prizes value $27. Mr. Berwick's team was: Messrs. Williamson, Partridge, Johnston, F. Britton, John Butcher, J. G. Boothe. Mr. Mills' team was : Messrs. J. Western, H. W. McCulloch, Barron, Roberts, Binnie, Clarke. Two heats were pulled, and both were won by Mr. Berwick's team.

28. Guessing—the number of seeds in three melons, prize, a gold medal from Sunlight Soap Co. Open to all, as doners will provide tickets to everybody on the ground to note guess upon. Gold medal, value $25. The guesses were various, ranging between 60 and 250,000. The winner was Mrs. Munro, whose husband keeps a grocery on Wellesley st., whose guess was 2,789, one below the actual number.

Mr. W. A. Warren, of Warren Bros. & Boomer left yesterday for England. He will be absent for about six weeks. Mr. Boomer will preside in his absence.

Sales of condensed mince meat, this summer, has kept the factory of Mr. J. H. Wethey, St. Catharines, running most of the season. Mr Wethey says his sales have been greater this summer than ever before, and he is already getting orders ahead for the fall trade, as some were disappointed last year, the demand being greater than his capacity for at least thirty days.

A Halifax despatch says : Some time ago a promoter of an alleged English syndicate was here negotiating for the purchase of the Nova Scotia refineries. He wanted to organize a Canadian sugar trust and was willing to pay handsomely for the Halifax refinery. The negotiations greatly elated the stockholders, who would sell at fabulous prices. Some sold at the advance prices, but most of the stockholders held. One of the conditions of the negotiation was the deposits of $50,000 forfeit by the first of August. The stockholders are naturally very anxious as to the payment of this deposit. If it does not materialize there will be a big drop in the value of the stock.

NEW ENGLAND - CANADIAN GROCERS.

There has been a movement inaugurated among the Canadian grocers of New England, which is attracting considerable interest. Within two weeks past representatives of many New England groceries that are conducted by Canadians, assembled in Boston and took preliminary steps toward the foundation of a wholesale grocery house. It was voted to put the capital stock at $50,000. By this means it is hoped to secure bargains in buying goods at wholesale, and by this means each member of the Association will be entitled thereby to obtain goods himself at prices much below those he now pays. J. L. Loisell, of Lowell, has been elected secretary and treasurer, and S. P. Hebert is one of the directors.—N. E. Grocer.

An explosion of high-wines took place at the warehouse of H. N. Bate & Sons, wholesale grocers, Ottawa, on Monday morning. Mr. W. Bate and an employe of the firm, were both frightfully burned about the hands and face. The employe, Mr. Higgarty, was engaged in getting a gallon of highwines out of a barrel, when he accidentally stepped on a match. This ignited and set fire to the floor, on which a quantity of the alcohol had been spilt. The flames blazed up around the can, which then caught fire. Mr. Higgarty at once dashed to the door with the can, when he collided with Mr. Bate. A large quantity of the burning fluid struck Mr. Bate on the face and hands and burned him so severely that the flesh hung in strips from his cheeks and fingers. His clothes were also considerably scorched. Mr. Higgarty had the skin burned off his hands, but escaped further injuries. Mr. Bate, who is a nephew of the head of the firm, was immediately driven to the Protestant hospital.

Mr. W. G. A. Lambe has taken advantage of the quietness in wholesale circles to run off for a week's rest.

Considerable quantities of Indurated Fibre ware are being sent out at present to Manitoba and the North-west Territories.

Mr. Frank Ferguson, tobacconist, has closed out business in St. Thomas, to go to Toronto where he purposes opening up.

Galt retailer says he is pushing Diamond Baking Powder in place of Royal and Clevelands and it gives every satisfaction.

Mr. W. E. Murray of the Canada Sugar Refinery is away on his vacation. His place is filled by Mr. Thompson of the Montreal office.

The retail grocers' of Hamilton have decided to have a holiday outing next month, and will picnic either at Grimsby or Oakville.

A local dealer shipped three cars of dried apples to the States last week. There is a good inquiry from there but stocks here are light.

One of the rumors on the street here is that a corner is being worked on evaporated apples. It is certain that parties have been buying all they can lay hands upon.

Mr. H. P. Eckardt is away north on a week's vacation. He certainly deserves a rest for he is one of the hardest worked wholesale men in the city.

Detroit News:—"The Globe Tobacco Works, of Windsor, are to be removed to London. The first meeting of the new board of directors will be held there on Thursday next."

Shopbreakers secured an entrance to A. F. Falknop's fruit store, 312 Queen street west, Toronto, on Monday night, and carried away a quantity of candies and lemons, besides over a dollar in coppers.

We notice Messrs. Turner & Co., Hamilton, are offering Ram Lal's Indian Teas. Our friends should take these up. The sellers we feel sure will only sell to regular retail trade. Thus saving all unfair competition to those handling the goods.

Mr. James Lee, St. Catharines, was in THE GROCER office yesterday. He says graspes will be a fine crop in that district but most other crops excepting cherries were a poor crop. This has he says caused a lighter demand than usual for sugars.

One of the interesting events at Regina, N. W. T., last month was the marriage of J. D. Sibbold, commission merchant, to Miss Swanton of the same place. The happy couple left for a months visit in the east, visiting Sutton west, the native soil of the groom's.

Mrs. Nelson Humphrey, of Hamilton, who is at present summering in Muskoka, was poisoned recently by pertaking of some canned fruit. For some days she was so ill that her life was depaired of, but the crisis is now passed, and Mrs. Humphrey is out of danger.

Mr. Lawrence, the Montreal consul for Venezuela, says that our commissioner for the Jamaica Exhibition, Mr. Adam Brown, should have our canned goods industry well represented at the exhibition. He says American brands are the only ones seen on the island, and that potted salmon and lobster should meet with a heavy sale.

The Eddy Mfg. Co. are turning out a very good article in Indurated Fibre ware wash basins at $3 per dozen. This is cheap as compared with the same basin in the United States which costs $4.20. They are also making water closet cisterns of the same ware which do not leak sweet, stink, foul, corrode or shine and are very handsome and cheap, $18 per dozen being the list price.

Louis Hanson, fish merchant, Kingston, had a narrow escape from death on Friday. While delivering an order at Swift's wharf his foot became fast in a frog and twist and squirm as he would he could not get free. Just when the cow-catcher was about touching his leg, he made a desperate struggle and his foot came away, leaving his shoe transfixed. He fell on his back, and the train passed on.

To Perkins, Ince and Co. belongs the honor to getting the first carload of new British Columbia canned salmon through from the Coast this season. It arrived Monday and most of it was shipped at once having been sold ahead. Samples shown THE GROCER were of fine quality and both boxes and tins were very nicely put up. They were shipped by C. G. Hobson & Co., Vancouver.

At West Bay, Manitoulin Island, last Saturday, Mr. Lewis Smith, one of the early merchants of Owen Sound, died at the age of 86. Mr. Smith came to this country in the employment of the Hudson's Bay Co., at York Fort, and from there drifted into Indian trading on his own account amongst the Indians of the North shore and these parts. He also opened a general store here. The few early residents remaining will regret to hear of his death.

The St. John (N. B.) Exhibition Association has issued the premium list for its International Fair to be held in St. John, from Sept. 24th to Oct. 4th. The prospectus covers 120 pages, and contains the general regulations, the prize list, and a description of the city. About $12,000 will be awarded to prize winners. The list of articles that are to be subsidized at this exhibition is very long and detailed. The products of cultivation and skill are all pretty well remembered. We hope the Exhibition may be successful beyond the expectation of its directors.

Mr. M. R. P. Montgomery, of Eby, Blain & Co., has been spending a week in Huron. County crops he says are excellent. On his brother's farm they will have 35 bushels fall wheat to the acre, all other crops excepting oats and apples will be a fine crop. One orchard from which 125 barrels of apples were taken two years ago will have only about 20 this year. Potatoes have suffered very much for want of rain, but have improved very much the past few days.

GROCERIES.

Despite the extreme heat and the general feeling of anxiety throughout many parts of the country on account of the want of rain. there was a good week's business done in the outset of this month. It compares favorably with that done a year ago. There was a very good trade in sugar, notwithstanding the far from cheerful outlook that the condition of the ripening fruit warranted holders in taking. The trade in teas has been fair, as also that in dried fruits. Canned goods come in for an active demand. The week's payments have been good, although the movement of money is by no means yet free, as there has been nothing of the new crop marketed, save a little fruit and some hay. The want of money retards in some measure both trade and payments, though less noticeably this week than some time ago.

CANNED GOODS.

The market is now completely bare of apples. Corn has become firmer and advanced in its lowest quotation. None is now to be had for less than $1. The stock is waning fast, and the prospects of the new pack do not encourage the expectation of high prices, as the corn crop is likely to be a failure in many quarters, solely on account of the want of seasonable rain. Peas are also in a better position, the lowest price, $1.10, being 10c. of an advance on last week's quotation. They run up as high as $1.25. The new pack is now ready for the market. The season is past for adding another case to it, and there has been an unexpected dearth of stock. Where three tons to the acre were confidently looked for there has been a gathering of not more than one ton, and this has been a general condition of the crop in this province. Tomatoes are also going off rapidly at firm prices, holding yet at $1.20 to $1.30. The stock of them is small. Strawberries are in very good supply at the moment and still at good prices, which there is little doubt they will continue to be. Packers are higher and firmer in their prices, though there is no bidding on the part of jobbers. The old salmon is fast getting into small compass. Ordinary brands are $1.50, and the finest $1.65. There have been reports of big cuts upon these figures, but there seems to be no reasonable ground for weakening unless the stock held is below the average. The coast advices support the probability that the price of the new pack will be high, but both the source of the advices and the critical time of their transmission make their accuracy open to question. Mail advices of July 21, say the pack on the Fraser was only 35,000 cases against a pack of 200,000 cases last year. In this market there has been a fair demand at firm prices for spot stock. The new pack is also firmer. Many jobbers will not bid for futures at present prices. The indefiniteness of the situation is what at present rules. The San Francisco Grocer and Country Merchant says :—

"There continues to be a good distributive demand for Columbia river salmon in carload lots for eastern shipment. The character of the orders received indicates that both jobbers and retailers east of the Rocky Mountains are pursuing a hand-to-mouth policy and buying only for immediate requirements; leading to the belief that the bulk of this season's sales of Columbia river, some 200,000 cases, have already gone into consumption. Telegrams from that river July 21st report the average catch at that date as eight fish to the boat. On the Fraser the catch thus far has been disappointing and as indicating this a prominent house in this city is in receipt of a telegram from the river under date of 22nd inst. as follows : "Every one at present anticipates a failure of this year's pack on the Fraser." Well informed parties do not hesitate to predict that the British Columbia pack will fall 200,000 cases short of that of last year."

Lobsters are firm at $2 to $2.75 according to brand. It is up 20c. per case on the coast. Stocks are light and the demand is good. In all goods there is an unprovement in the attitude of packers, whose over-eagerness a short time ago led to reckless selling of futures. They are now rather stiff in their offers in all lines.

The first new pack canned salmon arrived on the market on Tuesday for Perkins, Ince & Co. This is an earlier shipment than usual. The few cans opened showed good quality. Most of it had been sold to arrive.

COFFEES.

There is a very good demand upon all coffee stocks held here. There is no change in prices yet felt in this market, although there is great firmness at all points of supply. Of the Guetemala crop a leading merchant on the spot wrote a short time ago : "The picking will commence in all probability next month and the crop will be plentiful but the prospects of war with Salvador will make us short of help and may be lose half the crop. If we do not have war with Salvador the Government of Guatemala will have to hold under arms a considerable army in case of emergencies, this will keep the major portion of help from doing the picking." The actual outbreak of war has not yet been followed by clear reports of the effect upon prices.

A company has been formed in Rio Janeiro to assure stability to coffee quotations and facilitate business in that commodity. Agencies will be established in New York, London, Havre and Hamburg. Shares in the new company to the amount of £50,000 have been subscribed for.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been done a trade in currants, that though limited has been steady. This week's revision of our prices current shows a higher quotation for barrels and half barrels. Advices of the growing crops continue to be of the tone indicated in last week's report. There has been a slight weakening in the prices of Valencia raisins, that fruit having moved down to 7¾c. at its lowest point. The best off-stalk rums from that to 8½c. Sultanas are 11½ to 12c. A letter received the other day by Bendelari & Co. from Whittall & Co., Smyrna, confirms their previous report of the shortage of the Sultana crop; they still further reduce their estimate of figs, and say that though the fruit will be small the quality will be fine.

The stock of prunes in anybody's hands on this market is very low. The demand outlined the stock.

A circular issued by Alfred H. Kenn, Smyrna, under date of July 12, estimates the 1890 crop of Sultana raisins at 30 per cent. less than that of last year; a falling off of 11 per cent in Eleme raisins and an increase of 10 per cent in black raisins, and a falling off of 30 per cent in figs. The crop of the latter is estimated at 12,900 tons, against 19,250 tons last year, and an average of about 15,000 tons during the preceding three years. The 1890 crop of Sultana raisins is placed at 15,000 tons. Last year's yield was 21,200 tons, that of 1888 about 31,000 tons, and the average for 1886 and 1887 about 27,000 tons. Of Eleme raisins about 17,300 tons are calculated upon, against 20,000 tons in 1889 and 22,440 tons in 1888. The estimates on currants indicate a heavy falling off in that locality, the total being placed at only 220 tons, against 600 tons in 1888 and 1889. The quantities in all estimates are tons of 2,240 lbs.

NUTS.

Almonds, Brazil nuts, peanuts, Grenoble walnuts, have all gone up, in some cases as much as 2c. above previous prices. There is no special demand here that is moving prices, but the condition of the stock at outside points is what is promoting the advance. The advance in New York has caused the advance here. Stocks are light in this market.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice and all spices are unchanged. There has been no flag in the brisk trade done for some time, but the stock of rice was quite large here, and saved wholesalers from going to importers so far for stock that is held for higher prices.

SUGAR.

The channels of the sugar trade were unobstructed the last week. If so strong a demand should be regular and steady throughout the whole of the fruit season, this market would be in a healthy state, and would be an excellent outlet for the refineries stocks. Tuesday was an especially good sugar day. The strong call for sugar, however, rests upon a fleeting basis, the remains of the small fruit crop. The berries will soon be done, and after their season is past, there will be little need of sugar for preserving this month. Granulated has remained at 6⅞ to 7c. Although the price in New York has dropped another sixteenth. Refiners here are said to be disposed to shade prices to wholesalers since the fall in New York. The chief strength of the demand here is for bright yellows. The price of brown ⅛c. higher. The latter is very dark and is complained of as tending to run these hot days. Raws are held in small quantity by few wholesalers. They are 5¼ to 5½c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Both commodities are unchanged. There has been a good trade the last few days in molasses, but there has been little doing in syrups. Stocks of both, however, require to be constantly replenished by wholesalers, so that though the trade is usually slow it is certainly telling.

TEAS.

There is a considerable quantity of second and first pickings of Japans offering upon this market, but the complaint continues to be the scarcity of low grades of good value. There is a lively market here for all Japans that can be bought from 18c. down. Young Hysons are scarce here and in the foreign markets, and higher; cable offers on Monday to London were refused though full previous prices were bid. On Tuesday a cable came in ordering an advance in prices of 3d. per lb., which is equal to a rise of about 2d.

In blacks there are a few new movings being now purchased for this market. Blacks are unchanged here though English advices are strong. There has been no improvement in the demand for Indian teas, and prices of all medium teas are lower. The market is firm for teas up to 8½d. and over ¼d. per lb. The new season's Japan teas now on the market show a falling off in quality. Excessive rains have done great damage in the last few days in Darjeeling, Dovars and Terai districts. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs: Owing to excessive rains many tea gardens at Darjeeling and the Terai are under water. The planters are obliged to communicate with each other by boats. Two large bridges and 500 feet of permanent way of the mountain railway have been carried away.

JAMES TURNER & CO.,

HAMILTON.

STARCH.

There has been an advance in starch. Canada Laundry is now 4¾c., and Canada Corn is 6¾c., each having gone up ¼c. The advance in the price of corn is supposed to be the basis of this upward movement.

PETROLEUM.

Canadian refined oil has advanced another cent, not because of the great demand for it, but because of the almost aggressive activity of crude, for which in various applications there is now a very sharp demand. There is no change in the other classes of refined oil. Trade is fairly good.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

A slight advance on castor oil is the only movement of the market to be chronicled in connection with last week's trade. That trade was rather quiet, the hot wave and the new fruit doing very little to animate it.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The old butter unsold on this market stands a poor chance of being disposed of to outside buyers, as these seem not only to have quit bidding, but also to have ceased to pay attention to offers. Two hundred packages were sold to an outsider this week at 5c., and the butter is said to have been of good average quality for old. What is here yet will be likely to make its way into the hands of confectioners. More of the old stock would have been thus absorbed before this for the production of certain classes of bakers' stock, but for the cheapness of substitutes for butter that is usually put to such uses. There is believed to be no longer any old that will bring even 7c. in considerable quantities. Dairy tubs are in liberal receipt at from 13 to 15c. Large rolls, on account of the intense heat, have come in less freely. They bring 12 to 14c. Farmers' pound rolls are scarce, and worth 18c. Creamery tub is in very good supply at 18 to 19c. Creamery rolls are 21c. The quality of the butter coming in assimilates more closely to a single standard. It ranges between extremes of good and bad that are not so far apart as they were last spring.

Cheese is selling very well at 9 to 9½c. The stock is easily kept supplied, while the demand is good. It is unlikely that if the home demand were worse, there would be any reduction in the price, as then more stock would be made for the English market.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Are dull at $1.55 to $1.75 per bushel.

DRIED APPLES—Very few are left in stock, but these bring 6 to 6½c. The demand is less active, as consumption is engaged with the new small fruit.

EGGS—Dropped 1c. on Tuesday, owing to freer supply. They are selling raw at 16c. and are for the moment fairly plentiful. Any advance upon present American prices will at once open the flood gates of our market and raise prices here. It is the movements of that market which affects ours.

HAY—Old is $9.50 to $10, and new is $9 to $9.50 in bales. Trade is rather dull in pressed hay, as the street supply of new and old is large.

HIDES—Cured remain at 6¼c., Green cows' 6½c. for No. 1, 5½c. for No. 2, 4½c. for No. 3. There has been a lack in the supply which has kept these prices firm.

HONEY—The flow of the new crop continues to be good, according to reports. The prices of the old stock are the same as they have been for some time. The large surplus of the old crop and the big prospect of the new do not favor the probability that present prices will be maintained. That probabilty is favored, however, by another circumstance, namely, the scarcity of fruit. Clear honey is 9 to 12c. and comb is 14 to 18c.

HOPS—There is no change in the condition of the market. Prices are from 8 to 14c. the middle point separating the scale of prices for '88 and '89 stock respectively.

OATS—The declining supply in the country on the verge of the reaping of the new crop, and the limited prospective yield of that crop, keep the price on the upward move. They are now firm at 50c. in car lots.

POTATOES—New are worth 75 to 80c. per bushel. They are arriving freely and are taken up by local consumption very fast.

POULTRY—Chickens are scarce. They are 55 to 70c. per pair. Ducks are of the same value.

SKINS—Pelts and lambskins are now all eligible to be classified together as sheepskins, the wool of the former and the dimensions of the latter having both outgrown the terms formerly used. They are 65c. Calfskins are 8c. for No. 1 and 6c. for No. 2.

TALLOW—Is 2c. for rough and 5½c. for rendered.

WOOL—Goes readily, and is in moderate receipt at 21c.

FISH.

Trout and white fish are expected to be scarce from now until the fall. Trout have not been plentiful all summer, and the shipment of white fish usually begins to be smaller about this time. There is not enough trout received at present to cover the demand. The quality of white fish received this summer is much better than that of last year. The run of British Columbia salmon is not as large as what was expected. Lake herring is scarce at present and have been all through the summer compared to what they were last year. There is a moderate demand for pickerel, but the supply is small. It is reported that pickerel is in good request in New York at present. Black bass is being received in small quantities. The demand is very firm. The prices have advanced for trout and white fish, owing to scarcity. The prices are: Trout and white fish, 6 to 6½c.; British Columbia salmon, 14c.; lake herring, $1.75 per hundred; pickerel, 4½ to 5c.; black bass, 8 to 9c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The orange stock here is kept replenished by small but numerous receipts of Sorrentos, which continue to be all that is to be had. The demand has improved, and oranges are $7.50. The Jamaica stock is not sufficiently matured, though it has been cased up for several weeks, and the New York market is supplied. Lemons are going off very fast, and as the stock is running low, there has been a great increase in the price. Here they run from $7.50 to $10. They are worth $7 to $7.50 in New York. Bananas are in easy demand, they suffering more than any other class of green fruit from the competition of the season's fruits of native growth. They are $1.25 to $2.00, according to size of cluster.

PROVISIONS.

The request for smoked meats of all desctiptions has been strong and uninterrupted. A very good week's trade has been done in these, as also a fair business in shortcut. Lard experiences a very steady demand, which was wont to be largely in favor of American compounds which are now practically debarred.

BACON—Long clear is 8½ to 9c. Bellies are 11½ to 12c. Backs are 11 to 11½c. Roll is 10c.

DRESSED HOGS—Are $6.50 to $6.75. Very few arrivals.

HAMS—Smoked are firm at 12½c. Sweet pickled are 11c.

LARD—Is 10c. in 20 lb. packages, and 9c. in 50 lb. pails.

MESS PORK—Is $15 for heavy and $16.50 to $17. for family.

SALT.

The sale of salt is kept back owing to the Liverpool manufacturers cutting on Canadian prices. The sales this week show an increase on last week. The following are the sales reported by the Toronto salt works for the week: 2 car sacks at 70c.; 2 cars bbl. $1.40; 1 car dairy at $1.25. Smaller quantities are $1.50 to $1.55 for bbls.; 80 to 85c. for sacks, and 55c. for ¼ sacks. Liverpool salt is bringing for coarse sacks, 11 to ton, 66c. and 12 to ton, 62½c.

DRY GOODS.

Traders report a continued activity in the demand for Canadian staples. The trade in imported and native tweeds, however, has been light. All the buying has run in the track of the season's demand, which is of a strength which warrants the belief that currant trade in the country is good. Payments are not an object of special complaint.

MONTREAL

MONTREAL MARKETS.

GROCERIES.

AUG. 6, 1890.

The provision market continues quiet and without any noteworthy feature.

There is no change to note in the egg market, the demand continuing good and the supply small. The range is still 15 to 16c.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

The flour market ruled steady and quiet on the whole, with the same characteristics. Straight rollers are worth $4.80 to $4.90 for best grades and there is business in Manitoba hard winter patent at the outside figures. Strong bakers' unchanged at $5.25, the market on the whole being firm.

There is nothing doing in grain except a small local movement in oats. Owing to the high prices ruling the export business is practically at a standstill, as freights are quoted nominal at 1s.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market is as uninteresting as ever, and offers from the country are becoming more frequent than ever, indicating that stocks are pressing worse and worse every day. Beyond what little local jobbing ensues there does not appear to be any outlet for the stuff, as there is no enquiry at all from Great Britain. Prospects for the future, therefore, do not look promising, and those who bought up the stock of old in the spring cannot feel cheerful. With regard to the stock attempts are made from time to time to work it down, and so far have not met with very gratifying success. We understand that there have been transactions with confectioners and pastry men at pretty low figures, but could not learn the exact quotations. It was gathered, however, that it was inside of 6c., and we heard to-day of further transactions on this basis.

CHEESE—There was nothing at all to note to day regarding the market, which has continued dull on spot ever since the opening of the week, and may be classed as about steady, with an easy undertone. However, country operations show no great variation, and from what can be gathered were legitimate enough, but there is no new business of any kind to report, and a lack of encouragement from the other side, which always has its effect on the market. As to values, we cannot advance anything as positive, but, basing our figures on country operations, we think they can stand pending further developments. Finest western, colored, 8¼ to 8⅜c.; finest western, white, 8 to 8⅛c.; finest western, white, 8 to 8⅛c.; townships white and States, 7¾ to 8c.; French country makes, 7¾ to 8c.

MONTREAL NOTES.

The Moffat Packing Co. is a new company just started in this city. They are rigging up just now for tomatoes, and we believe intend to put up a brand second to none. Mr. Moffat is well-known to the wholesale and retail trade of Canada, having represented the Johnston Fluid Beef Co. and W. Clark, latterly the Canada Meat Packing Co., for a number of years. This being the case, together with his years of practical experience previous to his "trials on the road," we will expect that the Moffat Packing Co.'s goods will be of first quality. And they will meet with success.

Mr. L. E. Morin, of this city, who is a member of the Gaspe Fishing Company, received a communication informing him that the fishing is very poor just now in that station, and for three weeks the catch has been barely sufficient for local consumption. The rain is almost ceaseless, so that the fish can only be dried with great difficulty. Fish is so scarce that merchants have come from Halifax and other central ports of Nova Scotia to buy all that they can find. On the north coast, or Canadian Labrador, the catch has been a complete failure and most of the fishermen have already returned from sea with hardly enough fish to keep themselves and families through the winter.

FRAUDULENT PORK ENTRIES

A number of seizures have been made of barrelled pork which has been entered at certain ports of the Dominion as being the "product of hogs weighing not less than 200 pounds, and containing not more than sixteen pieces to the barrel," which class of heavy pork comes under a special customs classification. Upon examination, however, it was found that the pork thus designated contained more than sixteen pieces to the barrel and was cut from other portions of the hog than provided for in the tariff item under which they were entered. In other cases it was found that the original brand upon the pork barrel had been obliterated and a new brand placed thereon, in order to bring it ostensibly within the meaning of the tariff regulation. The officials in the different ports of the Dominion have been instructed to look closely after frauds of this nature. A few seizures and confiscations of pork thus fraudulently entered will have a wholesome effect upon unscrupulous importers, and will afford that measure of protection to the Canadian producers which the new tariff was designed to extend to them.

The Murray is still on deck representing the sugar refining industry here. No sooner did W. E. Murray of the Canada go on his vacation than a Mr. Murray came temporarily in the interest of the Nova Scotia.

A Brooklyn grocer had a clerk who worked a little boodle racked of his own and he did it in the following manner: He called regularly every morning on a customer and took her order. When he delivered the goods he entered them in her pass book, which never reached the store. He made it a practice to charge an extra price for almost every article delivered, while he entered the correct amount in his order book, from which the amount were copied into the ledger account kept at the store. On the first of each month the amounts charged in the pass book were figured up, and the account paid. The clerk handing in the amount of the bill as it appeared in the ledger, and keeping the balance which netted him from ten to twenty dollars a month. Last month the husband of the lady in question called at the store for his statement, which he paid. You can imagine his surprise when he discovered that his bill according to his pass book at home was nearly twenty dollars in excess of the amount paid according to statement rendered. Investigation was then made through all former accounts that had been paid, which showed that the boodle clerk had played his game well while it lasted. The clerk has been bounced. He should have been sent to jail.— Retail Grocer Advocate.

The following dialogue from a western town should be read and remembered by grocers:

Lady—Please send me a can of Diamond Baking Powder.

Grocer—We haven't got Diamond. Will send you this, which is the same.

Lady—How do you know it's the same?

Grocer—Well (stammering), we sell lots of this.

Lady—That don't make it as good. I've tried both and want Diamond. Good day.

Grocer—(Soloquizing), "Now, she will probably get her fruit for canning and sugar, etc., at ————," all because I did not have Diamond Baking Powder. I'll order at once.

THE MONTREAL GROCERS' PIC-NIC.

Was I at the Grocers' Pic-nic? Well, I guess so. Who was not there? All the grocers and their friends that had a clean shirt and a dollar in their pocket were there.

The day was all that could be desired, wet days are rare in the history of the Montreal grocers' pic-nic as the two C. P. R. special trains left the depot sharp on time with twenty-five hundred of the happiest mortals in Montreal, bound for Foster Park, on Brome lake. Lack of space prevents our describing this beautiful spot, but this we will say that once visited it is almost certain to be visited again. Charmingly situated in a hollow surrounded by many fine green fields and forests, it furnished with its modest length and breadth a grand variety of scenery.

There was no weary tramp to reach the grove, the train running right through the park, and fifteen minutes after the train came to a stand still, dozens of family parties were lunching under the trees.

Dinner was the first thought in every ones mind and soon the tables were filled with a hungry crowd. President Fraser took the head of the table with Ald. Gauthier, ex-president on his right and among others were: L. L. St. Arnould. of Chaput, Fils & Cie; W. Duckworth, of Turner, Rose & Co.; H. Laporte, of Laporte & Co.; Lauglois of Lauglois & Co.; Mr. Farguson, of the Montreal Biscuit Co.; and Mr. Geo. Wait.

The speakers were President Fraser, Ald. Gauthier, Judge Lynch, Geo. Wait, H. Laporte, A. Desjardins, J. J. Curran, M. P. and J. Monier.

Amusements during the day were many and varied. There was boating, dancing, the games, and last, but far from least, that peculiarly interesting pastime which divides people into couples.

The sports and games were very interesting, every event being well contested. The following being the result :—

Quoits—1, McPhee ; 2, Connaughton.

Quarter-mile race, bookeepers and salesmen—1, Taylor ; 2, Gauthier ; 3, Howard.

Railway—Thomas Gauthier, President; James E. Manning, S. D. Vallieres.

Finances—A. D. Fraser, President; B. Connaughton, A. Desjardins, Thomas Gauthier.

Judges—Geo. Robb, Knowlton, Judge W. W. Lynch, J. N. Davignon, J. C. Wilson, Ald. J. D. Rolland, A. D. Turner, Geo. Wait, L. L. St. Arnauld, H. Laporte, Chas. Langlois.

THE GROCER IN THE NORTH-WEST.

Mr. G. Hector Clemes, representing the CANADIAN GROCER and GENERAL STOREKEEPER and BOOKS AND NOTIONS, meritorious class publications issued in Toronto by Mr. J. B. McLean, is in town in the interest of these papers. We hope he will find our merchants willing to patronize them.—The Herald, Calgary, N.W.T., July 31. The Herald's advice seems to have been taken, for our representative found the enterprising business men of that thriving town ready to patronize him.

The Calgary Tribune, Aug. 1, says: "Mr. G. Hector Clemes besides being an energetic business man can sing a good comic song, as he proved at last night's smoking concert, His grip advertising the CANADIAN GROCER, HARDWARE, BOOKS AND NOTIONS, is a great advertising medium."

The contractors for the Toronto corporation supply of oats, hay and straw are P. McIntosh & Son. In May last they were awarded the contract for supplying oats at 37 cents a bushel until November 1. Notwithstanding the fact that oats are now selling at from 45 to 46 cents a bushel, McIntosh & Son are making money out of their contract. Before undertaking to supply the oats they took the precaution to get control of more than the city will require at about 35 cents.

Offer for sale all grades of REFINED SUGARS and SYRUPS of the well-known brand of

Redpath

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday s yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

JOHN BAKER EDWARDS, P.L.D., D.C.L., F.C.S.,

Public Analyst for the District of Montreal, and Professor of Chemistry.

CHEMICAL LABORATORY, MEDICAL FACULTY, McGILL UNIVERSITY.

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Company:

GENTLEMEN,—I have taken and tested a sample of your "EXTRA GRANULATED" Sugar, and find that it yielded 99·88 per cent. of Pure Sugar It is practically as pure and good a Sugar as can be manufactured.

Yours truly,

G. P. GIRDWOOD.

A large consignment of our New Alaska Pattern Granite, in both plain and decorated, just arrived. Some staple assortments of good Seconds also on hand. New lines of China Tea Sets, Toilets, etc., now open for inspection. Goods both in packages and open. Please give us a call.

HECK'S COLUMN.

Leaving Winnipeg we pass through a fine country, here and there settled, but in most places unoccupied. Arriving at Portage La Prairie, which the Manitoba and North Western as well as C. P. R. run into, we see the foundation of another fine town. At present there is an abundance of merchants, scattered through the place, all making a fair living. The town is steadily increasing in population, the farm lands being worked, making its financial success sure. They are also putting in an electric light plant which will improve the appearance of the place greatly. The merchants are looking forward to a good trade this fall.

Brandon is our next stop. Here's a town or so called city, which we have all heard more or less about, built as it is on a sloping plain, close to the Assinaboine river. The merchants all are pushing men, and the town should succeed. The Assinaboine river would if dammed at this place make an immence manufacturing town of Brandon. There is some talk of doing this, but as yet nothing definate has been done in the matter. At Griswold a few miles west of this place, there are a few business places, but so far it is nothing but a small country town. Further on is Oak Lake, a trifle larger than the former town but about on the same stand point of progress, although things look a little brisker. Then we reach Virden, the last town west on C. P. R., of any importance in Manitoba. The farming country around here is very fine, and what merchants are located here are believed to be doing well. Proceeding into the North West Territories Moosomin, is reached. Here a few Mounted Police are stationed to search trains for liquor and look after things in general on the boundary line. The merchants here say things are very quiet at present. Some of them it will be remembered, were burnt out about the first of June last. These men are at present occupying small buildings, and are pushing ahead their new stores, which they expect to enter about the middle of Sept. next.

G. H. C.

The Inland Revenue Department has recently issued a bulletin of about thirty pages which is devoted exclusively to the subject of baking powder and which shows that the majority of the goods in the market are adulterated and unfit for use. Prof. A. McGill, who has had charge of this important work for the Government, says that "imperial baking powder is an excellent baking powder." A word to the sensible housekeeper should be sufficient.

IMPOSSIBLE!
So say Doctors, to say too much in favour of St. Leon Water. It puts down Bright's Disease and Diabetes, as water quenches fire. Cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, etc., completely if drank freely and rubbed in the skin.

SILVER STAR STOVE PASTE.

The following is the universal verdict of all who have used or sold it:

HAMILTON, APRIL 25th, 1890.

Messrs. F. F. DALLEY & Co.,

GENTLEMEN:—In thus ordering a fresh supply of your SILVER STAR STOVE PASTE we cannot but express our appreciation of the goods and congratulate you on having been able to place on the market an article so superior in every respect to anything we have heretofore been able to get.

As we use it on the stoves in the wareroom, we know personally its good qualities—no dust, a quick polish, always ready and the work is done in the time it would take to prepare the Dome or other hard stove polishes, and one of the best features about it is that it is so clean to handle.

If a man sells us an inferior article we don't forget to tell him about it, and on the same principle when a firm gives us an Extra good one we believe in letting them know that we appreciate it.

We remain,
Respectfully yours,
J. WALLACE & SON.

When writing to our advertisers please inclose the above.

SOLUS. SOLE PRESERVER

Will preserve the soles of boots or shoes, and render them perfectly waterproof. One application to a pair of new shoes will double their wearing qualities.

Two-sized tins, 15 and 25 cents. Will cost you $1.20 and $2.00 per dozen.

We also manufacture the best line of Wigwam Slippers, and Lumberman's Oil Tanned foot wear in Canada

BEST SOAP

Which has a world-wide reputation of being the best lard soap made; noted for its PURITY and QUALITY. Hundreds of Soap Manufacturers have tried for years to imitate and discover the process by which it is made—but all have met with signal failure. No soap ever made has the same Washing Powers. Millions of families, mechanics, railroad engineers, railroad men will attest to this fact.

CIGAR BOXES BOTTOMLESS.

The precautions that have from time to time been taken to protect the revenue derivable from cigars, must in their cumulative effect make dealing in such stock a matter of hourly solicitude to tobacconists. The requirement that all sales must be made from the original package, made a change in stock-keeping and stock-showing methods that was a cause of loss and trouble. This, however, was not so unreasonable as a clause in last session's amendment to the Inland Revenue Act, the clause which makes it penal to own or use for any purpose a cigar box that has been emptied of its original contents. This second requirement of the Act is a natural sequence of the first. By the first, the box was made the sole legal receptacle of stock, and was looked upon as a guarantee that the stock was not contraband. But the guarantee was unsatisfactory in this respect, that when emptied of its lawful contents, it might be filled with smuggled cigars. Thus finality had to be further approached by the amendment requiring all emptied cigar boxes to be destroyed. There will be difficulty about this, however, and it will be hard to prove that in every case the box has been destroyed and has not been pressed into second service to hold smuggled cigars. The Department seems not to be in possession yet of any scheme whereby its officers may be assured a box has not been in use a second time for holding cigars. As soon as it comes into possession of a good one, there is little doubt the idea will be given legal enactment. If some of the ingenious Anarchists of Europe could be got to invent a cigar box that would at the same time be an infernal machine, the cut to a surer end would be greatly shortened for the Department. The thing could be wound up by the Collector so as to go off a half minute after the last cigar had been removed, thus giving time to the excited shop-keeper to get the legally doomed package into the back-yard. This valuable excise instrument would do more work for the revenue than all the active lynx-eyed men in the Inland service. The thing might do a little desultory killing now and then, but what of that compared with the gain ? We would have an Inland Revenue Department easy in its mind that one insidious means of smuggling had been made an exploded method.

But until some such agency is discovered, the Department has evidently concluded its last regulation must be virtually given up. That's where the Department is to blame. It shouldn't have put cigar-boxes under legal ban until it had the sure machinery for carrying out its will, or bill. Seeing that it hasn't, however, it has been graciously pleased to license a particular evasion of its own wise but premature enactment. It has given permission to the trade to preserve the cigar-boxes intact in all respects but one, that one being the bottom of the boxes. The bottom, however, is not to be spared. The displeasure of the Department against those who asked the whole box, will be propitiated by the removal from every empty box of its original bottom. It is hard to make out why the Department puts the stress of its bureaucratic rage upon this particular part of cigar-boxes. The bottom has no such excise significance as the top has, where the label covers the whole breadth of lid. If any part had to be destroyed, one would suppose it would be that bearing the certificate of duty paid. But no, what is at variance with reason and usage is what we must look for from the Inland Revenue Department in all its tobacco regulations.

LEGAL MODES OF COLLECTING.

British law is a very jealous guardian of the private rights of individuals. The privacy of a man's legitimate business affairs is one of those rights, and can be safely invaded only by legal process, which necessitates a legally certified statement that the privacy covers a condition of things that is wrong in the eye of the law. The informal public declaration of such statement, independently of the truth or gravity of the charge, gives good ground for an action for libel or slander. So that it is possible for a man, publicly reported to be guilty of certain wrong doing, to obtain damages against the circulator of such report, and yet be afterwards brought up and punished for the offence which was irregularly though truly alleged against him. A man's private affairs are indeed well hedged round with the divinity of the law. Many acts that appear to be morally justified are construed as legal offences against privacy and are punished, sometimes severely.

The publishing of a person's indebtedness may be a transgression of the sort we speak of. It may be considered an injury to the character, business or social standing of the debtor, which not the most aggravating circumstances of the debt may warrant the creditor in inflicting. There is no doubt a legal as well as an illegal way of dealing with such indebtedness, and the way of publishing it is not unlikely to be held an illegal one. There is a case in point to which reference was made in a paragraph of our last issue. An injunction was taken out to restrain a collecting agency from carrying out a threat to post a certain debt for sale. That injunction, granted until the 5th inst., has since been continued till the close of vacation. The legal question will be likely to come up then for argument. If it should be decided that such a mode of disposing of debts is an illegal one, the decision will have important significance for business men. It will deprive some collective agencies of one of their most formidable resources against the dun-proof debtor.

A collecting mechanism that is apt to be as satisfactory as any attainable under the law is furnished by association. Each trade association should have a list in which are enrolled the names of people whom members have found prone to evade their debts. This list should be a convenient source of reference to all the members. It will be a warning to those not yet bitten that such people are biters. Being the property of a corporate body, it is like any other private property, it is privileged. It is not publicly available, and therefore slanders no one. For all the members of the association to know of a man's bad paying record is no more than for all the members of a firm to know of it through their experience of dealing with him. Such knowledge is private property to the concern possessing it, and as the basis of a want of confidence in any particular customer seems undoubtedly legal. Such a fact adds to the reasons why traders should organize. It makes more valuable the selecting principle which an association may provide itself with, to protect its members against the risk of a bad lot of credit custom. If private collecting agencies are to be disarmed of one of their chief sources of strength, the system of making a grand list of incorrigible debtors should be pushed, and organization is the only mode of pushing it. The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, and other bodies possessing delinquent lists are apt to find increased use for them and increased zeal on the part of contributors to them.

ALCOHOL IMPORTERS AND THE DUTY.

At a meeting held in the Toronto board of trade rooms, on Friday afternoon, the entire jobbing drug trade of the Dominion being represented personally or by letter, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted :—

Whereas alcohol, as a solvent or preservative of the active principles of many medicines, is an article of prime necessity in carrying on the trade which we supply ;

And whereas it is subject to the enormous tax of 1,000 per cent. by way of customs duty if imported from abroad, or 650 per cent. by way of excise if produced at home, that is to say, that what may be bought for 33 cents in bond abroad is liable to $3.30 customs duty, or $2.14½ excise if made in Canada ;

And whereas the regulations requiring potable spirit to be kept two years before being sold are wholly unnecessary in the case of high wines required for chemical industrial purposes and have been used to create what is practically a monopoly, whereby existing firms are enabled to demand prices giving profits in excess of the average of other trades where competition is unfettered ;

And whereas the direct effect of the present state of affairs has been

1. To increase the price to the sick of a large number of medicines, at a time when they can least afford to pay a tax only intended to be collected on luxuries.

2. It has destroyed many promising chemical industries.

3. It stands as a bar against the development of many of the higher branches of technical arts and manufactures.

For which and other cogent reasons resolved, that an effort should be made to secure a supply of alcohal for use in medicine and the arts at reasonable rates in proportion to its actual cost of production.

Resolved, that Messrs. George Rutherford, John Henderson, A. B. Evans, J. W. Knox, Webb, James Douglass, with first-named as convener, and with power to add to their number, be a committee to draft an agreement between drug firms willing to buy monthly specified quantities, and distillers who will supply them at equal rates for all.

Resolved, that Messrs. R. W. Elliot, John Kerry, Henry Lyman and A. B. Evans, with first-named as convener, and with power to add to their number, be a committee to represent to the Government how many lines of goods might be made from spirits paying a reasonable rate of duty, without interfering with the revenue derived from portable spirits.

THE RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association met on Monday evening in their room in Richmond Hall. The following members were present : Messrs. Benwick, Barron, Roberts, Westren, Williamson, Thackray, Saunders, Booth, Mills, Wilson, McCulloch, Partridge, Clarke. Mr. Mills the president, was in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted, as were those of a subsequent meeting of the Executive Committee, which reported in favor of authorizing the delinquent list for another six months.

NEW MEMBERS.

Albert Shaw, proposed at the last meeting was elected at this. Mr. Mitchell of Wellesley St., and Mr. A. Jones of Yonge St., were proposed by Mr. Thackray, and upon motion of Mr. Berwick, seconded by Mr. Roberts, the rule of election was suspended and the two nominess were admitted to membership.

THE PICNIC.

The picnic committee was not prepared to report.

THE PEDLARS' LICENSE FEES.

The report of the committee which had charge of the pedlars' by-law amendment proposal, reported that some of the recommendations submitted to the council had been adopted in whole or in part, and the peddling nuisance was therefore modified. The full particulars of the points gained were given in our issue of the date of the proceedings. The report was received.

THE NEWS' MISTAKE.

The Chairman reported that he had called on the Evening News to ask that a correction be inserted in that paper of a confusion made by it between a collecting agency and the Association, in which the Association was represented as the defendant in a case wherein it was accused of threatening to post an overdue account for sale. The paper made some amends in a paragraph printed after the call.

TIME OF MEETING.

Moved by Mr. Clarke, seconded by Mr. McCulloch, that the time of meeting hereafter be in the evening. Carried.

EARLY CLOSING.

Mr. Clarke referred to an article in last week's GROCER in reference to early closing. He thought that a petition should be circulated to bring the grocers together in an agreement to close at 8 o'clock. Mr. Partridge thought the idea a good one. Said he would close at 7 o'clock as soon as the fruit season was over, and would close on Wednesday afternoons next summer, no matter who did not. At present he allowed half his hands out one night, and the other half next night, but this was unsatisfactory. He believed that the fruit season should be a period of exception to the 7 o'clock arrangement. Rather close on Wednesday afternoon, and keep open a little later in the evening. In these ideas most of the members concurred, that June, July and August be months wherein Wednesday afternoon be always a holiday. The excursions are numerous on that day. Mr. Mills felt that Saturday afternoon from one to six was becoming duller yearly. Moved by Mr. Clarke, seconded by Mr. Partridge that the grocers agitate in the proper time and manner for a Wednesday half holiday next June, July and Aug. Carried.—The meeting then adjourned.

PIC-NIC QUESTIONS.

After the adjournment of the Association the pic-nic committee held a session of about an hour and-a-half. The members were the same as those reported above at the monthly meeting, with the addition of Mr. Frank Britton and Mr. Binnie. The first question dealt with was a protest on the plea of overage against the first prize in the boys' race being given to the winner, D. Colville. A certificate from the registry office satisfied the committee that the winner was eligible to take the prize. The judges' verdict, reported in our columns, was therefore sustained.

The protests against James Ross' eligibility were next considered. He was ruled out of the first prize for the first sack race on the ground that he was neither a grocer's son nor a grocer's employe, a condition specified under the item in the programme. Therefore Thos. Shirley came in for first prize, and W Milner for second. He was ruled out of the first prize in the walking race on the ground that he was not a traveller. To A. E. Skinner, therefore, was assigned first prize and Wm. Parke second.

James Milner had won three prizes, a first and two seconds, but the printed regulations debarred a winner from a title to more than one first and one second, or two prizes altogether, no matter of what denomination. The question the committee discussed was first whether this competitor was eligible to enter for certain of the events, and second whether a man was obliged to take the two prizes that he won first in the programme order, or should he be given the option of saying what two of the prizes he would choose. A considerable amount of time was spent in putting the two views of the question, and the matter was finally left to the adjustment of a committee made up of the president, the secretary and the treasurer. These were to satisfy themselves of the eligibility of Mr. Milner, and with the advice of competent sporting authorities to settle what two prizes should be awarded the winner, if his eligibility were not prejudiced by the former inquiry.

The rolling tub race was protested in a note to the Secretary, but the protest should have been made before the event was tried. Also, the order for the prize had been issued to the winner to whom the judges had given the first prize ticket.

The protest in behalf of W. H. Britton, against the second donkey race, was thrown out, and the decision of the judges maintained.

The fat man's race not having taken place, owing to the lack of one more competitor, it was resolved to refund the entrance fees to the two competitors who had appeared for the race.

The following pic-nic accounts were passed:

Police	$ 1.50
Bill Posting	4 50
Tent	10.00
Printing	23.25
The "World"	6.95
Grounds	25.00
Tickets, badges, etc	33.94
Eggs	75
Donkeys	57.52
Refreshments	43.99

Other accounts were mentioned, but not all were in yet. The Chairman and the treasurer were appointed a committee to pay accounts. Mr. F. Britton, seconded by Mr. Barron, moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Saunders, for his very satisfactory catering. —Carried.

Mr. Partridge moved, and Mr. Williamson seconded, a vote of thanks to the judges. —Carried.

The gate receipts at the pic-nic were $183.55, $171 below what they were last year, a difference entirely owing to the postponement.

The surplus goods are to be disposed of at a meeting to be held in Mr. Mills' store on Thursday night. The prizes are presented as certified applicants appear for them.

HAMILTON GROCERS' OUTING

The jolliest, happiest crowd of people that could be imagined was that which went from Hamilton to Oakville on the 6th inst.—the grocers' of that city and their employees', their friends and their employees' friends, and a very large rerpesentation of their customers—and a glorious time they had of it; in numbers—well, say 2,500, that's not any too large an estimate, and there might have been more. The steamers of the Hamilton Steamboat Company took them down. The first party went by the morning boat, and consisted of members of the committee and a fair crowd of people. At 2:30 the Modjeska took an immense party and left several hundred for the Mazeppa, which followed about half an hour later. On the 5 o'clock boat, the Macassa, another party went, and at about 9 o'clock in the evening the Modjeska made a special trip with a large crowd The success of the event succeeded even the most sanguine expectations, and the grocers' think that they can give pointers to any society or body of men who think of running an excursion or holding a pic-nic. It speaks well for the committee, too, that the day's jovialities passed off most satisfactorily. Everyone is delighted, and that is what the pic-nic was given for. It not unfequently happens that pic-nickers come home tired out and disgusted, but such was not the case at Oakville. Many there where who were tired enough when they got home but were all happy and well satisfied with their outing. Mayor McLellan and his estimable wife were there, ex-Mayor Doran and Mrs. Doran, aldermen, school trustees, members of the bar, clergymen, physicians — representatives of every respectable class of people. Mr. W. H. McLaren, Chairman of the Committee, had a splendid lot of workers around him, and he needed them, too, for it takes a lot of energetic men to attend to the wants of such a crowd and do it in such a way as it was done in this case.

The pic-nic at Oakville was entered into with a will shortly after the Modjeska arrived with her load about 3.30 o'clock. A splendid programme of games had been prepared for old and young—contests in which all who wished might enter. The results of these were :—

One hundred yards race—1st, J. Pearson; 2nd, Smith Wills.

Hop, step and jump—1st, Smith Wills, 32 ft. 6 inches ; 2nd, J. Pearson, 31 ft. 9 inches.

Sack race—1st, F. Close; 2nd, Wm. Beckerson.

Ladies' race—1st, Mrs. Trimble; 2nd, Mrs. Ingram.

450 yards race—1st, George Ryckman ; 2nd, J. Nicholson.

Egg race—1st, C. Bremner; 2nd, D. Martin.

Standing jump—1st, C. Hagerty ; 2nd, J. Pearson.

Girls' race—1st, Miss McMannus ; 2nd, Miss Fitspatrick.

Fat mens' race—1st, G. Beckett ; 2nd, P. Croy.

Biscuit-eating contest—1st, F. Gordon; 2nd, Wm. Beckerson.

Three-legged race—1st, G. Britt and J. Blakeson ; 2nd, C. Smith and J. Freeman.

Shoe race—1st, J. Sterling ; 2nd, C. Martin.

Travelers' race—1st, A. Golden ; 2nd, A. Close.

Blindfold race—1st. A. Golden ; 2nd, R. Moncur.

Greasy pig race—1st, W. White.

There was also a baseball match between the wholesale and the retail men. The retailers winning.

In the tug-of-war the teams were : Retail team· Messrs. Day, Kirkpatrick, Hunt, M. Morris, H. Morris, Arnold, Nichol, McBride, Stevenson, Hustin. Wholesale team—Messrs. Hall, Beckett, Golden, Tunnis, Croy, Gow, Hazell, Smith, Perry and Christian. The wholesale men won.

The music furnished by the band was excellent. The bandsmen were entertained at Burke's hotel in good style.

The excursionists returned by the afternoon and evening boats, and the special which left Oakville at about 10.30, and got home : out midnight.

Statistician—"There has been a falling off of about $100,000 in the sales of oleomargerine. How do you account for it ?"

Practical Grocer—"There's been too much country butter labelled oleomargerine in order to make it sell."

One of the signs of the prosperity of the retail trade is the number of our readers who now go off for one to four weeks' vacation annually. Not very long ago only wholesale men and manufacturers could afford to leave their business. A brief vacation has also become a necessity to many of us. A few years ago we jogged along in a quiet easy going way. Never worried. Went to bed early and slept late. Now business competition has almost reversed the old order of affairs. If we would go a head at full speed let us take a short rest in the dull season.

CANNED PEAS AGAIN.

There has been a good demand from jobbers for canned peas this week and packers have sold several cars. The price seems to have been chiefly about $1. The packers are somewhat independent in their views owing to favorable prospects in the American markets. A number of successful sales were made there this spring by Canadians and now with prices much higher they look forward to a demand from there. The New York Bulletin says:—Baltimore commission firms have lately been reporting a freer movement there of canned peas, and Saturday's letters from that point indicated that the reports are well founded. The significant fact was mentioned that a considerable amount of stock has been taken by or for the account of New York State and Western packers. The prices paid were $1.05@$1.10 for standard marrows, 90@95c. for seconds, $1.20@$1.25 for standard Junes and $1 for seconds. From these purchases it is inferred that the State and Western packs are short, and the inference gains support from information received as to the position of some packers in those localities. We learn of one New York concern that has had to pro-rate imperative orders on the basis of two-thirds of the quantity originally booked and to turn conditional orders down. Other cases of similar experience are noted, but for obvious reasons the situation is kept as much in the dark as possible. Enthusiastic Baltimoreans are offering to wager that standard marrows will be up to $1.25 within the next month, and among the local trade the goods are well thought of, although perhaps not up to the Baltimore point of extreme confidence.

CANADIAN HOPS.

The outlook for growers of Canadian hops is much brighter than for some time past, owing to the discouraging reports of the English and Continental crops. Last year the German crop was unusually large and that of England above the average, whilst the United States crop was good. Consequently this market was glutted early in the season with fine German and American hops, ranging from 14c up to 20c and when the Canadian product was offered prices were so low that many growers refused to sell, although even lower figures had to be accepted later on. Fine Bavarian hops of 1889 growth would now cost 28½c. laid down here, and it is thought the new crop will cost still higher prices. Regarding the Canadian crop, advices from Picton in the West and Danville in the East speak of a good average crop, which at present bids fair to meet with a good demand at remunerative values, owing to the higher cost of the foreign article. Some holders of Canadian hops of last year's growth have withdrawn their offerings believing in higher prices later on. Canadians are quoted at 16c. to 20c. but even at the latter figure the quality is not very fine.—Trade Bulletin.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS ABROAD.

We have heard diverse opinions expressed as to the real value of the commercial traveler, or "drummer," in the home markets, and have had well authenticated instances pointed out to us of business built up chiefly by aid of these enterprising agents, and of businesses prospering quite independently of such assistance. However much the "drummer" may be a controversial subject at home, there is no question of his value, when properly trained and properly equipped, abroad. Even were we in this country to refuse so much to his credit, other nations readily concede his usefulness as a commercial adjunct. Indeed, so highly is he valued by leading European countries that certain of the governments have made him a special study, have put the whole consular and diplomatic machinery in motion on his behalf, and have devoted considerable government literature in discussing him, his ways, his trials and his opportunities.

The latest effort of this description is the publication by the British Foreign Office of dispatches from Her Majesty's representatives abroad, giving the laws of the various countries in which they are located respecting commercial travellers. These refer to extra-European countries, and show from the diversity of regulations disclosed how necessary such a comprehensive grouping of the information was. In a number of countries there are no restrictions on commercial travelers; they are as free to pursue their business as any other foreign visitors. Although these countries do not take rank as advanced nations, from a commercial point of view, their liberality in this direction, whether accident or foresight, is undoubtedly advantageous to them. The countries thus distinguished are Chili, United States of Colombia, Ecuador Egypt, Morocco, Persia and Peru. Japan also might be included, were it not that under existing treaties no foreigners can travel in the interior of the country for trade. In the open ports they are allowed full liberty. In Mexico the Federal Government levies no taxes, but certain of the provincial authorities require commercial travelers to notify their arrival, and to take out monthly licenses. For these the fees vary from two and a half to twenty dollars. In Buenos Ayres, where the enterprising "commercials" must lately have been enduring trials quite outside of their usual experiences, they are compelled to take out a broker's license, "inasmuch as their occupation or business is no other than the itinerant sale of merchandise in consideration of a commision which they receive from their employers." This license does not extend beyond the capital. In the provinces of the Argentine Republic the trayeler becomes subject to local regulations, and these are so varied and so difficult to trace that the British Government does not attempt to explain them. Brazil makes little account of the commercial travelers, drawing no distinction, in fact, between the dignified "drummer" seeking orders for cases of goods by the score and the petty peddler tramping the country with his small wares and notions. Nor has the British Government been successful in its efforts to show the Brazilian authorities the difference between the commercial traveler and his less distinguished fellow-trader.

The reports show that the "drummer" in this country has been the cause of much trouble and litigation, even bringing the State laws into collision with the Federal Constitution. The Maryland authorities, for instance, embodied a provision in its State Code that that no person not being a permanent resident could act as drummer without taking out a license which cost three hundred dollars. In Tennessee drummers were either fined or imprisoned when they declined to be taxed or take out a license. The Inter-State Commerce Act, however, pretty well relieved "drummers" of further troubles of the above character. In the report under notice, Texas, of all our States, is named as the only one where a license is required, this being in the shape of annual fees of fifty dollars. —N. Y. Bulletin.

POINTS ABOUT ADVERTISING

John Wanamaker says: "I never in my life used such a thing as a poster, or dodger, or handbill. My plan for fifteen years has been to buy so much space in a newspaper and fill it up with what I wanted. I would not give an advertisement in a newspaper of 500 circulation for 5,000 dodgers or posters. If I wanted to sell cheap jewelry or run a gambling scheme I might use posters, but I would not insult a decent-reading public with handbills. The class of people who read such things are poor material to look to for support in mercantile affairs. I deal directly with the publisher. I say to him, 'How long will you let me run a column of matter through your paper for $100 or 500?' as the case may be. I let him do the figuring, and if I think he is not trying to take more than his share, I give him the copy I lay aside the profits on a particular line of goods for advertising purposes. The first year I laid aside $3,000; last year I laid aside and spent $40,000. I have done better this year, and shall increase that sum as the profits warrant it. I owe my success to the newspapers, and to them I shall freely give a certain profit of my yearly business."—Indian Rubber World.

As a want of uniformity exists at different ports in the treatment for duty or otherwise of packages containing "grease" and other similar articles, a circular has been forwarded to all collectors notifying them that "all packages in which goods are commonly placed for home consumption, and every package being the first receptacle or covering enclosing goods for purpose of sale" are, whether they contain free goods or not, subject to duty at their actual or proper value. The only packages (covering goods whether free or dutiable) which are extempt from duty are "the usual and ordinary packages in which goods are packed for exportation only, according to the general usage and custom of trade."

Secretary Plewes of the Dominion Millers' Association says we have the finest wheat crop in ten years. All other crops excepting oats are also very good. Business men he says are looking forward to a good fall trade.

Mr. George Robertson, of Kingston, was on the Toronto market this week.

Mr. J. E. Baillie picked up 500 bushels prime white beans for export this week at an average of $1.65.

The item in our last issue on indurated fibre ware become mixed up in some way with a hardware notice which gave it rather a ridiculous meaning. While indurated fibre ware will stand almost any test as to strength and durability, we believe the manufacturers do not claim it will withstand the firey elements. The fire bucket manufactured by them is for holding water, in factories and mills where fire is liable to spread so quickly that a bucket of water at hand might save much valuable property.

The unrevised statement of inland revenue for July shows the total amount accrued during the month to be $406,194, as against $639,071 in July last year. The decrease is entirely under the head of spirits, the duty on this commodity having fallen from $361,296 to $129, 512. It would be interesting to discover the reason for this decline in the consumption of the ardent. Perhaps lager is the more popular beverage this year, or perhaps the increased prices which inaugurated in the beginning of July, when the two year's bond requirement came in force may have more to do with the decline.

An application has been forwarded to the Customs Department by Captain J. P. Whitelaw, owner and master of the American wrecking steamer, bearing his name, for permission to hunt and take whales in the gulf of Georgia, B. C. Capt. Whitelaw intends to use steam launches and the latest and most improved guns, of which he has obtained control. With these improved methods he thinks whaling can be made one of the most important industries of the province. No whaling has been done in the gulf of Georgia for the past seventeen years, as with the old fashioned methods adopted it could never be made to pay in the past.

The other evening Mrs. D. J. Lynch, wife of a leading general merchant at Hagersville together with her four little girls and her two sisters, the Misses Murphy, of Cayuga, were driving into Hagersville from the last named place, the horse shied quickly to one side, tipping the carriage over into a deep ditch. The beast, finding himself unable to rise, began to kick. Mrs. Lynch and two of the little girls received several marks about the head. One little girl, Seita, aged three years, received a severe kick just over the left eye, and died in a few minutes. The rest of the party, although badly shaken up, are in a fair way toward recovery.

While driving home from Wyoming the other night, Mr. D. M. Shields, Petrolia, grocer, had rather a startling adventure. When about midway between the Plympton townline and the 12th line of Enniskillen, about half past nine o'clock a man on foot asked him for a ride, and when in the rig, asked the time. Mr. Shields drew his gold watch from his pocket to reply, when the fellow made a grab for it. Failing to secure it, a tussel ensued, when both men fell out of the rig and finally into the ditch, Mr. Shields being fortunate enough to retain the upper side. Loosing his hold he made for the wagon, when the ruffian made for him again. Seizing the broken butt of a whip which was loaded, Mr. Shields dealt his assailant a heavy blow on the head which felled him to the ground. As the horse had started homeward, he then ran to regain the lines, and drove rapidly homeward. Mr. Shields has no idea as to the identity of his assailant, but as he is in the habit of going to Wyoming in the evening for produce, thinks it must have been some villain laying in wait for him.

BIG RAILROAD EARNINGS.

One would think by the great cry of United States railroad magnates that their was danger of Canadian roads bringing them to bankruptcy.

Poor's Manual gives the following : The total amount of gross earnings reported by the steam surface railroads in operation in the United States in 1889 equaled $992,856,856. If the gross earnings of the elevated railroads in the cities of New York and Brooklyn, $10,879,740, be added, the grand total amounts $1,003,736,596. This sum is 50 per cent. greater than the public revenues of the United States, and almost equal to the public debt of the United States. The figures show a healthy state of growth in gross earnings and a small reduction in the average ratio of expenses to earnings. Compared with 1888, gross earnings increased $43,480,326, to which increase the elevated roads contributed $1,245,478.

The largest increases in earnings occurred in States west of the Mississippi and east of the Rocky Mountains. The amount of net earnings for the year is a trifle smaller than in 1888. The floods in 1889 contributed largely to this. In 1889 the total investment was $9,680,942,249.

Of the 161,397 miles of railroad in operation at the close of the year 1889, 5,751 miles were constructed during the year. The rate of increase is 4.06 per cent. In 1889 there were 8,000 miles of railroad not in operation at the close of the companies' fiscal year. The tabulations presented in the manual for 1889 do not cover the same period as in 1888, owing to the adoption of the Interstate Commerce Commission's fiscal year by a large number of railroads throughout the country. If the railroad companies continued to report for the same fiscal years as formerly these great totals would be increased, and a conservative estimate places the probable earnings for the year under such conditions at $1,070,000,000.

The results as above should gratify the most grasping monopolist in the world but that Yankee "Paw" has no limit to its grasp seemingly. The N. Y. Central R. R. running from New York City to Buffalo, a little over 400 miles, reports gross receipts for ½ year about eighteen millions dollars, equal to the gross receipts of the G. T. R., C. P. R. and I. C. R. combined in the same time, and only one million less than the gross receipts of the Dominion government. If figures prove anything it must be jealousy alone that influences these attacks on Canadian roads.

GROCERIES.

The quantity of goods taken off this market inside of the week between this and our last issue represents an activity that is not to be complained of. There might be more "snap" to trade, even at this season, and there might be many degrees less vim than there is without any extraordinarily high or low level being reached. Business is rather satisfactory. Orders are given cautiously with respect to magnitude, as in the case of sugar or dried fruits, and they are hardly given at all in lines whose market is so problematical yet as is that of new salmon. The buying of tea is ruled by certain drawbacks in the character of the stock, which rather depress business in some popular lines. Rice and spices are in seasonable demand. Payments are unsatisfactory, owing, no doubt, to the strikes in the building trade in the early part of the season. At this time of the year a good many people are away and leave their grocers' accounts to accumulate until their return.

CANNED GOODS.

This has been a good summer for canned goods. The trade for which it has afforded the conditions was not calculated upon to do so much for the solution of the canned goods situation. Tomatoes are going on at their wonted rate and are firm at $1.20. Peas are also firm at $1.10, the bugbear of a large pack of new stock no longer being an alarming contingency. Corn is $1.10, with big sales at $1. The channels of trade now give easy egress to all vegetable stock. Strawberries, which are usually quiet at this season, are selling fast at large prices, which, however, are expected to be eclipsed before the year is out. The stock, indeed, may not last beyond the present year. There have been some enquiries for canned peaches, which are in light supply and held firmly in anticipation of a small pack this season. For 3's $3.25 is asked and for 2's $2.25. Lobsters are high, firm and scarce. They cannot now be made plentiful or weak, because the packing season closes on the 20th. Clover Leaf is expected to be in limited stock in a few days, an Crown has been mostly taken up. Canned salmon on spot is $1.50 to $1.65, and $1.70, the top figure being for the Horse Shoe and similar brands. In salmon for future delivery nobody appears to be sauguine enough to make offers. Reports have been conflicting, alternately good and bad. We have not allowed ourselves to be swayed in our estimate of the probabilities by all the utterances from the sources of production. There appears to be good reason for believing that the pack will be good, and that there will not be a scarcity of raw material. Our British Columbia pack promises to be large, but the reported shortage in the Alaska and Columbia river packs may leave a wider demand in the export market for our surplus, and so aid in bringing about fair prices. An Ottawa despatch says: The Minister of Marine and Fisheries, on Friday received a telegram from a departmental officer in British Columbia which states that the run of salmon this year is of a most extraordinary character, being fully equal to last year. Twenty thousand salmon were taken by three canneries on the 7th. This year's run upsets all the theories previously held in regard to the salmon. Heretofore one good season has invariably been followed by two poor ones. Last season was the best the salmon canneries ever had, and if the total pack this year is as large the old rule will not apply. The only reason that can be assigned for the increased run this year is that the effects of the good work done during the past four or five years at the Government fishery hatchery on the Fraser river are now beginning to manifest themselves.

The following comes by way of New York: "The Skeena river canneries are just now enjoying the best salmon run for years, but unfortunately cannot use all the fish owing to the shortness of hands. One cannery has had to throw away as many as 300 or 400 fish. On the Naas the run is not so good. The B. A. P. and the Standard head the pack on the Skeena, each having about 11,000 cases up; the other canneries on the river average about 8,000. On the Naas the average is 6,000 cases, and the packers are waiting for fish."

Messrs. D. W. Porte & Co. of this city received a communication on Monday from Mr. Ed. Porte, their representative in British Columbia He says that the salmon run on the Fraser is very good. He has had ten boats engaged for some time and these have taken on a daily average 200 fish each. He is fishing for stock to freeze, salt and ship here.

The noticeable feature of the season as to sales is that Frazer River is sold exclusively in England; Columbia River salmon almost exclusively in the United States.—American Grocer.

Mr. W. Boulter, Bay of Quinte Canning Co., was in town last Friday and sold eight cars canned goods. He got $2.25 for strawberries, red and black raspberries; 95c. for corn, $1 for peas, $2.60 for currants and gooseberries. He also reported two cars sold at Kingston on Thursday, and two for Winnipeg on Friday. Tomatoes sold in Kingston at $1.02½. He says all small fruits will be scarce. It is hard to say what tomatoes will be like, but they are looking well. Corn suffered from the wet spring and is still backward.

COFFEES.

A line of Rios went off on Monday at 20½c. This was a special case. The prices are firm at 22 to 24c, and are said to be stronger at points of production. A cable reports an advance of ¼c in coffees in Rio. The stiff prices of coffee have given a stimulus to the trade in tea, which can be got at very much the same prices and goes farther. There has been, however, a fair demand for all kinds of coffees from grinders and some lines have been cleared out.

The cable reports the result of the Batavia sale of coffee 25,000 piculs Preanger at 63 florins, last year's crop. The Dutch sale went off at 1c above valuation on good ordinary Java, and pale and yellowish ¼c above valuation.

DRIED FRUIT.

Wholesalers are now pushing trade to get the market clear for the receipt of new stock. In the country, however, dealers are buying sparingly and for the moment's needs merely, aiming to have their stocks bare when the new, cheaper and more in consumers' favor, comes on the market. This eagerness on the one hand and wariness on the other have not yet had the effect of weakening prices, as they naturally would be expected to do. What prevents that is the lowness of all stocks here. Currants are being taken off earlier this year, and already unimportant shipments, according to private advices from Patras, have been made to Trieste. The crop is also reported to be larger than usual. Prices here are unchanged. Bosnia Prunes are out of stock. There are a few French plums in quarter cases and bottles. Valencia raisins are in demand from outside points ; one car sold the other day for shipment to Montreal. In jobbing lots dealers are getting 7¾ to 8c off-stalk and 9c for select. Sultanas are moving at 10½c for common to 12c for choice.

Evaporated Apples

A letter to Watt & Scott from their Smyrna correspondents, July 16, says that the long and continuous drought, which has destroyed a great part of the products of the country, caused also great damage to the raisins, and particularly to the Sultanas, the quantity of which, it is now said, will not be over 50 to 60 per cent. of last year's. Elemes will probably be the same as last year, but the fruit will be smaller and parched. Figs will not be over 40,000 or 50,000 loads against 70,000 in 1889.

Dem Schisas, Patras, writing July 26, says: The currant crop is looking well in all the growing districts. It promises to be larger than last year's, and of very good quality. It is not likely to open low, as the new crop will come up on a bare market.

NUTS.

Stock is low here, but held at firm figures noted in Prices Current. The demand is low here, but nuts are likely to be high when it sets in, which it may be expected to do in about a month.

RICE AND SPICES.

Trade continues to be very good in rice and spices. There is no condition in the supply of the latter which is likely to affect the market in the near future. But the prices of rice may be expected to rise from their present point as soon as supplies held at the present time are exhausted, unless the new crop recruits outside supplies before that. Just now the great dearth of rice in Japan, one of the largest regions of rice-consumption, has grown to the point of famine, and large importations are being brought in from Siam, Cochin China and Burmah. This is stiffening the price of the product in all markets.

SUGAR.

The sugar trade has been a fairly active one. The shortcomings of the fruit crop have not closed the demand for sugar, nor have they made it specially dull. There is not, of course, the business transacted in sugar that a productive fruit year would have given rise to, but there is more than the demand which short crop fruit led people in trade to expect. Nevertheless, there has not been a sufficiently strong demand to give security to price, as there has been cutting in the lowest grade of brown sugar, that quality having been sold this week at 5⅛c. The quotation for dark yellows has been nominally from 5¼c. upward, but the shading noted above has been done. Raws are 5⅛ to 5¼c. Granulated is still 6⅞ to 7c. The local market derived a moments strength from an advance of 1-16c. on the New York market, but the sustenance of firmness was lacking in the business done here.

The Nova Scotia refinery has closed down for repairs.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Trinidad molasses in puncheons is worth 32 to 35c. The trade in molasses is mending, a good deal of stock having gone off the last few days. Some fine Barbadoes is offering at 37½c. In syrups there is a slow trade at quoted prices.

TEAS.

The want of the market continues to be low grade Japans of acceptable quality, the standard of last year's stock ruling the demand, as being the basis of criticism. The good value given then is looked for now, but has not arrived and evidently will not from this year's crop. The broken and trashy samples of the popular-priced grades are to some extent checking trade in Japans. A good demand continues for all low and medium grade Young Hysons at prices ranging from 16 to 20c. These are rather scarce, and prices are tending upward. There seems to be no doubt but that retailers will have to pay more for these goods than they have in the past. Greens are strong; round lots sold this week at prices that show a rise of 10 per cent. on the month. The China crop this year is said to be fine and heavy. The use of silver as currency in that country is a present accidental cause of higher prices. The large amount of the world's silver, 450,000 ounces, that the government of the United States is now authorized to issue notes for, has caused an advance in all the markets of the world, notably in London. It costs more to those who bring tea directly from China, while its conventional coin-value there remains the same.

A New York tea letter says: Market for all kinds is firm and a good business is being done at full values. Advices from China and Japan indicate an improvement later on. Quotations for laid down cost at principal Canadian cities range from 16 to 22c. as to grading. In Young Hysons at auction there is nothing selling under 12c. and the range for 4th to 1st and extras is 12 to 34c.

PETROLEUM.

Trade has begun to brighten as the daylight has begun to shorten. The prices have not changed this week, as crude has been steady.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

A fair, steady business is transacted. There is no special demand in any line, and prices have not undergone any change.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

There appears to be no old butter moving, although there is no lack of stock. The prices of old run from 4 to 5c. although the basis of quotation is not business, but the offering of holders. There is some inferior butter of the new make, which has been going begging for offers and which buyers have refused to pay 6c. for. It is made up of nearly grass and old butter, the old butter infusion having been mostly added at the retail stores. Dairy tubs are readily taken at 13 to 15c. and are not in two liberal supply. Large rolls have been bought in rather better supply this week, and have brought 13c. Pound rolls are wanted at 16 to 18c. and these prices are firm. Creamery rolls are 20 to 22c. Creamery tub is 18 to 20c. The leading characteristic of the market here is the scarcity of good grades. There is a lot of medium, but an insufficiency of prime. The Montreal market is full, and some good grades have gone westward from it.

Messrs. James Park & Son shipped a carload of medium grades the other day at 11c. The shipment was made up of early butter, the product of partly grass and partly stall or barnyard feeding.

Cheese goes very well at 9 to 9½c. There is no specially interesting market problems of which cheese is the object.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—The small stock in this market has been reduced by a collection from local holders for an order of 500 bushels. The order was made up at $1.65. There is a good export demand, and prices now range from $1.65 to $1.80, the former figure being paid for small lots.

DRIED APPLES — Values are uncertain, owing to the scarcity of stock, and the fitful nature of the demand. The price has been shifting from 5½ to 7c. lately.

EGGS—Are selling at 14c. in lots and 15c. in small quantities. These prices are not assured for any length of time, as stock is very freely supplied. The United States market is not so ravenous for the moment for Canadian eggs.

HAY—The chief receipts now are of the new make. In bales it goes at $9 to $9.50. The street arrivals of loose keep the market for baled rather dull.

HIDES — No change has been brought about by the week's business just passed. Receipts are few and prices firm. Cured are 6¼c., green cows' 6½c. for No. 1, 5½c. for No. 2, and 4½c. for No. 3.

HONEY—The new crop has begun to flow into the year's trade. It is abundant and good. The stock is now large, made up as it is of a heavy surplus of the '89 flow, and a fine instalment of this year's raising, which appearances indicate the bees' ability to follow up frequently and largely. In no other year in the memory of dealers has honey been taken on the market so early in large quantities. The low grades of honey, such as the basswood, are said to be a poor flow. Prices are unchanged, 9 to 12c for clean and 14 to 18c for sections. These dealers yet see no grounds for shading, although the stock is large. They trust to the growing favor in which honey is coming to be held, and the short fruit crop, to make a sufficiently capacious market.

HOPS—The trade in hops has not made any improvement in prices, as the stock holds out too well. They run from 8 to 14c.

OATS—Are down 45 to 46c. There seems to be more eagerness on the part of farmers to unload their remnants of last year's harvest than the prospect of this year's crop warranted us in looking for. There are more favorable reports abroad at present about the new oat crop, and these depress prices for old.

POTATOES—The market is now well supplied, and though the demand is sustained yet prices are rapidly declining. They are now $1.50 per barrel.

POULTRY—Chickens are in stronger receipt and in good demand at 50 to 60c. Ducks are 65 to 75c, and are rather scarce.

SKINS—Sheepskins are 65c. Calfskins are 8c for No. 1, and 6c for No. 2.

TALLOW—Is 2c for rough and 5½c for rendered.

WOOL—Is 21c, and in fairly good receipt.

FISH.

Absence at the different points of resort in summer has cut off a large portion of the fish dealer's trade. The fish that are consumed are largely those taken in the locality of resorts, either by sports or by resident fishermen. At all events, the demand for stocks supplied by large shipments has dwindled down. The stock on the market is therefore kept low. White fish and salmon are both very scarce at 6½ to 7c. Pickerel is in scant supply at 4 to 6c. Lake herring are $1.75 to $2 per hundred, by count. Salmon is in fair supply and in moderately good local demand. It is entirely of the British Columbia catch and brings 14 to 15c.

Messrs. D. W. Parte & Co. find the New York market now a good one for salmon on ice. They shipped a large order to that market this week.

GREEN FRUIT.

The green fruit trade is crowded into a smaller channel by the business that is done in our own small fruits, still there is a sufficiently large demand to work along with small stocks for the maintenance of high prices. Of case oranges there is now a very limited stock. There are some Sarrentos selling at $7.50, and some Rodis at the same figure. But the market for Jamaicas is now on the verge of opening here, and some small shipments have been received. They go at $11 to $12. The stock will soon be ample for the trade that will begin to widen out from the beginning of next month throughout the fair season. Lemons are $9.50 in lots and $10 in single cases. They are scarce, and in steady strong demand. Stocks are low, because it is now the policy of all classes of buyers to prepare for the advent of the new crops of Malaga and Verdelli at first, and in about five weeks those of the staple Palermo and Messina cut. Nobody wants a large stock of high priced old fruit when new fruit is going cheap. Consequently New York supplies are light, scarcity is created and prices are high. Bananas run from $1 to $2.

Mr. James Breen sold a carload of bananas on Monday at $1.10 to $1.15.

MARKETS—Continued.

demand continues at its present pace before supplies of raw material come in freely, stocks will go down and prices up. Already prices are very firm. Smoked meats are receiving undiminished attention. Hams are firmer than ever, and bacon is getting a wider call. There is an occasional large deal in barrel pork. Hogs have ceased to arrive, but it is thought only until the harvest is off, when receipts will be renewed.

BACON—Long clear is 8½c. Bellies are 10½ to 11c. Backs are 11 to 11½c. Roll is 10c.

HAMS—Smoked are 12½c. Sweet pickled are 11 to 11½c.

LARD—Is 10c. in 20 lb. pails is 10c, and in 50 lb. tubs is 9c.

MESS PORK—Is $15 for heavy and $17 for short cut.

SALT.

The demand for salt at present is limited. The demand from packers and domestic curers of meat is low. The retail dealers make about the strongest draft on stocks at present. The hide-men also are an important portion of the buying element. In the extremely hot weather the ice-cream makers create a considerable demand, as salt is used not in that product but in the process for preparing the cream. Prices are kept down by the competition of Liverpool refiners, who have done a good deal of cutting lately. Although Canadian makers have declined to meet their English competitors in the cut, they find prices will flatten in spite of them. Common barrel salt is $1.55 to $1.60. Coarse sacks are 80 to 85c., and quarter sacks of dairy are 55c.

The Toronto Salt Works report the sale of 2 cars bbl. salt at $1.40; 2 car sacks at 70c.; 1 car dairy at $1.25. The same establishment shipped 100 cases on Monday of its Acme, always siftable table salt.

DRY GOODS.

This week has not kept pace with its forerunners of the last three weeks in dry goods sales. Still there has been buying, and, though limited, everybody concerned knows the reason to be the great caution long exercised to keep trade within the financial bounds fixed by the hard times. Dry goods men are better pleased to hear of good crops everywhere than they are to do credit business on the precarious basis at present under trade.

MONTREAL

MONTREAL MARKETS.

AUG. 14, 1890.

The past week has probably been the quietest yet this season, practically speaking nothing has been done. Payments are reported better than for some time.

There is now no further doubt as to crops. In some localities they even exceed the expectations. In the Ottawa valley a month ago they were rusty and had a sickly appearance, now they will compare favorably with the finest. In view of all this a cheerfulness prevails throughout the trade, and that a big fall and winter business will be done is now without doubt.

SUGAR.

There is no new feature in sugar, market continues quiet. The scarcity of brights among refiners has made a firm market and from an ⅛ to ¼c. higher. Low grades range from 5½ to 6c. The raw market in New York is very strong and advanced 1-16. Refined in the same place is reported active with an upward tendency.

SYRUPS.

There has been a better demand for syrups the past week at unchanged prices, though it is reported the N. Y. market has advanced 4c.

TEA.

A better movement is noticed in teas, and anything under 20c. is very scarce. The trade are waking up to the fact of having to pay higher prices, still the tea business of the country is light yet.

COFFEE.

As usual at this season of the year coffee is quiet, although the market is stiff. The only change has been in Maracaibo which has advanced ½c.

SPICES.

Reports say the crops of nutmegs are deficient again this year. As soon as the London buyers go into the market, which will be the first of next month, prices will go up. Pepper is also very scarce and higher.

CANNED GOODS.

There is little or no movement in this branch of trade. The outlook for tomatoes and corn are better, while peas are very strong and will be scarce owing to the failure of the crop.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

The tone of the local grain market has been firm and prices are well maintained on account of the strong western markets lately and the big advance in prices. On spot, business has been quiet owing to the light offerings and we do not hear of any transactions. Cable advices to-day on wheat were firm and on corn strong. The Chicago wheat market opened strong on the curb at ¾c. higher at $1 September, but later was weak and lost the above rise, it now being 99¼c. September. Up to the time of writing the Chicago wheat market was very active and weak, it having sold down to 98c. September, now 98¾c. We quote:—Wheat, No. 1 hard Manitoba, $1.22 to $0.00, No. 2, hard, $1.20 to $0.00; corn, duty paid, 65 to 67½c.; oats, 51 to 52c.; do. L. C. 47 to 48c.; peas, 77 to 79c. per 66 pounds afloat; barley, 48c.; rye, 54c.

In sympathy with the strong western wheat markets the tone of the flour market on spot has been firm, but no advance in prices has taken place yet, owing to the fact that our prices now are above export basis. The demand from local buyers has been fair and the market has ruled moderatively active with a good business. A fair jobbing is done in oatmeal at $5.10 for granulated, $4.90 for standard, and $5.10 for rolled oats per barrel. We quote:—Patent winter, $5.15 to $5.25; do. spring, $5.25 to $5.50; straight roller, $4.75 to $4.90; extra, $4.35 to $4.50; superfine, $3.25 to $3.75; city strong bakers, $4.75 to $5.25; strong bakers, bags, $2.30 to $2.40; superfine, bags, $1.50 to $2.00; extra bags, $2.00 to $2.10.

PROVISIONS.

There has been no change in the local provision market The feeling in pork is firm owing to the light stock held in first and higher prices are looked for. The demand for lard is fair and prices steady. Hams and bacon have been moving more freely. We quote: Canadian short cut pork, $17.50 to $18 per barrel; Armour's and Morgan's short cut, $16.50 to $17; do. mess $16; Canadian lard, $1.65 to $1.70 per pail; ham, 12 to 13c.; bacon, 10 to 11c., and tallow, 4½ to 5c.

EGGS.

Since our last the tone of the egg market has continued strong and a further advance of ½c per dozen has been scored. The demand is good; in fact, dealers state they have not done such an active business at this season of the year for some years past. The receipts are small, which meet with a ready sale, consequently there is no accumulation of stock and prices are firmly held at 15½ to 16½c, with single cases of fine stock at 17c per dozen.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

There has been more enquiry for butter from local buyers and a fair jobbing trade has been transacted in finest grades, but common stock is moving slow; in fact, it is difficult to sell except at very low prices. We quote: Creamery, 16 to 18c; Townships, choice to finest, 15 to 16c; fair to good, 13 14c; Morrisburg and Brockville, good to finest, 14 to 15c; Western choice to finest, 12 to 14c.

There were no new features in the cheese market. The feeling was steady, and prices showed no change. There was considerable enquiry for small lots of finest cheese, but at prices which holders would not accept, consequently we did not hear of any transactions, and on the whole business was dull. The public cable was unchanged at 40s. We quote: Finest white and colored at 8¼ to 8½c; medium, 7¾ to 8c, and inferior and low grades 7 to 7¼c.

MONTREAL NOTES.

The Norweigan barge "Gurda" with a cargo of molasses for Messrs. Chaput, Fils & Cie, of this city, went ashore on the coast of Newfoundland the other day and is a total wreck. Her cargo is fully insured.

A special meeting of the Canada Meat Packing Co. is called for next Friday for the purpose of considering and if approved of, sanctioning a by-law to increase the capital stock from $100,000 to $250,000.

A French contemporary claims that the raspberry trade is most flourishing this year and that the trade which amounted to about $5,000 ten years ago from St. Jerome and surrounding country will reach $20,000 this year. It claims that from 2,000 to 3,000 buckets are shipped into the city daily.

C. A. T. Gravel and Charles Florence, doing business as dry goods merchants, under the name of Leduc & Co., have also assigned at the demand of J. O. Gravel; liabilities $1,000

"My son," said the father reproachfully, "the fact that I am so well known in town is no reason why you should buy things on credit." "No, father; but it's the reason why I can't buy them on credit."

DUNNING POSTAL CARDS.

An Act was passed by Congress less than two years ago making it a criminal offence to mail a postal card containing written or printed matter of a "libellous, scurrilous, defamatory or threatening character, or calculated and obviously intended to reflect injuriously upon the character or conduct of another." The penalty for a violation of the law is a fine not exceeding $5,000, imprisonment for not more than five years, or both fine and imprisonment.

Under this statute a St. Louis business man was indicted for mailing these two postals to a customer :

Please call and settle account, which is long past due. and for which our collector has called several times.

To this the customer evidently paid no attention, as the following was sent to him six days later :

You owe us $1.80. We have called several times for same. If not paid at once we shall place same with our law agency for collection.

The United States District Court holds that the sending of the first was not, but that the mailing of the second was a criminal offence. The reason given for the distinction is that the second contained a threat to sue, which was "both calculated and intended to humiliate and injure the person addressed in public estimation," while the first was not open to this objection. Of the first Judge Thayer says :

The language employed is not of a threatening character, and, in my opinion, no jury would be warranted in finding, in view of its contents, that it was obviously intended by the writer to reflect injuriously on the character or conduct of the person addressed, or to injure or degrade him in the eyes of the public.

It is true that it contains a demand for the payment of a debt and says that it is long past due and that a collector has called several times, but it is couched in respectful terms and no intent is apparent to put it in such form as to attract public notice or to make it offensive to the person addressed.

In view of this decision, which the New York Herald thinks is carrying the law to an extreme hardly warranted, business men will find it prudent either to inclose demands for money in sealed envelopes or to be careful about what they write on postal cards.—American Grocer.

The Business Men's Association, of Albany, decided to have a rousing business men's demonstration and a field day at the fair grounds in September. A committee of arrangements has been appointed to consist of 25 members with William H. Coughtry as Chairman. This committee was directed to confer with the managers of the New York and New England fair with the idea of having one day during the fair set apart for the field day. It is expected by the association that all business houses will be closed and the demonstration will be made a great success. The programme will include a parade in the morning and hurdle races and other sports on the fair grounds.—American Grocer.

NO NEED OF IDLE HOURS.

To an intensely active man, who believes that every hour devoted to business should be spent in unceasing work, the hour or hours of idleness which each day brings are a source of much worry. The man who is a philosopher and works in working hours and plays when nothing better offers, of course has no need of the sympathy of anyone, for he lives right, and has taken to himself the true measure of contentment. We don't mean, however, the man who deliberately avoids business so that he can have loafing hours ; for him there is no salvation, and he is just as bad as the man who never leaves the atmosphere of the store behind him.

The idle hours which occur in retail stores to day are not the result of a smaller volume of business but of better methods than have heretofore existed. We know of one dealer whose business has certainly doubled during the last five years, and yet who has more hours of leisure out of a day of shorter working hours than he had five years ago. No time need be lost, and every moment not actively employed in waiting on the wants of the customers can be well employed. Windows to be cleaned, show cases to be arranged, and new combinations in exhibition goods, will all serve to fill all idle hours. And we don't see why the assistants should ever sit or loll about if the proprietor has his eyes and wits about him. Idle hours are not good unless spent in preparing for active ones.—Ex.

"Short and sweet," remarked the grocer as he tied up fifteen ounces of sugar and marked it "one pound."

—"Why don't you go to work?" she asked of the tramp.

"I am a working, lady."

"At what? You show no signs of it."

"No matter for that, mum. I'm a-working as a traveling adver. for a soap firm. I'm the 'Before Using' card, and my pardner around the corner represents the 'After Using' end of the combination. Thank you, mum."

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday s yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

JOHN BAKER EDWARDS, P.L.D., D.C.L., F.C.S.,

Public Analyst for the District of Montreal, and Professor of Chemistry.

CHEMICAL LABORATORY, MEDICAL FACULTY, MCGILL UNIVERSITY.

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Company:

GENTLEMEN,—I have taken and tested a sample of your "EXTRA GRANULATED" Sugar, and find that it yielded 99·88 per cent. of Pure Sugar It is practically as pure and good a Sugar as can be manufactured.

Yours truly,

G. P. GIRDWOOD.

AN ADVERTISING ACCIDENT.

Several years ago there was a very large dealer in linen collars in St. Louis. His sales were enormous. As a result he obtained generous concessions from manufacturers, buying on the most favorable terms. Desiring to make a big drive one season, he made unusually heavy contracts at a extra reduction in price, only one firm, Messrs. So-and-So, standing out. For some reason or other So-and-So declined to make any concession whatever. As the dealer wanted every pattern obtainable, he nevertheless made a small order. But he determined to "bring the firm round," as it were. Flaming advertisements were inserted in the St. Louis dailies announcing a reduction sale and saying that any collar made in the United States, no matter what the quality or pattern, could be had "two for a quarter—excepting only So-and-So's, price 25 cents each." Greatly to the dealer's surprise, although a heavy trade followed, everybody wanted So-and-So's collar, and he telegraphed in hot haste for a larger supply. Inadvertently he had taken the very course to create a demand for the collar that he least wanted to sell, but as his profits were good he kept on advertising in the same way.

Messrs. So-and-So, surprised at the sale and learning its cause, caught the idea and determined to improve it. Thenceforth they only made a high-grade collar and adopted the one-price and high-price system, not only themselves, but putting every dealer under a written contract to do so. Then they spent money lavishly in advertising, until their collars became household words. As an actual result of this brilliant business stroke, the partners became millionaires.

This is no fancy tale. The moral is obvious. The possibilities of printer's ink have not begun to be exhausted. There are yet numberless fortunes in it for the live business men of to-day. The moral is plain. —Troy (N.Y.) Press.

The Inland Revenue Department has recently issued a bulletin of about thirty pages which is devoted exclusively to the subject of baking powder and which shows that the majority of the goods in the market are adulterated and unfit for use. Prof. A. McGill, who has had charge of this important work for the Government, says that "imperial baking powder is an excellent baking powder." A word to the sensible housekeeper should be sufficient.

A CLOSE CALL.

An old-fashioned merchant doing business in one of the interior towns for many years failed the other day, and when an agent for one of the creditors reached the place it was to find the proprietor working hard to figure it all out.

"Lands! but I can't see why I should fail," he kept on saying. "Mebbe, though, I didn't collect sharp enough."

"You have a heap of old goods here," said the agent as he looked around.

"Yes, more or less."

"When did you take your last inventory?"

"Inventory? Take everything down?"

"Yes."

"And make out a list?"

"Yes."

"And put down the cost?"

"Yes."

"And dust off the shelves and mop the floor?"

"That's it."

"And clean the windows and paint the front of the store?"

"Yes."

"I never went into that. I was going to one day about fifteen years ago, but they had a wrestling match in town and I let the inventory go. Mercy on me, but I can't understand why I should fail."—New York Sun.

BEST SOAP

Which has a world-wide reputation of being the best lard soap made; noted for its PURITY and QUALITY. Hundreds of Soap Manufacturers have tried for years to imitate and discover the process by which it is made—but all have met with signal failure. No soap ever made has the same Washing Powers. Millions of families, mechanics, railroad engineers, railroad men will attest to this fact.

THE CROPS AND THE OUTLOOK.

The Canadian business world is now emerging from the long and trying period of suspense which lay this year between seedtime and harvest. The strain of the hoarded shortcomings of the last two or three years made the hopes and fears of the passing summer very earnest feelings throughout the country. Trade has been kept in hand since the threshing of the grain crop of '89 Too slack a rein had been given in the portion of the depressed spell before that time, and a too sanguine faith in the promise of appearances had led men into overstocking and failure. This year, however, the business spirit has been cautious, and not even when the sickle was put into the crop did the mistrustfulness of the merchandizing public relax. Roseate pictures of the prospect did not lead any considerable body of traders to break away from the general attitude of expectancy. Relief now seems to be at hand Not only is the suspense about over in respect to the fulness of its time, but there is every sign that it is ending happily. From all quarters come cheering reports. In this province the wheat crop has been reaped, and threshing has been begun. From both field and granary so far as they have been heard from, very satisfactory accounts have been received. The total wheat crop of this province is expected to thresh out between thirty and forty million bushels. Not only is there excellent reason for the expectation that the quantity will be large, but the returns from a wide range of observation warrant us in venturing the opinion that the quality will generally be very good. In some parts of the province the bushel bulk weighs as high as 63 lbs., and from many parts it keeps up an average of above 60 lbs. A collection of samples that do not overrun the middle point of excellence in the crops from which they are taken, show superior condition. The average yield appears to be over 25 bushels per acre. The Manitoba wheat crop, in which harvesters are now at work, promises to be an unusually large one, and is estimated at 20,000,000 bushels. Frost so far has been evaded, and is not now looked for in a dangerous degree until the full of the moon. The earlier opening of harvest is expected to enable the housing of the crop to be well forward before that time. But while the harvest is large the laborers are few. The scarcity of labor will perhaps prolong the reaping of some fields into the time when frost is seasonable, and lead to some curtailment of the large returns looked for. We hope not, however.

Our oat crop is generally believed to be under the average, although there are not wanting adherents of the opinion that there will be a very fair yield. Peas are more likely to be a shrunken than a flush crop. Hay is decidedly good. The root crops are fair, potatoes giving little promise of a large yield, and turnips, etc., making a very good present show. Taking the articles of fodder, in which we may include barley, there is no reason apparent in the present stage of growth for any feeling of downheartedness. The general garner may be looked for to be considerably more than half full, and that is saying a good deal.

It is scarcely a case of counting chickens before they are hatched to say that we have the strongest, and apparently best founded, hopes for the coming fall trade. As we pointed out, there has been no temporary galvanizing of trade by the exuberant effects of mere prospects. Confidence this year is to have a matter-of-fact basis in what is tangible and visible. Business still waits on the opening of the market for the products of this year's growth. When the market once opens there will be a more general diffusion of money than if crops had been poorer and prices higher. There will be fewer money-"corners," and consequently there will be a better nourishment of trade. The reaction from long-suspended buying will itself be an impulse to the trade which everybody's pockets will be in a better position to maintain. For there has been a remarkable reserve on the part of demand throughout this year, and this must make the fall trade more active than in normal circumstances.

It is to be hoped that there will be no slip between the cup and the lip. Granted the general yield is a large one, that the quality is good, and the taking off a success, there is yet uncertainty as to the facilities for transit. Can the grain be moved from points of production with promptness, or are we to have the old trouble, attending a prolific yield of imperfect car service? The scarcity of cars is as grave a matter to grain dealers as a railway strike. It demoralizes their business quite as much. Surely this year comes at the end of a sufficient experience to bring the indispensable benefit of a perfect railway arrangement to get our grain on the market while the market lasts. If we are to have the railway neglect in the aggravated form it has been suffered in past years, then we might as well have a poor crop. It behooves Boards of Trade throughout the country to concentrate their influence upon the railway interest to secure the carriage of the grain without loss to the owners and the trade generally. Time needs to be taken by the forelock for this end to be serviceably attained. Contracts for large deliveries that could not be made through this defect, have frequently been the cause of disabling losses.

JAPAN TEA STOCKS.

The stock of Japan teas now in first hands on this market is solely of this year's picking. This is the first time in three years that importers' warehouses have not carried a considerable bulk of old crop goods. Each year of those three bequeathed a surplus of stock to its successor, and the accumulation of these remains had a stagnating effect upon the market for the tea grown in the current year. The Japan tea trade before the late dull spell had been a profitable one. The Japan teas came suddenly into popularity in this country. The fact that they did, and the fact that they did not in several other great consuming regions,—as England, and to a less extent the United States—made the Canadian market a point on which supply was unduly concentrated. The growers, in their eagerness to launch their tea into popular favor, made too much of the opportunity it had opened for itself in this country, and followed up their advantage by consignment after consignment until the commission houses of Montreal, Toronto and other centres were filled. They produced an excess and it has encumbered trade until the present. This was undesirable. An immense proportion of the last two years' shipments was sold at a loss to the growers. The country being overstocked, the tea had to be sold at low prices or else become a drug on the market. Low prices consequently ruled, and consumers received good value while the conceding of it relieved the market and brought about the satisfactory clearance which we referred to at the beginning of this paragraph.

Another cause which helped to congest the market was the decline of attractive packages in the public favor. The eagerness to establish the tea as a staple, which showed itself in the mistaken push of an over supply upon this market, also carried too far the device of putting the tea up in taking forms. Most of it was put up in fancy Japanese bamboo baskets, Japanese straw-work packages, or Japanese porcelain jars. These modes of offering the tea soon lost their novelty, and led to the suspicion also that there must be a lack in intrinsic worth which was sought to be made up for by the mode of presentation in stock: the result was a consequent falling-off in the demand.

Both mistakes have been rectified. The growers do not swamp the market now, and they send their tea in plain cases. The demand has not only recovered from the lassitude which a distaste for bizarre methods of putting up created, but it has broadened beyond the widest limits of its former activity. A while ago all teas were brought down by the pressure of heavy stocks of Japans. Now there is a more buoyant feeling in the general tea-market. The Japan tea-trade was never in a healthier condition than it is now. The stock is as good as ever but it is higher priced, so that we say there are not such good values in low grades. This is a consequence of the dislodgement of the old stock and a consequence of another cause. The other cause is that the balance of exchange is against the United States and Canada in the Japanese markets. The imports to this continent from Japan have been greater than the exports from this continent to Japan, and Amerian exchange is consequently at a discount. At the opening of the tea season, a dollar represented at Yokohama a buying value equivalent to about 88c. If all other conditions were unchanged since last year, if exchange be supposed to have been then at par, we should this year have to pay a dollar for the same quantity and quality as we got last year for 88c. Further, the currency of Japan is entirely silver. The excitement in the silver market which the debates on the United States Silver Bill caused, and which its passage has converted into a confirmed advance in the price of silver bullion, had its effect in making tea dearer. For, the very material of the money which was exchanged for tea had risen in value, and to get the coin to buy the tea more money had to be laid out for the same quantity and quality. All these things have made Japan tea higher, and our market is in a good condition now to maintain prices.

AN EVACUATED WINDOW,

Following our usual custom, we make no window display of groceries during the warm weather, all goods being stored as free from sun or dust as possible, our patrons and the public generally not appreciating window cooked or soiled food. Samples will be cheerfully shown at the counter and quotations given.

A placard bearing the above quoted legend is the conspicuous feature of a shop window on the north-east corner of Queen and John streets in this city. It is likely to be read. There is nothing else in the window to take the attention. There is an almost ostentations bareness, of which the effect is to throw the notice into strong relief. Not only is the attention likely to be caught, but the import of the explanation is apt to be stamped on the mind of the passer by. The singularity of it gives emphasis to the impression. People who read the notice naturally feel like knowing more of the store. The proprietors, in removing all exhibition from the window, seem to forego an important advantage, window dressing being so generally held to be attractive of business. What kind of store it is that thus puts aside a commonly understood means of drawing trade is an object of interest to people, and sooner or later they go in. That is what they are wanted to do, and whatever leads them to do it ministers to trade, and is of value to the shopkeeper.

But aside from the accidental effects of such a window piece, it has essential bearings that are of trade value. More consumers than grocers suspect of it know the significance of so careful a rule of summer shop keeping. There is outside of the store a large fund of experience of window worn goods. Many people have bought them and can testify to the fly stained, sun-dried, parched nature of those that have been part of a summer so exposed. The loss to customers is great, and the customers are not unconscious of it. It is a refreshing discovery to many of them to run across a grocery window labelled as this one of Caldwell & Hodgin's is on Queen and John streets. The novelty of an unadorned window is what many of them would like to find. In the blaze of the summer window, which gives an artificial intensity to the natural heat of the sun, as in a hot-house, potted meats become rancid, pickles become debilitated, canned goods are damaged, oils are parboiled and essential extracts are deprived of their essence. There is scarcely any article of food or food-constituent kept by grocers that would not be impaired by one day in a hot window. In the rotation of stocks there is always a circulation of come and go in the window, so that the window-exhibit is not merely one display but a succession of displays, in which loss follows loss, and this loss has to be suffered by the consumer. When the heat in the shade is 85° and in the sun 96°, it is often 125° in a shop-window. What foods can bear that temperature unharmed? The metallic or glass packages in which many of them are put up hold the heat long about their contents and thus add to the destructive effects of the sun. Many articles that should rather be kept on ice are found often under the fierce glare of the sun in a shop-window.

The grocer should regard himself as a trustee of the people's food-supplies, a quarter master of the raw material of rations, and should feel it his duty to look well after their interests. He holds the goods in trust, although he may have paid for them, for he has a trust reposed in him by the people, which he should be conscientious about. There should be more dismantled windows in the hot season.

The interior of the store whose window roused our curiosity, corresponded with the impression that the outside made. The shelves were draped from ceiling to floor with with gauze. The mechanism of this drapery had been made a study, and it in no way hampered the salesmen, so convenient was the disposition of it. The paper on the wall had been there for five years and bore no fly-stains. The sugar trade was not allowed to leave traces on the floor to encouage flies. The floors were kept cool by periodical sprinklings at various hours of the day. It was a grateful chamber to go into out of the heat of the day. The stock was tastefully arranged. The store is a sermon on shopkeeping.

O'Donovan Rossa, the ex-Irish patriot, is taking orders for a wholesale grocery firm.

SHORTER HOURS.

The spirit of industrial reform is now at work upon the labor day. Trade unionism is in earnest for an eight hour day. To predict that the hours of work will sooner or later be clipped down by regulation to a third part of the daily twenty four, would be to predict that the organization of labor will advance until there is little independent service left in the market, and that organized labor will be unanimous in making the unit of labor an eight hour day. It would not, we think, involve the concession that the employers of labor be acquiescent. Organization and unity of purpose on the part of the wage earners are all that would be required, and no one is yet able to say that these can be calculated upon. When they can be, the eight hour day will be won, despite the opposition of those who constitute the demand side of the labor market. It seems, however, like an enlightened movement. Over-production in many spheres of industry has already in different parts of the world brought about a shortening of the period of labor. Factories are often closed a few weeks or some months for the sole purpose of giving the market time to carry off excess stock. This shows that production may outrun consumption. By forcing on unforeseen cessation from work and earning, such over-production is the cause of great distress to the families of artisans. If production is limited by the mode of shortening the working day, it brings no distress. Everybody is paid so much and expects no more, and wants are fitted to income.

If the industrial day were shortened, the shopkeepers' day would stand a better chance of being generally confined between reasonable opening and closing hours. What keeps shops open beyond daylight now is chiefly the business done with the laboring classes. These work up to 6 o'clock at least, go to their evening meal, and take a short rest after it, before they go out to spend any of their earnings with traders. The traders have to wait for them. That is a consequence of the long working day, and again is the cause of the lengthening of the traders' day, for the working public, knowing that stores will be open late, put off buying until a late hour. Other classes of consumers do a large portion of their buying in the afternoon, a part of the day in which their families often spend an hour on the street from choice. If the short labor-day were established, the bulk of all trade done would be transacted before 6 o'clock.

All the rest of the world is constructing itself on the plan of shorter working days. The mechanism of self-improvement, of family and social intercourse, of moral, intellectual and æsthetic cultivation, works most in the evening. Associations for religious, benevolent, enlightening and social purposes meet in the evenings. These might nearly as well be closed to shopkeepers and their assistants, as might the libraries, places of public entertainment, parks, gardens, etc., for the late-working shop hands have not the time to make use of them. They are cut off from the world when it is in its most unconventional, most human mood. There are bad influences then at work as well, but there are numberless good ones also, which people are not in close range of during the working day.

GROCERS' BILLS IN HOLIDAYS.

The summer holiday season, though a period of restoration to so many, is a time of considerable trial to the grocer. While the bulk of his customers are far away in quest of health, rest or enjoyment in the cool grots or shady nooks of the back country or by the sounding shore of some fashionable watering place, the grocer patiently dispenses supplies to the retainers whom the summer migrants have left in their town or city haunts. His store is the free magazine, for the time being, upon which the remains of the household draw for the butter, sugar, tea, cheese, flour, etc., etc., needed during the absence of the family. The "time being" is usually a spell of about three months. During the time the head of the family is away the grocer is obliged to sell on credit. This he does not object to do for families that have the means to spend so long a time away from home and are able to leave a domestic garrison in charge. The credit is not objectionable in itself. The large aggregate of it which often falls on one man's shoulders through having the patronage of several such households, and the long time it has to be carried, are the aggravating circumstances, the circumstances that cause the strain. Time matures engagements for the consumer as well as for the trader, for the summer absentee and the summer resident. Wholesalers regard not the season, but drop the anchor where the calendar marks that reckonings should be made. The retailer's money has be forthcoming when his thirty or sixty days are up. He cannot plead that he has a sufficient credit pledge in his books upon which he should be entitled to a respite. He has to raise the money. Therefore, why should he not raise it from his summer debtors? They are away. They do not want the Arcadian simplicity or the intoxicating elaborateness of their holiday environment to be rudely invaded by a dun. They have appropriated a certain sum in their bank account for the summer expenditure, and they do not wish to exhaust this before the fullness of their holiday is over. They may need all of it and will not waste any of it in keeping home-bills paid. These can be arranged for when the sojourn is over. The grocer can wait.

There is another class of people who go to some resort in the hot weather, and put their grocer under tribute that they may go. Their means are not ample but their tastes are expensive and their economical ideas are not well rooted. When the time comes, they shut up their houses, and for fear of straitening themselves too much in their enjoyment they neglect to pay the bills that have been accumulating on their grocers' books. A holiday is a good thing, and we wish everybody could afford to take one, but we think people should forego the pleasure when it has to be enjoyed at their tradesmen's expense. There is a great fund of money belonging to the grocers that is kept in circulation at summer resorts. This is hard on the grocer. People should be brought to think of the hardship of it, and grocers can bring them to think of it by putting notices in their windows stating that accounts must be paid before leave is taken for holiday absence. Arrangements could be made also that the grocer might draw on the bank at reasonable intervals for an account kept running by a household in charge of an absent family's home.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

The Montreal Gazette publishes an interesting article, giving the effect of the new law relating to promissory notes and bills of exchange, which comes into operation on September 1. It says:—A bill, payable to a particular person, but not containing words prohibiting transfer, is to be hereafter negotiable. The holder of a bill, containing the name of a referee in case of need, was bound to present himself to the latter, but now this formality is optional. Under the old law, a forged bill was wholly inoperative, but by an amendment offered by the Senate and assented to by the Commons, if a cheque payable to order be paid by the drawee upon a forged endorsement out of the funds of the drawer, the latter shall have no right of action against the drawee to recover back the amount so paid, unless he gives notice in writing of such forgery to the drawee within one year of his acquiring notice of such forgery. Hereafter, a bill not accepted on the day of presentment or within two days thereafter, must be treated as dishonoured for non-acceptance. Under the laws of some of the provinces, a written acceptance was not necessary; under the new Act, as formerly in most of the provinces, the acceptance must be on the bill itself. Heretofore in Ontario, Manitoba, and Prince Edward Island an acceptance to pay at a particular place was a general acceptance, unless it stated that it was payable there "only, and not elsewhere"; under the new Act, an acceptance to pay at a particular specified place, with or without the words, "there and not elsewhere," is not conditional or qualified. The practice prevailing in Ontario and other provinces, and sanctioned by a well-settled jurisprudence, that a bill or note payable at a bank or other particular place, without the words "there and not elsewhere," may be presented for payment at the particular place or to the acceptor or maker, cannot be continued; the bill or note, in such a case, must be presented for payment at the bank or other particular place; otherwise the drawer and endorser will be discharged. Where authorized by agreement or usage, a presentment for acceptance or payment through the post-office is sufficient. An acceptance for honour cannot be offered after protest for non-payment, but only after protest for non-acceptance or for better security, and before maturity of the bill. The acceptor for honour must receive notice of the protest for non-payment. The protest for better security is a novelty. An acceptor for honour or under protest is no longer bound to give notice of his acceptance. A drawer or endorser, receiving notice of a qualified acceptance, must express his dissent to the holder within a reasonable time, if he does not wish to be deemed to assent to the same. In the future a person signing a bill otherwise than as a drawer or acceptor, for instance, as a guarantor or donneur d'aval shall be treated as an endorsor, formerly a donneur d'aval, and as such entitled to protest, was liable in the same manner and to the same extent as the person on whose behalf he become a gurantor, and was not entitled to any protest apart from the latter. Heretofore a bill payable on demand could be protested at any time before the statute of limitations was acquired, but under the Act it must be protested within a reasonable time. Under the new Act, a bill signed under the seal of a corporation is negotiable, and a bill payable according to the current rate of exchange of a certain place, to be ascertained as directed by the bill, is a bill of exchange; the law seems to have been otherwise, at least in some of the provinces. If a bill be payable at a particular place it must be presented for payment at that place, else the holder may have to pay costs of suit taken against the acceptor or maker; if, for instance, the latter show that provision for the payment of the bill had been made at that particular place. It is no longer necessary for a notary to write on a dishonoured bill the words "protested or noted for non-acceptance or non-payment," as the case may be. Under the Code, service of notice of protest, whether for non-acceptance or for non-payment, could be made at any time within three days after the last day of grace, but under the Act it must be given no later than the next following business day, as is practiced in Ontario under the present law. A notice of protest had to be mailed "in the nearest post-office," but now it will be sufficient to deposit the same "in any post-office." Until now, presentment for payment had to be made on the afternoon of the last day of grace, but under the Act it can be made at any reasonable or suitable hour of the last day of grace, whether in the forenoon or the afternoon. The protest or noting for non-payment must be made after three o'clock in the afternoon of the last day of grace. Noting is to be a preliminary step to protest, instead of being a distinct formality or deed. Under the Code, when a bill contains the words "value received," value is presumed to have been received on the bill; but under the Act, whether the words "value received" appear upon the face of the bill or not, that presumption exists. Under the Code, the endorsee of an overdue bill takes it subject to all the objections and equities to which it was liable while in the hands of the endorser, whether they attach to the bill or some collateral matter; but under the English law prevailing in Ontario and under the Act, such endorsee will not be affected by such collateral matter like a set-off. The damages of two or four per cent. allowed by the Civil Code and also by provincial statutes upon bills returned under protest from Europe or the West Indies, or any British province of North America, or the United States, have not been re-enacted by the Act.

EDITOR GROCER,—Last week's number of THE GROCER did not arrive. Cannot get along without it. Send it and oblige, GUELPH, Aug. 12, 1890.

Italian Warehouse, Henry Loch, Dealer in Choice Groceries, China, Glassware, etc.

DEAR SIRS,—The non-appearance of THE GROCER last week caused me to turn my attention to the pink label on last number when I was surprised to find myself in arrears. Herewith you will find enclosed P.O. Order for $2 being my subscription for the current year. Kindly forward last week's number and oblige.

Yours truly,
HY. LOCH.

[The above are copies of a couple of letters we received. We also had several postal cards asking for copies of our issue of Aug. 8. We cannot understand how they went astray. The fault must lie with the P. O. authorities. We use the most modern machine for mailing and it is almost impossible for an error to occur. At the same time we are glad to know that our efforts are appreciated. We hope to turn out a very much better paper as soon as the advertising patronage will warrant us in doing so. Our friends are and can help us very much by urging wholesale merchants and manufacturers to advertise in THE GROCER. Those who are already in are satisfied with the results. Some of them are increasing their space. These are the men who have studied advertising. Let every merchant and manufacturer who sells to the retail grocer and general storekeeper advertise properly in THE GROCER only. Give the retailer a good profit and we will guarantee him a large increase in his business. Many men say they cannot allow the retailer a large profit because they have to spend the money on advertising to bring customers to the retailer. This theory every intelligent merchant knows is a false one in practice unless immense sums are spent in advertising, and then the profits to the retailer are liberal. Therefore advertise to the trade only and give them a good profit.—ED. GROCER.

BUTTER AND CREDIT.

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER.

DEAR SIR,—I have read the articles on butter, which appear from time to time in your valuable paper with interest, and with your permission I would like to give my views. I think the merchants are to blame, to some extent at least, by encouraging butter makers to use cheap wood pails, which are unfit to pack butter in, and tin cans which should not be used more than once, as the salt has a tendency to rust the tin, consequently spotted butter is the result. Also long credit has a tendency to bring in bad butter. Several merchants give from six to twelve months' credit, and then receive packed butter to pay their accounts with, and in many cases it is unfit for table use. I notice that the merchants that gives the most credit, in nine cases out of ten receive the poorest class of butter, which is largely due to carelessness. Quite a percentage of the farming class make comparatively little out of their dairy and fowl products, to what they should, which forces them to seek credit as their cash has gone for other purposes. The merchant that does a cash and trade business secures a thriftier and better class of customers, and as a result he receives a better class of farm products. If they are careless about their butter and other products, in many cases you will find them careless about paying their store bills. Ask any reasonable housewife, and she will tell you she can run the house on the receipts from dairy and fowl products, and in many cases they sell quite a lot of said products for cash, which commands the best prices. I think if our local papers would devote a portion of their space to this subject they might be the means of educating the farming class to a better system of doing business. If some of our experienced merchants, would give hints along this line, through the columns of the press, it would no doubt prove beneficial, as many are willing to improve upon their present methods.

Wishing your valuable paper every success.

I am yours truly,
R. J. THOMAS, Shelburne.

MONTREAL NOTES.

Messrs. John Swail and Paul Napoleon Vigeant have formed a co-partnership to carry on business as grocers, under the name and style of John Swail & Co.

Messrs. W. T. Costigan & Co., wholesale grocers of this city, have rented the lobster factory at Cambo Bello, N. B., for the purpose of canning sardines in oil and mustard. They are now busy putting in new plant, and it is expected the factory will be running full swing by the end of the month, when between 40 and 50 hands will be employed.

Messrs. M. W. Fogarty and James J. Murphy have formed a co-partnership for the purpose of carrying on business as commission merchants and dealers in fish, fruit, country produce and grocers' sundries, at 30 Foundling street, under the name and style of Fogarty & Murphy. The new firm is reputed as starting under very favorable auspices, having ample means and the best of references.

Messrs. D. A. McPherson and W. T. Ware are looking after the interests of the Insurance Companies in getting the Idaho's cheese into shipping order, prior to their being forwarded to Bristol, where they will be disposed of according to instructions given by the Insurance Companies. About 18,000 boxes have been received here of which 6,000 are wet. Besides these about 3,000 to 4,000 are in Quebec, and about 3,000 boxes are lying in Gaspe where they will be sold.

Pierre Cadoret's grocery store, Ontario st., was completely destroyed by fire on Monday morning. The fire originated in the shop and spread to the upper storeys. An alarm was given, but when the firemen arrived the flames were bursting through the roof. Mr. Cadoret's family and one that lived in the third storey above him had barely time to escape from the building. They had not even time to dress. The stock of the store and the furniture of both families were burned and the loss will probably reach $12,000.

There is said to be a great deal of feeling in the wine and liquor trade in Montreal over the action of the Dominion Government in passing a law that wine and spirit dealers shall not be allowed to place reduced liquors upon the market bearing the labels of well-known foreign firms. Hitherto it has been the custom of a number of Montreal houses to reduce the original brand and to send the reduced article over the country bearing the name and label of the foreign firms. The wholesale trade understood this perfectly well, and the reduced article manufactured in Montreal passed to the public as imported goods. The recent troubles in connection with illicit distilling in this city induced the Government to pass a regulation that in future all spirits and wine of domestic manufacture must be labeled with the name of the manufacturer, and this law is being strictly enforced. It is claimed that the law is in a measure unjust to the domestic makers, who pay a license for compounding, and who are the sole parties affected by the law, while on the other hand there is nothing to prevent wholesalers from imorting liquor in casks, reducing it here, and placing it on the market with the name and label of the foreign maker. While the new regulation will be a good thing for the importers, several wine and liquor houses here will be seriously affected by it. The public will not buy the reduced article when once it becomes known that it has been made here and is stamped with the name of the local maker, and this will mean a loss of thousands of dollars a year. The domestic makers have been left with thousands of foreign labels upon their hands.

Montreal is a model city. Mr. Glackmeyer, city clerk, is in receipt of a letter from Victoria, B. C., asking for information regarding the ways of carrying out, and the rules and regulations concerning our civic markets. Mr. William Dowler, a member of the committee appointed by the council of Victoria to enquire into the matter, says that it is the intention of the council to establish a civic market in that place, and that a special committee has been appointed to enquire into the advisability of such an institu-

"FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD."

There is no grander country in the world than this Canada of ours. Where in any other clime will you find scenery to equal the far famed Saguenay, in Quebec, Muskoka, Thousand Islands, and the North shore of the Georgian Bay, in Ontario, and the famous Rocky Mountains further to the West?

Where in any other clime is there fishing to equal the Lake St. John region and in the many rivers of New Brunswick. Is there another country in the world where the busy men of our great cities can reach within a few hours, so many beautiful breathing spots. Is there another city in the world, besides Montreal, where the grocers weary of putting sand in the sugar? and burnt peas in the coffee? can within so short a time reach the cool shores of so many picturesque lakes? Echo answers "No"! Nor are Montrealers dead to this fact, as is illustrated below. They have hied to regions innumerable, far enough away that the gentle wind sweeping through the pines whispers not of "trade," in the lapping of the waves against the rocks they hear not the clamorings of the vulgar throng asking for "renewals." In the cool still evenings, when the sun is just beginning to sink behind the mountains, they watch the opaline colors which the lake takes on, they linger until the moon comes up and sends her silvery arrows athwart the water, hear the gentle breeze sighing over the harp strings of the pines, and then steal homeward in the falling shadows at peace with all mankind—their creditors forgotten.

PHONOGRAPH.

AMERICAN PACKERS EVADE THE CUSTOMS' TARIFF.

With the object of giving increased protection to the Canadian farmer and pork-packer the Dominion Government increased the import duty on hog products to 3c. per lb., excepting mess pork, which is used by lumbermen and which is taxed at 1½c. per lb. Canadian dealers have found a slow demand for their long clear bacon for some time past. They found that the American article was displacing it. This seemed rather strange as at the prices quoted in the American markets clear could not be laid down duty paid at the prices at which Canadian was offered. The secret was discovered the other day when a circular sent by Armour & Co., Chicago, was shown to a local dealer. It offered clear pork guaranteed to pass the Canadian Customs, 16 pieces to the barrel, as mess pork. This is a clear evasion of the law and it is surprising that such a firm as Armour's would do this to escape the payment of duty. It is no wonder that Canadians cannot compete with the American packer. Canadian clear would cost 8¾c. laid down at outside points against 7¼c. duty paid for the American on the basis of Armour's circular.

Restore goods to their proper places as soon after using as possible.

THE MARKETS

TORONTO, August 21, 1890.

GROCERIES.

Trade has maintained a very steady pace throughout the week. The volume of business done was smaller than is considered to be due to mid-August, but that the scant fruit crop and the scarcity of money are to blame for. Local trade and that transacted with visiting dealers was limited to a short week, all places of business being closed on Monday for a civic holiday. Travellers, however, reported as good a demand as usual, their orders coming in as well on Monday as on any other day. The clearing of the dried fruits residum goes on slowly but without perceptible effect on prices. The sugar trade is duller on account of the decline in granulated. The canned goods market, particularly for salmon and lobsters is active. Money always comes in slowly on the eve of the opening market for new products.

CANNED GOODS.

The vegetables in chief demand are peas. The old stock finds an active demand at steady prices, and this state of the market is likely to be rather a steadfast one, the smallness of the new pack being favorable to it. They are firm at $1.10. Corn is duller, but there is no decline or easing in price, $1 to $1.10, with the former for very large sales. Tomatoes are in steady but only fairly strong request the new crop now enabling consumers to have the fresh vegetable for general table use. The price is still firm at $1.20. Strawberries are going into trade at good prices and in response to a very strong demand. Peaches are coming into the market with undoubted strength. Threes are $3.25, and two's $2.25. Business is mainly a matter of enquiry so far, the new fresh stock taking off for the present the edge of the consumers' demand. Lobster is in very low stock at the moment, a supply of Clover Leaf being looked for in a week. The strong position taken by this line of goods early in the season is being maintained, the difficulty now experienced being to get stock. Canned salmon is growing stiffer because of the lateness of arrivals of the new pack. Prices are exceedingly firm for present delivery, but for futures there is a disinclination to quote. The stock on hand is getting smaller daily. The abundance of the British Columbia catch has been confirmed by repeated and seemingly reliable reports. The outlook for this year's pack appeared gloomy early in the season as the run was meagre then. Since then it really began, and though it was late in starting and short in duration it was very large, and there was a big catch. Outside of the Skeena, on other British Columbia rivers—the Skeena, the Stickeen, etc.—the catch amounted to 240,000 cases. This strengthens the opinion that prices will be easy. We quote from the American Grocer:

The United Kingdom received for the year ended March 31. 674,876 cases against an average import per annum for five years, 1886-90, of 439,849 cases. The imports for the calendar year 1889 were 621,034 cases against an average annual import for five years of 405,471 cases.

The consumption there absorbs 1,000 cases per day, so that the United Kingdom is carrying a supply sufficient for eight or nine months' consumption without buying another case. On top of that is another enormous British Columbia pack. The situation favors the continuance of the present low range of prices and a free consumption.

We are permitted to make the following extract from a letter received from a prominent London house, and which confirms the opinion we had previously expressed above :

LONDON, July 31, 1890.

The combination which has been in existence the past few months expires to-day. What the effect will be upon prices no one can foretell. We look, however, for a wide difference in prices.

Our stock of salmon in the United Kingdom is, to say the least, excessive, and we think, having in view the low price of meats of different descriptions, that there is salmon enough here to last until a year from next January, or even later.

Activity at low prices is the solution of the present overstocked markets.

COFFEES.

Coffees are all firm, but there is not a large trade. The New York Coffee Exchange has concluded to make coffee from North and Central America, the East and West Indies, and South America, in addition to that from Brazil, good delivery under contracts, coffee from Brazil only being a good delivery at present. The latter which forms the basis of present speculation and trading on the Exchange, amounts to about 4,000,000 bags a year, while the supply from the other countries named, which is the supply of the world, barring Africa, would bring the amount up to about 12,000,000 bags. So the Coffee Exchange of New York has decided to have all grades of mild coffees with one or two exceptions, deliverable on the Coffee Exchange. Previously they have had only Rio and Santos coffees. This change goes into effect on June 1st, 1891.

DRIED FRUIT.

Orders are small and frequent, retailers holding to the policy of going light-handed until new goods are to be had, when not only fresher stock but perhaps easier prices will be available. Valencia raisins are firm yet at 7¾ to 8½c. for off-stalk, 9 to 9½c. for selected, and 9½ to 10c. for layers. Currants sell very well these days at 5¾ to 6c. for barrels. French plums in cases are 12½ to 15c, and are in light stock. Bottles are more plentiful. The market for new Valencias is opening in New York.

NUTS.

Prices are firm, for although trade is dull there are but small stocks in wholesale hands. There is no change upon last week's quotations.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is in fair demand. Spices are in more active request than they have been for a long time. The cause is the consumption that the pickling and certain fruits are now being put down for domestic supplies. Prices are steady.

SUGAR.

White sugars are all an eighth lower than our last quotations recorded them. The decline took place on Saturday, and is an independent movement of the Canadian market. What was looked for on the eve of this fall was an advance as advices from both the English and New York markets were assuring, the latter market having gone up 3-16c. in the last three days of the week. The reason for the retrogressive movement of this market is the evident insufficiency of consumption to keep the market clear. The small fruit season is about over and there is a lull in a demand which at its best was a low one. There has been a very quiet time in the granulated trade since Saturday's yield in price. It usually happens that trade is timid in a time of decline. A greater decline is waited for. The bulk of the granulated that was bought this year changed hands at the movement when prices took a start. The stock of medium bright yellows is rather slender, and the sugar demand has been chiefly for that description. Prices are firm. The shading on brown is reported to be still practised. There are no raws of any account.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

For syrups there is little call. Prices are steady and unchanged. Molasses, on the other hand, is selling well. The demand is never looked for to be so large at this season. It is moving off at prices that have been long current.

TEA.

The higher prices of low grade Japans which business in this year's picking inaugurated is throwing cheap tea consumption upon low grade greens, and these in response to the strengthened demand are becoming stiffer. There is a very good trade transacted in low grade blacks.

The new teas via Suez Canal are now being distributed, while we have received the finest pickings of Japan, the highest grades of Formosa are yet to come.—American Grocer.

It is said that Tokio, Japan, has a tea trust, reputed to be formed for the purpose of restoring the declining tea trade of that country. The fact is that there does not seem to be a great decline in the trade in Japan teas.

PETROLEUM.

Trade is improving with the growing length of darkness and prices are firm, but with no advance on last week's quotations.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

Prices have kept unchanged in all lines throughout a quiet week's trade.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market is pretty much as it was a week ago. It has been kept plentifully stocked, and the general average of quality is good. There have been no reports of recent transactions in old tubs. The demand for these continues to be chiefly local and is maintained largely by bakers' wants. The nominal quotation is 5 to 7c. Dairy tubs, which are in liberal receipt, bring 14 to 16c. There are no large rolls. Crocks and pails are about the same as tubs. Pound rolls are supplied up to the requirements of the market, and bring 18 to 19c. Creamery tubs are scarce, and fairly firm at 18 to 19c. Creamery rolls are 20 to 22c.

Cheese is unchanged, 9 to 9½c. still the quotation, though this may be considered a little stronger.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Are getting into small compass, the making up of the large order referred to in last report having almost depleted the market. The demand, however, is slack. Prices are $1.65 to $1.80.

DRIED APPLES—Have very little basis in stock or dealings for a quotation, the year's trade in them being near its end. The latest turn over reported was from 5½ to 6½c. The demand has been sharpened and the price strengthened by the certainty that this year's apple crop will be a short one.

EGGS—Run from 14 1-2 to 15c., and are not very firm. The market is well supplied, outside demand having waned for the time being. Local consumers afford a good basis for the summer market.

HAY—Both new and old timothy is offering freely. The street receipts, and the unmatured character of the new are making business quiet with the dealers in baled, who are not specially anxious to buy, as the large crop makes low prices an assured matter for some time. Prices are $9 to $9.50, and 50c advance on these figures for good old.

HIDES—Are dull. Cured are 6¼c. Green are 6½c for No. 1 cows', and 5½ and 4 1-2c for the two lower grades repectively.

HONEY—The season's flow which was profuse at the outset is now scant. It was short and liberal. This will make the stock very much lighter than the promise of the early bloom led observers to estimate. The effect on prices is to tone them up. The same figures are to be quoted but they are firmer. Clear is 9 to 12c., and honey in the comb is 14 to 18c.

HOPS—News of shorter crops in this country, the United States and England have failed to make any improvement in prices. The stock is large. Yearlings are 10 to 12c, and '89 hops are 14 to 16c.

OATS—Are 42 to 43.

POTATOES—Are rather scarce, and firm at $1.50.

POULTRY—Chickens are in good demand at 40 to 60c. Ducks are a little duller, neither supply nor demand being very strong. They are 50 to 70c.

SKINS—Sheepskins are 70c. Calfskins are 8c. for No. 1, and 6c. for No. 2.

TALLOW—Rough is 2c. Rendered is 5 1-2c.

WOOL—Is dull at 21 to 23c.

FISH.

Trout and whitefish are scarce. This is not an effect of low demand, although the demand is very low, but is owing to the scarcity of live stock in the fishing grounds. The growing scarcity, independently of the small consumers' market, is firming up prices, the lowest now being 7c. Lake herring are unchanged at $1.75 to $2 per hundred. Pickerel are in poor receipt and not much in demand at 4 to 6c. Salmon is 14 to 15c. Stock is becoming more plentiful on account of the recent fine run and because of the closing of the canneries, which puts the fresh fish on the market.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade is light. Oranges run from $8 to $8.50 for Sarrentos. There are not many of them. Small stocks brought in short suffice for the market here, as there is a low demand and the stock of Jamaicas is expected soon to be here. There are a few Jamaicas, going at $11 to $12, but they are not in large supply yet. The cooler weather has numbed the demand for lemons. They sell now at $5 to $5.50 for 200's, and $9 to $11 for 300's. Bananas are dull, and range from $1 to $1.75.

PROVISIONS.

The smoked meat trade is growing into larger proportions every week. Not alone for hams, which were the strong favorites in consumption, but also in backs and bellies, there has been a very active business. Long clear goes out steadily. Barrel pork is rather quiet. There have been no hogs sold this week.

BACON—Long clear is 8½c. Bellies are 10½ to 11c. Backs are 11 to 11½c. Roll is 10c.

HAMS—Smoked are 12½c. Sweet pickled are 11 to 11½c.

LARD—Is 10c. in 20 lb. pails, and in 50 lb. tubs is 9c.

MESS PORK—Is $15 for heavy and $17 for short cut.

SALT.

There is still a quiet trade transacted, industrial activity in those processes which involve the use of salt being nearly at a standstill at this season. Common barrel salt is $1.55 to $1.60, coarse sacks are 80 to 85c., and quarter sacks of dairy are 55 to 60c.

The latest sales of the Toronto Salt Works were 5 cars barrel salt at $1.40, 1 car dairy at $1.25.

DRY GOODS.

The wholesale houses are not yet the scene of any notable revival in trade. Purchases run in the line of staples and orders are for short periods ahead. It appears the crops will have to be threshed before enthusiasm can make its way into the dry goods trade.

NAGASAKI JAPANS

Just arriving ex "Belgic" a beautiful invoice of Nagasaki Japans, composed of Hysons, Oolongs, Pekoes and Gunpowders, which we offer at low prices to the trade. Nagasaki's are scarce teas this season, buyers needing same had better get in quickly.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

AUG. 21, 1890.

There is not one new feature in groceries worthy of any mention since our last, in fact our last report would debar this week, at this time of the year the city is deserted by everybody except those engaged in shipping. From the reports already published it appears that the crops in the United States this year are considerably below the average. Similar statements come from the British Isles and the continent of Europe. In Canada, on the contrary, the harvest in all important particulars is expected to be above the average. This, therefore, promises to be a good year for the farmers in the western part of the Dominion. Bountiful crops and good prices mean general easiness for all classes. In the matter of wheat production it is confidently predicted that Canada will this year show an extraordinary increase. This is in keeping with the often observed fact that the wheat belt of the continent, which used to be confined to the northern and western States of the neighboring Union, is annually spreading north-westerly in conformity with the isothermal lines.

SUGAR.

Market for refined has been quiet. Cranulated is quoted at 6⅜c. Yellows, 5⅜ to 5¾c. Raw market is also quiet.

MOLASSES.

Molasses is stiff at unchanged prices.

TEA.

There has been considerable activity in teas the past week, and prices have advanced. Teas that have been selling here at 19c. are bringing 20c. in New York, consequently quantities thin this market.

COFFEES.

Coffee has been advancing in New York the past few days, and the price is now fully ½c. higher than this time last week. This course of events is unlooked for by dealers who thought that receipts at Rio and Santos would increase, thus bringing the market down. Mild coffee has also advanced.

CANNED GOODS.

Reports from British Columbia state good runs of salmon, and that all orders can be filled. On this market salmon may be called firm. A sale was made here by a western packer of beans at 60c., the lowest yet.

EGGS.

Eggs are firm and quiet at 16 to 17c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

CHEESE—There seems to be a better demand to-day, but it is cheap cheese that are in request and nothing over 8c. has been offered or paid this morning. Utica went an eighth stronger and there was an active demand. We quote as follows; Finest colored, 8½ to 8⅜c.; finest white, 8⅛ to 8¼c.; fair to good, 7½ to 8c.

BUTTER—There is no change in the almost stagnant condition of the market. We quote as follows to-day: Creamery, 15 to 16c.; Townships, 12 to 14c.; Western, 9 to 13c.

FISH.

Very discouraging reports are being received from the several fishing grounds, and all tend to show that our supply this year will not be more than quarter that of previous years. Of the catch of Cod Mr. Morin, of the Gaspe Fishing Co., says :—Fishing began later than usual but opened very fair. The first trouble we had to contend with was the scarcity of bate, then that was followed by successive gales that for three weeks the fisherman were unable to do anything, but since then the weather has been fine, bate has put in an appearance in large quantities and generally speaking the catch has been good. The high prices offered in the Maratime provinces for export will prevent any great quantities reaching this market. It will not be surprising if there is a great scarcity of large dry cod, as there has been heavy contracts for this fish made. Medium fish is being dried and if weather continues fine of which there is every appearance, we hope for better supplies. There is a good demand from outside markets, such as Boston and the West Indies, the former place being very poorly supplied. Mr. W. A. Munn, of Stewart Munn & Co. says the catch of cod on the Newfoundland coast has been fairly good, though not equal to previous years. This year great care has been taken in the taking, drying and packing of the fish. Government inspectors have been instructing the fishermen in every branch. The catch on the Labrador coast has been good only in some localities. The catch of salmon has been good. Of course it is rather early yet to say how things will really pan out, but the above is as the market now stands.

HOG PRODUCTS.

We quote as follows to-day: Canada short cut, $17.50 to $18; Western mess, $17 to $17.50; Western short cut, $17 to $17.50; city hams, 12½ to 13½c.; Western lard, 9 to 9¼c.;Canadian lard, 8¼ to 8½c.; bacon, 10 to 10½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Bartlett pears from the Hudson are being sold at $6.50 per keg. We give the following quotations to-day: Oranges in boxes of two hundred, $7; lemons, $7 per box; apples, $3.50 to $4; bananas, $1 to $1.75; water melons, 40c.; cocoanuts, $4.25 to $4.50 per hundred.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

GRAIN—The market remains quiet and steady. Wheat, No. 1 hard Manitoba, $1.14 to $1.16, No. 2, hard, $1.12 to $1.13; peas, per 66 pounds in store, 00 to 77½c.; peas, afloat, July delivery, 00 to 70; Quebec oats, 00 to 00; Ontario oats, 41 to 42c.; corn, duty paid, 00 to 55c.; corn, cargoes in bond, 41 to 43c.; barley, feeding, 00 to 40c.; barley good malting, 00 to 52.

FLOUR—The market is firm, with a good demand at the advance in prices. The sales of flour on 'Change to-day were as follows: 280 sacks patent spring, $6.05; 2,600 sacks strong bakers, $5.75; 260 sacks Manitoba strong bakers at $5.50. We quote:—Patent winter, $5.60 to $5.85; do. spring, $5.60 to $5.85; straight roller, $5.16 to $5.20; extra, $4.65 to $4.90; superfine, $4.00 to $4.75; fine, $3.50 to $4.25; city strong bakers, $0.00 to $5.50; strong bakers, $0.00 to $5.50; superfine, bags, $1.75 to $2.25; extra bags, $2.40 to $2.60; fine, bags, $2.10 to $2.20; oatmeal, standard, per bag, $2.25 to $2.35; oatmeal, granulated, $2.40 to $2.50; oatmeal, rolled, $2.40 to $2.50.

TRADE SALES.

The Toronto and Port Perry grocery stocks of T. S. Corrigan were sold by Suckling, Cassidy & Co., on Tuesday. Mr. N. B. Gould, of Port Hope, got the Port Perry stock at 46c. in the dollar, and Mr. W. M. Milligan, of this city, got the Toronto stock at 47c. in the dollar. It could not have got into worse hands from the point of view of local retail competitors.

SUSPICION ALLAYED.

The worst case of suspicion and jealousy in the Northwest has just been cured, the patient being the wife of a well-known travelling man. She had noticed that her husband never brought his grip home with him, but always left it at the store when he came in from a trip, and in her jealousy she imagined it to be filled with love letters, appointments of meetings with fair ones, etc. A few days since, while her husband was on a trip through Dakota, she went down to the store and approached the porter, said : "John, you like to make a dollar honestly when you can, don't you ?"

"Oh, yes'm."

"You know where my husband keeps his grip, don't you ?"

"Yes'm ; he throws it down in a corner of the office and leaves it there."

"Well, look here, John. He will be in on the Northern Pacific train to-morrow morning, and if, at the first opportunity, you slip his grip out of the house and bring it up to me I'll give you a dollar. You can bring it back again in half an hour."

The porter consented, and two days later presented himself at the drummer's residence with the grip in his hand. He explained that he had not before had an opportunity to carry it away, and giving him a seat in the parlor the woman carried the prize to the bedroom, and with set teeth and pale face opened it. The first thing she encountered was a well-worn pocket bible, thumbed and showing the marks of much handling. Then she dug out a soiled shirt, some unchaste socks, comb, hair brush, and then she found a letter folded within an envelope. This she opened eagerly and read as follows :

"FARGO, D. T., Sept. 1, 1889.

" Mr. WILLIAM ———,

" Dear Sir,—Your monthly assessment of 50 cents for the support of the Young Men's Christain Association (bible fund) is now due, and the earnest interest you have always taken in the work assures me you will promptly remit the amount. You will be pleased to learn that the good cause prrgresses rapidly as you predicted it would in your address delivered here a few weeks since.

Yours,

"A. W. EDWARDS, Secretary."

This drove much of the hard stoney look from her face, but she continued her search. She fished out three or four tracts, a bottle of pop, a Francis Murphy temperance badge, a bottle of Dr. Surepop's corn destroyer, and beneath it all, in the bottom of the grip, a letter, sealed, stamped, and ready for the mail, addressed to "Miss Georgie Gray, St. Paul, Minn."

The superscription was in her husband's well known hand writing, and again the stoney look came into her eyes.

" Oh, the wretch !" she cried in her anguish. "My suspicions are too well founded ! Georgie Gray ! Oh, this is to much, to much !" and she gave way to a flood of tears.

When she calmed herself she tore the letter open and read as follows :

ST. PAUL. Minn., Sept, 19.

Miss Gray :

Your note asking me to meet you in Rice park Saturday evening was handed me by a District messenger boy this morning. In reply, permit me to say that you have mistaken the man. You may not be aware that I am a married man, and am blessed with the love and confidence of the greatest little wife in America. Rather than betray that confidence or dishonor that love I would suffer ten thousand deaths. In my eyes there is but one woman in the world and she it is who greets me with a pleasant smile and a wifely kiss every time I come from a trip.

WILLIAM ———.

Then she laid down on the bed and sobbed for a while, and then closed the grip, took it to the porter, and asked him to return it to the store and say nothing of what had occured. As he entered the store the drummer stepped from behind a pile of goods and asked :

"Did she go through it, John ?"

"Guess so. She took it into another room, an' was gone half an hour before she brought it back."

"How did she act?"

" Well, she was smilin' awfully, but looked teary all around the eyes. She gimmie another dollar, an' said this would be a happy world if all men were like her husband."

" That's business, John. Here's the V I promised you, and now let's go across the street and take something. When you come back dump that stuff and put my things back in the grip, for I go out to-morrow morning. I'll never forget you, John, for putting me on to this," and they slipped out, and disappeared behind the green shade of a convenient saloon.—St. Paul Herald.

A grocers' association has been organized in London with the following officers :— A. McCormack, President; W. H. Ferguson, Vice-President; R. W. Sharpe, Treasurer; C. J. Wall, Secretary.

Mr. Robert Stuart, who for many years past conducted a grocery in Ingersoll has disposed of his business and is about to move to Chicago. The congregation of St. Paul's church presented him with a gold-headed cane and Mrs. Stuart with a silver fruit dish, as a token of regard.

The Imperial Oil Company, London, commenced moving their large tanks on Friday. They weigh about four tons each, and will be transported by horses from the city to Petrolia, a distance of about sixty miles. The drivers expect to reach their destination in about three days.

Osborne's grocery waggon, Hamilton stuck fast on the H. and D. railway track, the other morning, on Hannah street, just as a train was approaching. All efforts on the part of the driver to get the wheels off the track failed, and the train which was too close to be stopped, ran into the waggon, smashing it badly. The driver, Wm. Evans, was badly hurt about the legs, but not fatally injured.

Inspector Bremner and an official gauger have been enquiring into allegations of St. John merchants in respect to unequal gauging of molasses. It was charged that in Annapolis, Yarmouth, St. Stephen and other ports the local official gauger made the contents of a molasses cask four or five gallons more than the same cask was held to contain in St. John. The charge is understood to have been sustained as to Annapolis and Yarmouth, and a uniform measurement is expected in the future.

A firm of soap makers has adopted a novel and striking plan of advertising in London, England. The advertisement consists of a gorgeous equipage, scarcely inferior to the Lord Mayor's state carriage, drawn by a pair of spanking greys. A driver and footman occupy the box seat, and perched behind the vehicle are two nattily-dressed negroes, who are supposed to act as "tigers." The letter-press on the carriage is by no means staring, and a good many people have been seen to run some distance after it, apparently under the impression that it belonged to some Eastern potentate.—Manchester Grocers' Review.

Another automatic box device is described by Invention, which states that a nickel-in-the-slot machine in Boston confronts the equestrian who alights at the sidewalk with the legend written across its front, "Drop a nickel in the slot and I'll hold your horse." He puts in the nickel, and two iron hands unclasp, and the bridle rein is dropped into them, and they close again. There you are. the horse is held. The rider goes off about his business. In half an hour he returns. There is the machine, and there is the horse. But the first legend has disappeared, and in its place is the inscription in characters of living light, "Give me a quarter and I'll let him go."

TIT FOR TAT.

A drummer who travels for a Boston grocery concern says that he sees in Maine some of the sharpest tricks that are practiced anywhere on his route. He gives the following specimen :

"Mr. B——, I bought six pounds of sugar here last week, and when I got it home I found a stone weighing two pounds in the package."

"Can you explain the swindle, sir?"

"I think I can," was the proprietor's placid reply. "When I weighed your eight pounds of butter, week before last, I found a two pound pebble in the jar, and when I weighed your sugar the stone must have slipped into the scales, somehow. We are both growing old, ma'am, and I am sorry to say our eyesight isn't to be trusted. What can I do for you to-day, ma'am?"

For a moment the woman gazed at the tradesman over her brass-bound spectacles. Then she recollected herself and remarked that she had a dozen of eggs which she wished to exchange for hooks and eyes.—Lewiston Journal.

Offer for sale all grades of REFINED SUGARS and SYRUPS of the well-known brand of

Redpath

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday s yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

JOHN BAKER EDWARDS, P.L.D., D.C.L., F.C.S.,

Public Analyst for the District of Montreal, and Professor of Chemistry.

CHEMICAL LABORATORY, MEDICAL FACULTY, McGILL UNIVERSITY.

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Company:

GENTLEMEN,—I have taken and tested a sample of your "EXTRA GRANULATED" Sugar, and find that it yielded 99·88 per cent. of Pure Sugar It is practically as pure and good a Sugar as can be manufactured.

Yours truly,

G. P. GIRDWOOD.

A large consignment of our New Alaska Pattern Granite, in both plain and decorated, just arrived. Some staple assortments of good Seconds also on hand. New lines of China Tea Sets, Toilets, etc., now open for inspection. Goods both in packages and open. Please give us a call.

HECK'S COLUMN.

An interesting item that I picked up at Broadview, N. W. T., was that some dozen Indians at that place had land under cultivation, and would have each fully five hundred bushels of grain. Many will be somewhat surprised to hear this, as the general appearance of these people would indicate that they were a very lazy lot. We can now point out exceptions to appearances. From Broadview to Qu'Appelle, formerly Troy, where the troops landed in 1885, during the Rebellion, the land is in a splendid condition. There is not much rush at Qu'Appelle, but the half-dozen business men who are there are all making a good living. Moosejaw, the next place of importance, has its ranches in the immediate vicinity of trade. Two merchants at this place told me they were about to give up business and go elsewhere. The other merchants report trade as good as can be expected, and the same may be said of Swift Current and Medicine Hat, although as "The Hat" is a railway center a great deal of that class of trade keeps up the town.

Regina, on the C. P. R., between Qu'Appelle and Moosejaw, must not be forgotten. Here the government buildings are situated, as also are the N. W. mounted police barracks. The town had a severe fire a short time ago. There are many new buildings in course of erection. The farming lands are good. The town is steadily increasing in size, and if it fills in, as it is laid out, it will be a large city some day. I have a word for Calgary, which I consider one of the finest towns in the N. W. T. It is walled in by a range of mountains that extend around the entire limits of the town. Every merchant is in good financial standing, and all are of a business nature. The first sod of the Calgary and Edmonton railway was turned last month. The town is lighted by electricity by two companies, their competition making it the cheapest light any where. Every one who visits the town gets a hearty welcome. The town is growing steadily and the country around rapidly. This is what they want to insure success. Land in the town calls a good price, as much as two hundred and fifty dollars a foot. The town contains many fine buildings, and if I were going to open business in the west, with a good capital, I would not hesitate to drop off at Calgary.

OUR REPRESENTATIVE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Mr. G. Hector Clemes, the genial representative of the CANADIAN GROCER and GENERAL STOREKEEPER is in the city in the interests of the able trade journal he is connected with. Nanaimo, B. C., Free Press, Aug. 6.

A sad accident occurred at St. Thomas the other evening. Mr. John Doyle, wholesale liquor dealer and a prominent citizen for the past ten years, was run over by a yard engine at the Michigan Central depot and had his right arm cut nearly off at the shoulder, his left hand badly crushed and was cut about the head and legs. He was carried to the Wilcox house and Drs. McLarty and Fulton summoned, who found it necessary to amputate the right arm at once. He now lies in a critical condition, but hopes are entertained of his recovery.

One of the new industries of the west is that of the B. C. Canning & Coffee Co. This firm is located at Vancouver, B. C. and is under the management of Mr. Walter Taylor, late of Toronto, who is well known to old curlers and Board of Trade men. The factory is fitted up in the latest style, and the company is going in to do a large business. Already large orders are coming in from the neighboring towns for can fruit, extracts, and coffees. Mr. Taylor himself was out buying fruit the other day, and secured as much as 37 tons. We wish this firm every success.

DANGERS IN DATING AHEAD.

It is scarcely credible, remarks a contemporary such practices as are noted below actually exist, but they are vouched for by high authority. It has come to our knowledge within a few days that matters are going from bad to worse instead of improving. Said an importer: "The practice is gaining. I was surprised a little while ago to see an invoice of sales by a competing house, in which the terms of credit were plainly stated at 7 per cent. off four months from December 31, next. This was bad enough I thought, but it was surpassed by another house that, in the endeavour to outdo the previous seller, has sold its goods 7 per cent. off four months from March 1, 1891. In each instance the goods were delivered immediately."

It is not possible for any one doing a legitimate business to compete with such terms of sale, and the only conclusion is that some houses have burdensome stocks, as the result of speculative importations, based upon the presumption that the tariff bill would have passed before this.

Does it ever occur to purchasers that these large discounts, plus the interest for the time anticipated, have been previously included in the prices of goods? This must be done, as no house can afford to sell goods on thirteen months' credit less 7 per cent. on open account. Those who buy on such terms must realize sooner or later that they have paid dearly for a few months, extra dating. It is the life insurance plan of adding 40 per cent. to the cash premium in order to pay a dividend of 25 per cent. at the end of the year. The purchaser at such rates is paying dearly for credit and capital, and in an unexpectedly short time will find that assets accumulated on such terms will scarcely liquidate his indebtedness at fifty cents on the dollar.

Sellers who grant these terms must expect the same ruin that has befallen those to whom such rates have been granted in the past. Search the records of failures for the last ten to twenty years, and where "rust out" has brought about what is called an "honest failure," dating ahead and its accompanying abuses have precipitated forty-nine catastrophes. And of the accompanying abuses the worst is the practice of spending commissions on such sales before they are earned, if, indeed, they ever materialize.

The Inland Revenue Department has recently issued a bulletin of about thirty pages which is devoted exclusively to the subject of baking powder and which shows that the majority of the goods in the market are adulterated and unfit for use. Prof. A. McGill, who has had charge of this important work for the Government, says that "imperial baking powder is an excellent baking powder." A word to the sensible housekeeper should be sufficient.

BEST SOAP

Which has a world-wide reputation of being the best lard soap made; noted for its PURITY and QUALITY. Hundreds of Soap Manufacturers have tried for years to imitate and discover the process by which it is made—but all have met with signal failure. No soap ever made has the same Washing Powers. Millions of families, mechanics, railroad engineers, railroad men will attest to this fact.

CIRCULAR AND PAMPHLET ADVERTISING.

A CANADIAN correspondent, in debating the question of phamphlet advertising in PRINTERS' INK a few weeks ago, made the assertion that pamphlets, even though properly addressed, frequently did not reach their destination, but remained piled up in the corners of the country post-offices until they were old enough to sell to the paper mills. This letter came under the notice of the Postmaster General, who considered it a slur upon the postal system and directed the District Inspector to call upon the writer and either clear the Department of the odium or remedy the evil if it was actually found to exist. PRINTERS' INK correspondent now writes: "I proved to the gentleman's satisfaction that the evil was genuine, but not confined to Canadian post-offices, as the same thing was going on just as regularly in Uncle Sam's domain, and I showed him also that it could not be remedied. The emoluments of country postmasters are not sufficient to enable them to have suitably arranged offices, extra clerks, full compliment of letter and newspaper boxes, etc., which would be needed for the proper distribution of the flood of books, pamphlets, calendars, almanacs and sample papers which continually pours into every post-office."—Printers' Ink.

MUSTY STORES.

A subject on which a great deal has been said and written the last dozen years is ventilation. The preaching, however, has been greater than the practice. In cases where theory has been backed up by the teaching of disastrous plague, the lessons have been taken to heart and buildings have been constructed with almost as much attention to atmospheric circulation as to light. This is true, however, almost exclusively of cities and towns, and is only partially true of them. It takes a long time for the principles of ventilation to find embodiment in the buildings which go up in country places or on farms. One reason seems to be that in the earlier days of Canadian settlement there was not required to be any provision made for the special purpose of introducing pure air and expelling foul. The huge fire-places created a draft that rapidly exhausted the impure air of the chamber in which people dwelt. So strong was the tendency of the old furnace to pump the room of its air and create a vaccuum, that not the least chink about window casement, under door or through the floor, but was a source of strong supply of pure air. The rapid rate of displacement within the room made each crevice fairly ravenous for outside air, and thus kept up a strong circulation. Cleanliness was all that was necessary, along with healthful food and exercise, to preserve health.

But after the advent of the stove and the coming in of buildings of almost air tight construction, there had to be a study of what came before as an attendant upon heat. And in the country generally that study was not intelligently gone into, and the dense walled buildings heated by stoves, continued to be put up without much thought of ventilation. In most of them the ventilating mediums are windows. But of all the country buildings, the store is about the least fitted to be the vessel of a body of pure air. There is everything in it, particularly in the grocery department, to defile the air. There is little egress, and that makes ingress practically of no account. If the foul air cannot get out, the chamber will soon be full of it, and then where is the space for the pure air? All it can do is to dam up the doorway so that none of the foul air can get out. There is no circuit.

The sense of smell is not given us solely for enjoyment, to be sensitive only to sweet odors. It is given for protection as well, and chiefly. An ill smell warns us of the presence of that which is menacing to health. But the olfactory nerves soon become dulled in the constant contact with impurity that emits an odor. Take the case of medical students. In the dissecting room they soon become unconscious of the smell that almost overcomes the casual visitor, and almost overcame themselves at the outset. It is the same with the keeper of a grocery that has acquired a musty smell. The shop-hands are not aware of anything offensive in the atmosphere of their store. Perhaps in the morning, fresh from the wholesome outside air, they notice it, but because they cease to do so in half-an-hour they reason that the staleness which caused the sensation has been carried off. But people coming in are aware that there is something wrong. The fact is impressed disagreeably on their consciousness. This is not good for trade. In fact it is bad, and in that effect illustrates the value of ventilation. In another way the priceless value of ventilation is brought home to a shopkeeper, and that is in the effect upon health. Where the air is not sweet smelling a man cannot live long and be well.

Windows, since there is very seldom any other channel of circulation, should be used freely. They should always be well opened in the morning. In winter, when windows can be less safely left open long, there should be a punctured orifice in the floor under the stove. A flue communicating with outer free air could lead to this. The warming action of the stove would hasten the draft of air under the stove and would there warm it before it got in circulation through the room. For pure air is as pure warm as it is cold. Warmed below it rises and carries impure air with it towards the ceiling, where some plan of exit can easily be adopted.

THE EVADED PORK TARIFF.

"Barrel pork, in brine, made from the sides of heavy hogs after the hams and shoulders are cut off, and containing not more than 16 pieces to the barrel of 200 lbs. weight, one and a half cents per pound, the barrel containing the same to be duty free."

This is the reading of the 101st item of the tariff measure that was passed in the last session of the Canadian Parliament. It not only fixes the duty on, but it defines the meaning of, mess-pork. Our readers will remember the latter function of this item was added to it after the budget was brought down and while it was being discussed in committee. Notwithstanding that the definition of pork dutiable at 1½c. is very express, yet, as we showed in our last issue, there are other classes of pork which American provision firms privately claim to be able to put on this market at the same duty as mess pork. This can be done only by fraud, as any other class of pork is dutiable at 3 cents per lb. The fraud can be only by some perversion of the intention of item 101, or by taking advantage of the ignorance of customs officials. It is surely out of the question to suspect that fraud is practicable through corruption of any customs officials in the service of the government.

Customs officials at certain ports,—not at Toronto, we feel sure—may be unacquainted with the distinctions that are signified by the different terms used in packers' parlance. Or, perhaps their ignorance may be laid at the door of the definition in item 101, which can be given an interpretation wider than that intended. There are three other classes of pork besides mess-pork that can be sent in the form of mess-pork, and the form is about all that is comprehended in the definition, and therein lies its fault. First, short-cut can be so packed as to be sent in and pass as mess-pork under this definition. As ordinarily cut up, short-cut is barrelled in about thirty pieces. These can be made into sixteen long cut pieces, the only caution necessary being to have the total weight not under 200 lbs. When in this market the pork can be sold as short-cut, what it really is. Secondly, clear pork can be sent in exactly similarly, and it was this which the circular referred to last week was offering. Thirdly, light pork, intended to make into smoked meat, can be sent in under this classification. In this case, instead of the bellies and backs being separated, they can be sent in as sixteen sides, large but not fat hogs being chosen, both the requirement for lean pork and that of the definition (200 lbs. to the barrel) can be satisfied.

But customs officials should know what mess-pork is really, and be guided by the intent of the customs definition, rather than by its imperfect words. It is seldom the appraiser who examines the pork, but usually a clerk. He should know his duty and should be held responsible for more than the perfunctory discharge of it. We are glad to hear that more vigilance seems to have been employed since our former reference to this evil was written. At least we should infer there was less fraudulent classification, as the state of trade in Canadian long clear has greatly improved.

TAX ON CAPITAL.

Some of our merchants have at last entered a protest against the municipal tax on capital employed in business. The wonder is that they have not acted sooner. Discontent has been steadily growing among them for some years. The Permissive Act passed by the Local Legislature affords an opportunity of having the evil removed, and the efforts now being made are a natural result of the government's action. Of all the forms of local taxation in modern times this is probably the most obnoxious as well as the most unjust, and we may add most unwise. Obnoxious, because it is revoltingly inquisitorial —unjust, because it discriminates unfairly— and unwise, because it is an embargo upon the enterprise of our leading commercial houses. It is most objectionable to have the assessor enquiring into a merchant's business affairs. There are but few even of our wealthiest firms that could not point to the time that an exposure of their position to the public would have been fatal to their prosperity. A business firm should no more be called upon to lay bare to the eye of the assessor the state of their resources than a private family should be forced to divulge the position of their domestic concerns. The very existence of a merchant frequently depends upon his ability to keep his own counsel, and why should he be called upon to abandon a reasonable privilege to bolster up a system of unnecessary exposure, certain perhaps, to end in personal disaster? The injustice of such a tax must be apparent to even the most thoughtless observer. The taxes as now collected are derived from the values of land, of buildings, of income and of personalty or capital. The merchant must of necessity pay the first two, that is, he must pay taxes on the value of ground and the building upon it in which he carries on his business, and as the ground is usually the most valuable real estate and the buildings substantial and expensive structures, he as a rule pays a full share in these two respects. Whether this is the proper basis of taxation we are not now discussing, but surely when the merchant is called upon to contribute his full proportion in these two forms, he should be entitled to be put upon a level with the rest of the community in his further contributions. Not so, however. The professional man (if not exempt, partially or altogether) pays upon his income. The man upon a salary (subject to a partial exemption) pays upon his income. The banks and other institutions pay upon their dividends, etc. The merchant alone is called upon to pay on the basis of his whole capital. The incongruity of a tax that singles out one class of the community for payment on their entire capital while all others pay only upon the annual results is plain, but the iniquity of the present condition of affairs becomes peculiarly prominent, when an unfortunate merchant is required to pay upon a supposed capital—upon the shadow of a capital existing only in the mind of the assessor. Numerous instances are on record where business men have paid taxes on a large capital when they were actually insolvent, and dare not appeal without giving up all hope of being able to overcome their difficulties. Practically the assessor in the majority of instances fixes the assessment at what sum he pleases. If less then the proper amount there is no appeal, if more there is no appeal or the appellant in appealing commits business suicide by destroying his own credit. If the merchant furnishes the amount to the assessor, the honest man gives it correctly, the dishonest man incorrectly, a condition of humanity impossible to remedy. There are to us positively no reasonable grounds upon which the iniquity of this tax can be justly upheld.

Again, we consider it unwise because it discriminates against our merchants in competing for the business of the Dominion. Instead of encouraging the enterprise of the Toronto merchants, we place a fine upon their energy. By the ability and perseverance of our merchants and manufacturers, the prosperity of our city is built up, and a few real estate sharks without contributing towards the general welfare become enormously rich by speculating in land. They are largely released from civic obligation by the payment of single tax. The merchant, on the other hand, is manacled by a chain of taxes, the last link of which is not only more offensive but more oppressive than all the rest. Montreal, our most formidable competitor, issues a license based upon rental instead of this odious system. Hamilton has, we believe, declared against taxing factory machinery. Several other places are moving against the present unsatisfactory condition of affairs which obtains throughout the Province. Toronto should not be last in the march of onward progress.

The Assessment Commissioner is an honest, upright man, and means well, but the position he has taken is incompatible with the welfare of the city, and not in keeping with the advanced political ethics of the day. Wealth should not be the basis of taxation. Opportunity, whether to acquire or to enjoy wealth, should be at the bottom of all taxation. We are not, however, now going to discuss the general question. Our object is to point out how offensive and unjust a tax on capital is, as well as enter our protest against our merchants being handicapped in the commercial race with shackles that would disgrace a village council of the last century.

UTILIZING PACKAGES.

We have once before called the attention of packers generally to the late custom in the States of using a package that will be serviceable to the purchaser when empty. A correspondent writing from Hamilton speaks of a visit to the large packing house of F. W. Fearman & Son, where a large number of packages in different shapes and sizes were marked to be shipped to outside villages and cities in every direction. Some were small tin pails, filed with choice lard, of no value whatever when empty; butter tubs that are liable to fall down unless kept where it is cool, and some regular lard pails, the latter being in demand for common uses when empty. The writer suggested to Mr. F. jr.. that the manufacturers of indurated fibre ware might devise some way of covering their wares so they could be used for that purpose and the consumer would have an article of ware suitable for any purpose when empty and the packer would get his returns in the increased sale of goods.

ONE ON JOHNSON.

Johnson—"I think I have read a grosser publication than the 'Kreutzer Sonata.'"

Jackson—"I have, often. There is a journal regularly published in this city which is considerably grosser."

Johnson—"You don't say? Why don't the morality department interfere? What paper is it?"

Jackson—"Ahem—THE CANADIAN GROCER."—Grip.

A similar pun to this was got off by Sir John A. Macdonald some years ago. It was in the days when Governor John Morrison, of British America, was in the grocery business here. A political meeting had been held at the Gardens, at which Sir John spoke. After the meeting he and John met, the latter called the Premier a "villain," with a merry twinkle in his eye. Sir John replied "Well Johnny if I'm a villain you must admit you are a grocer." But John is Scotch, and he did not see the point, although every one about roared. Quite irritated he retorted hotly, "I'm not a grosser villain than you."

It was not until long after he had retired that night, and had revolved the matter in his mind that the present Governor understood why every one had laughed so heartily when he replied to Sir John.

AN ARTFUL DODGE.

A man named Wormsworth hailing from Mountain Grove, a village in Addington county, where he keeps a general store and apparently does business enough to make his life comfortable, arrived in Toronto the other day. He had a check in his pocket for $851, which he had received from an insurance company in settlement of damage done to his store by fire. He got the money at the Standard Bank and paid a wholesale grocery bill of $149. He had $702 left, and after extracting a $50 bill from the wad for expenses he proceeded to take in the sights. He succeeded fairly well and when he wound up at the C. P. R. station at North Toronto he had a flask of paint in his possession. While there he made the acquaintance of Patrick O'Leary, who lives near the station. What occurred after that is not definitely known, but in a few minutes those in the neighborhood of the station were astonished at the cry of "police," and the sight of Wormsworth hanging to the coat collar of his astonished friend, O'Leary. A constable was soon on the spot and O'Leary was placed under arrest, and along with Wormsworth was taken to the police station. Wormsworth accused his new-made friend of stealing his money. Both were carefully searched, but the money could not be found on O'Leary. An unloaded revolver was found on the visitor, which he said he had bought to protect himself from robbers, but the police took care of him and put a charge of carrying concealed weapons on the slate against him.

In the Police Court, the following morning, the charge against Wormsworth was erased and O'Leary, who was charged with highway robbery, was remanded until Monday. When the case was adjourned Inspector Stark took the countryman up to his room with a suspicion that his story was fishy. After a few minutes' conversation with him he was convinced that his suspicions were well grounded, and put the man in charge of a detective with instructions to thoroughly search him. The detective was called away just as he commenced his search. Wormsworth took advantage of the detective's absence and slid quietly out and disappeared. He was found about two hours later by Acting Detective Tripp, and brought back to the detectives' office. This time he was stripped to the skin, and in the lining of his hat the money was found. He is now in custody, charged with carrying concealed weapons, which had formerly been erased.

Wormsworth has by his actions placed himself in a nasty predicament. He had an innocent man arrested on a false charge, and subjected O'Leary and his family to the disgrace of having their house searched. The prisoner owes several hundred dollars, it is said, to people around where he lives, and it is, in the opinion of the police, a deep-laid scheme on his part to gain their sympathy and get out of settling. O'Leary is thus clear of the charge, and will now have an opportunity to have his revenge by bringing an action against Wormsworth for damages. Just as the court closed, Mr. J. W. Lang, wholesale grocer and liquor dealer, of Front street, called at police head-quarters and signed bonds for $200 that the crafty countryman would appear before the Magistrate on Monday. On that day he appeared to answer the charge of carrying fire-arms, and was fined $40 and costs, the extreme penalty in the Magistrate's discretion.

LOOK OUT FOR THEM.

It is reported that the two young men R. B. Ford and J. H. Graham who have been mixed up in shady advertising fakes in Toronto and Montreal are operating in London. In Toronto they got out a lithograph of the Board of Trade building and solicited advertisements to put upon it. By false representations they secured a number of advertisements and collected a considerable sum of money. They then left the city suddenly. They next loomed up in Montreal where they commenced the publication of a "Fireman's Souvenir." Again they obtained under false pretences sums ranging from $500 down. We have not heard what scheme they are working on our London businessmen. We advise our London friends to be on the lookout for them. If a business man wants to advertise there are plenty of excellent papers which will insert the advertisement at reasonable rates. The experience of successful business men shows that money spent in newspaper advertising pays, while advertisements inserted in souvenirs, hotel registers, exhibition guides, lithographed hangers, sandwich boards does little or no good. It is strange that shrewd business men should be taken in by such people as Ford and Graham, and especially so after they have been warned. We laugh at the innocent farmer who is caught by the hay fork man but what can we say to a sharp, keen, shrewd business man of Montreal who though warned of the character of these men gave them $100 to forward their schemes.

CANADIAN TRANSPORTATION.

Canadian trade relations with the United States are the source of much worriment, on account of threats of non-intercourse. But in most cases there is some ulterior purpose in view, as special interests may dictate. A Washington correspondent, summerizing recent developements, says: "Some of our statesmen who are profoundly ignorant of the interests and necessities of New England persist in stirring up the question of Canadian transportation about every six months. Senator Cullom, of Illinois, has just given the matter prominence again by drawing from Secretary Windom a letter in regard to the legality of the transit privileges enjoyed by the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk railways. Secretary Windom suggests the possibility that he may cut off the privileges of the Canadian Pacific by revoking the powers exercised by the consular agent of the United States at Vancouver, but he is not likely to act in the matter when he comes to examine the treaties, laws and regulations under which the existing privileges are granted. These powers rest upon the plain language of Article 29 of the treaty of Washington, and there is no reasonable doubt that the article is still in force." The Canadian ministerial organ in Montreal refers to the subject and says that while it is possible that the Treasury regulations may be so amended as to disarrange the traffic with China and Japan carried over the Canadian Pacific Railway the matter is by no means important, as the withdrawal of the American agent at Vancouver would only "transfer the bonding to a United States frontier port." The threats involved, we are told, are becoming somewhat familiar, and have little effect. It would seem desirable, in the interests of trade, that this ceaseless making of faces across the boundary line and the calling of hard names should give place to some well defined policy consistent with the national dignity and self respect. Constant badgering becomes tiresome.—Iron Age.

SUGGESTIONS ABOUT ORDERING GOODS.

1. Write only on one side of the paper when ordering goods. The other side is apt to be neglected, and it is inconvenient for reference after the order is filed away.

2. Do not mention a remittance, and order goods both on the same sheet of paper. The remittance, in whatever form it may be sent, whether a draft, money order or an express order, goes to the cashier, and the statement that you sent it should be in shape to accompany it to insure you getting credit for the amount. The order will go to the order clerk.

3. Use one sheet for the remittance and another to write the order on, to insure prompt attention for both.

4. Do not send an order and a complaint about a former bill of goods or a claim for reclamation on the same paper. The trouble about which you write will have to go to the claim clerk for adjustment, while the order will go to a different part of the house to be filled.

5. It is better not to write part of your order and then introduce some other subject foreign to the order, after which continue your order. The stock clerk who is getting out your order has no interest in any remarks which do not refer directly to the order before him.

6. Not signing orders is more common than one would suppose. It leads to much annoyance and delay. Even if you have a printed letter head with your name and business on it, a house might not be justified in not filling it unless they first wrote to see if the order had your sanction. If they filled an order supposing you wrote it, they would have no proof you sent it if for any reason you did not want to pay for the goods when the bill became due, or for some reason refused to receive the goods.

7. Do not fail to stamp the envelope the neglect of this often sends the letter to Washington, D. C., to have the stamp sent, before the letter can reach its destination.

8. Write plainly so the parties cannot help understanding what you want. Do not crowd what you have to say, but take another sheet of paper to finish.

9. Give both the number and size of an article so they can make no mistake.

10. Do not abbreviate too much. A ½ gro. T Spoons may mean either Tea or Table Spoons, and you would be almost sure to get what you did not want.

11. There are many other suggestions which might be given which are just as important as those just mentioned. We should be pleased to hear from some of our friends on the subject,—Metal Worker.

One Curtis, of Windsor, charged by D. W. Mason, grocer, with having obtained some $300 worth of goods under false pretenses, has been held by Magistrate Bartlett on his own recognizance in the sum of $500.

SPECIALTIES.

Recently some remarks appeared in the Merchants' Review regarding the advisability of retail merchants adopting the feature of making a specialty of some novelty for the purpose of drawing trade. The idea of a specialty is not at all new, it being quite common for retailers to print upon their cards and other stationery an announcement to the effect that a certain staple is a specialty, when the fact too often is that that particular article has nothing, either in quality or any other respect, to distinguish it from the same staple which is handled by hundreds of other retailers. Therefore it is a mistake to so term it, and there is danger that instead of such a "specialty" being a benefit to the dealer, it may drive trade away, for when the article thus put forward lacks special superiority it follows that the public may judge the balance of the stock by the same criterion, and go elsewhere. It is not at all a hard matter to select the right kind of specialty, when the proper attention is given the subject. In a late issue we made some comments upon the strange lack of individuality of many city retailers, the uniformity of the appearance of their stores and the sameness in their selection of stock and arrangement thereof being very noticeable. But there are many conspicuous exceptions to this too common experience, and among them we have been struck by the enterprise exhibited in the matter of specialties. For instance, the other day we passed a fine, prosperous looking retail grocery which bore a sign announcing in large letters : "Headquarters for Perfectly Gleaned Currants." How many housekeepers, who in the past have been annoyed by the discovery of almost as much dirt as fruit in the currants purchased by them, not to mention the numerous little stones which seem to have an affinity for the dried currant—how many of these ladies who have spent more time than the job was worth in picking over and washing this fruit when needed for immediate consumption, have been attracted by that sign and induced to try a novelty, and probably purchase other goods in the same store, we can only surmise, but imagine that the proprietor has had no reason to regret hoisting that placard. Another retail grocer, in a neighboring city, offers several specialties, among them fresh eggs, from one to three days old, which are the product of his own hens, a great number of which have the run of his stable yard, and are a very profitable investment. When it is utterly impossible to obtain perfectly fresh eggs for the use of invalids from other stores in the vicinity, they can be had from this grocer at a reasonable rate, and the convenience assists his business wonderfully. Scrupulously fresh vegetables and fruits of the very finest quality form the specialty of one of the most successfully conducted retail grocery stores in this city. The array of samples of these goods along the front of the establishment is one of the sights of the neighborhood and the transient trade alone attracted by it must be enormous, judging from our own observation of the store in question. Similar examples might be given ad infinitum, but the few mentioned are sufficient to establish our point that a specialty possessing distinctively superior merits is essential to the most successful development of the retail business.—Merchants' Review.

HAVANA CIGARS GUARANTEED.

A precaution that will nullify in future the effect of a customs stamp misappropriated to the service of covering an excise stamp, is now to be taken by Havana manufacturers. The New York Sun says: Cigar importers have just received the first consignment from Havana bearing the new guarantee in the shape of a manufacturers' label. Many thousand boxes of them are destined for points as far distant as Montreal and San Francisco. Some of the brands have already been put on the market in this city.

This matter of a guarantee label has been talked of for nearly two years. The manufacturers of Havana are organizing in a union for mutual protection, and one of the difficulties with which they have had to contend is the disposition of conscienceless dealers in this country to sell domestic cigars as Havanas. The customs officials stamp every box of cigars arriving at this port with a label that certifies that the cigars were made in a foreign country, but the government stamp does not distinguish the different countries from which cigars come. So it has happened that German, Dutch and Mexican cigars, as well as cigars from other tobacco manufacturing countries, could not be told from Havanas by the great majority of ordinary purchasers. What the Cuban manufacturers desired was a stamp that would guarantee absolutely to the consumer the genuineness of their goods. It took them a long time to hit upon the right idea and longer afterward to execute it. The result is a label that will prove a dangerous if not impossible thing to imitate.

It is made up of several distinct features. The ground work is an engraving of intricate design, made up in scrolls interlacing and bearing the title of the manufacturers' union in very fine print. The general color given to the label by this background is dark orange. Across the surface in regular, legible type are the words that state the purpose of the label as a guarantee of the goods it marks. Beneath are the fac-simile signatures of the president, vice-president and secretary of the union.

Perhaps the most important features of the label are found at either end. At the left is a copy of the seal of Spain, permission to use which was obtained from the home government. This insures the co-operation of the Spanish authorities in prosecuting any who may attempt to imitate or misapply the label.

Below the national seal is a finely executed, fanciful design, the importance of which is chiefly to make counterfeiting difficult. At the right-hand upper corner is the head of Christopher Columbus. Across this end is stamped in jet black the seal of the City of Havana. This seal, oval in shape, is applied after the general label is printed, as may be seen when several labels are compared, for the letters and lines do not fall on the same place in every case. The last feature of the label is the name of the manufacturing concern that uses it. That is printed diagonally across the whole stamp, the words reading from the lower left hand to the upper right-hand corner. The type for this line varies with each house, being chosen so as to make nearly a complete diagonal line across the label.

The use of the union label is not compulsory upon Havana manufacturers. Every member of the union is supplied with labels, which he may use as he sees fit. It is generally understood, however, that from this time forward all cigars from Cuba will be marked with the union label. The label does not certify as to the quality of the cigars; it simply assures the consumer that these are genuine Havana.

Several months ago the union notified Americans importers that the use of the label would begin July 1. The importers asked for delay, for, alarmed by the increase in duty proposed by the McKinley bill, they had stocked themselves with Havana tobacco for months ahead of consumption. They argued that the genuine Havanas already in this country would be discredited because they would not bear the new lable. The union refused to delay matters. An importer said that no dealer need be disturbed about his new stock, because the customs stamp applied to every box at this port is always dated. A doubting customer may therefore be convinced by showing him the date of the revenue stamp, which will prove that the cigars left Cuba before the new label was adopted.

The union label is so put on the box that it touches three sides. A strong paste is used that makes it impossible to detach the paper from the wood without tearing it to pieces.

OUR MARKET FOR EGGS.

When the McKinley Bill was introduced, remarks the Ottawa Citizen, a Canadian cheese shipper happened to be in England, and thinking he saw a chance for a good thing in eggs, he made an arrangement with a prominent produce commission house for direct shipment of eggs. On his return to Canada he shipped a few cases, and the result has been so satisfactory, both as regards price and the condition in which the eggs arrived, that he is now buying all the eggs he can get for shipment to Great Britain, and his example will doubtless be soon followed by many others. The beginning is small, but it is foolish to despise small things. The first shipment of cattle to Great Britain, barely fifteen years ago, was only about a score. The shipments this year will probably reach 100,000 head. The demand for eggs in Great Britain is almost unlimited, and as there is no difficulty in keeping eggs for months in good condition, there is every reason to believe that Canada will be able to find a good paying market in Great Britain for every egg kept out of the American market by the McKinley Bill, and more, too, if we have them to sell.

POINTS FOR CLERKS.

It seems a pity that boys generally have adopted so many slang expressions and so many perversions of common language in their every-day speech. One almost needs an interpreter sometimes to know just what they do mean. It is of no use to attempt to learn the dialect, as the expressions change with every phase of the moon. Things seem to be less "high-toned" than they were a while ago, and "cheese it" and "give us a rest" seem about obsolete. But we need not congratulate ourselves over the improvement. The old has only been replaced by the new. "It tastes me so high," I heard a nice little child of 6 say the other day over something that was quite amusing. No one need be told that there were big boys in that house.

But it is not a good thing, though so many good boys have fallen into the bad habit. Pure, clear, sharp-cut words that express just what one wishes to say, give a man a power in society. You feel instinctively that there is no nonsense about him, and you naturally associate his method of speaking with similar clear methods of thinking. Your verdict is apt to be that "he is a smart man." We judge people very much by their speech, and they do the same by us.

I know a young man who is a bank clerk, whose every word is as exact as if printed in a book. He is a sharp, energetic man, prompt in all his duties, quick in his movements, but I never heard him give the false sound to a letter, much less use a perverted word. He is a man who commands universal respect wherever he goes, and one in whom the most implicit reliance is placed.

However we may condone this boyish foible of slang, there can be no apology given for an oath. It stamps its speaker with a very dark brand. It blackens the soul and poisons the air. It sullies every soul that hears it. So it is with all evil words which pass so glibly from one to another. One has well said of those who rehearse such speech: "It is as if one should dip his hand in a barrel of tar and then go about shaking hands with all whom he met." A blot left on the soul by a pitchy word cannot be effaced like a stain on the skin. Have you not known those whose hearts seemed like a seething cauldron of pitch? They are people to shun.

It is a good direction of the wisest man to "Let another man praise thee and not thine own mouth, a stranger and not thine own lips." Praise that comes to us that way is apt to have more weight with us than when it is only self-praise. Not many would claim, with the jovial Robert Burns. to "have descended in a line of scoundrels from the flood," but many seek to impress us with very different views of their ancestry and associations on all possible occasions. They will tell you in a half-hour's conversation of the fame of their cousin, the Senator, of the glories of their uncle's establishment in New York, of the letters their sister wrote home from Europe that summer she went abroad; how their father shook hands with Daniel Webster and was at a dinner with Clay—not even forgetting to mention that they went on board the Great Eastern. It is surprising how much personal history they can bring out in a short conversation. But what is apt to be your real estimate after they have gone, notwithstanding all their credentials brought forward to impress you with their importance? Boys never take well to this assumption of airs on the part of a newcomer, and generally have a "free masonry" among them calculated, as they phrase it, to "take the wind out of his sails." It may not be a pleasant discipline, but it is salutary.

Unassuming manners are a characteristic of real greatness. Self-contained ability is no boaster. The works of such men praise them far more than their lips.

Be content to fill well your own niche in the world, even though it is a narrow one. If you outgrow it you will find a better place in waiting. Do not try to shine by borrowed light. The family glory will only give you a faint flicker if you have not the real oil of merit in your lamp.

There are, of course, suitable times and seasons in which to speak of those things in which you are interested. An excessive reticence and air of mystery about one's affairs is apt to be misconstrued and is not wise. But even this is more creditable than to be in a manner constantly passing your hat soliciting the world's attention and consideration.

Be willing to pass for no more than you are and do not grieve if you are sometimes taken for less. It will be much pleasanter to have the world find by and by that your merit much exceeds your claims than to have it the other way. Good boys who have been unfortunate in their early training sometimes fall into this habit, but it is wise to suppress it before the world takes the case in hand, as it is very apt to do.

Longfellow says that "the talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well, and doing well whatever you do, without a thought of fame." Lowell puts it very neatly when he says of the footprints and rain spots on the sandstone—"Perhaps it was because the ripple and the rain drop and the bird were not thinking of themselves that they had such luck. The chances of immortality depend very much on that."—American Grocer.

On Sunday morning a cheese factory near Napanee, owned by Mr. J. K. McCargat, of Belleville, was destroyed by fire, and 180 boxes of cheese were burned in it. Insurance on cheese, $1,000, in the Royal Canadian, and $1,400 on the building in the Etna, which will not cover the loss. There are suspicions of incendiarism.

Mr. W. S. Kaife, Montreal, with Mr. James Innes and other gentlemen has been visiting a number of farmers in the vicinity of Guelph for the purpose of ascertaining the prospects for the successful operation of a beet sugar factory. Much encouragement was given by the farmers, and a convention of agriculturists will be held on the 30th instant, to discuss the subject of beet sugar raising. The product of 1,000 acres will be required to start the industry. Mr. S. Kaife is favorably impressed with the ocality as a centre for the operation of the beet sugar industry on a large scale.

The other day 50,000 pounds of wool was sold on the Chatham market at 18 cents per pound. The three wool buyers on the London market, Messrs. Wrighton, Pritchard and Elliott, have bought about 100,000 pounds and the prices paid by them will average over 21 cents per pound, in many cases 23 cents having been paid.

A lady living in Parkdale took the trouble to say to one of our staff last week that Silver Star Stove Paste was the best article of stove polish she had ever used. She said her reason for speaking of it was that she had enquired for it at both the grocery and hardware stores there, was unable to find it, and had to send to Hamilton for another box.

The old Central Bank building on Yonge street, in this city, is in course of metamorphosis. That structure will soon shed its dinginess, and take up its dressing with the other buildings about it which have been transformed from eyesores into architectural ornaments. The old bank, more than rehabilitated, is to be the new quarters of the Canadian Commercial Travellers' Association.

The firm of Bryant, Gibson & Co., has dissolved partnership. The old business will be carried on by Mr. Bryant, while Mr. Gibson will go into partnership with his brother, Mr. S. F. Gibson, to manufacture cocoas and chocolates. The latter has had many years' practical experience in the manufacture of these goods. They will occupy No. 35, Wellington st. east, and will be known as Gibson & Gibson.

Friday evening, about five o'clock, as a horse hitched to a delivery waggon belonging to Charles Nenino, grocer, Sarnia, was standing without a driver on W. B. Clark's dock, between the G.T.R. railway and the river, a train left the Sarnia station for Point Edward. The horse becoming frightened ran a race with the train, and endeavoring to cross the track at the switch house at the foot of Lochiel street, the engine struck the waggon, smashing it to atoms, throwing the fragments on top of the horse, which was extricated without any injuries except some slight bruises.

For a number of weeks past a gang of highway robbers and safe crackers have been plying their trade most industriously in the towns and villages about Montreal. Their latest exploit was at Joliette at 2 o'clock on Saturday morning. Mr. Edward Bigne keeps a general store in the village, and his safe was bored into from the top and blown to pieces by gun powder. The explosion also wrecked the store to a considerable extent, but the unknown robbers only got $15 for their pains. Chief Detective Cullen, in speaking of these robberies expressed the belief that the gang in question belonged to Montreal.

GROCERIES.

If the trade done since last report were to be taken as the unit of average for the year, it would not indicate a high state of activity in the grocery department of Toronto trade. At this season the average is usually not more than preserved, and in the present week is not so far out of reach as in former individual weeks of this year. Sugar goes off quietly, as do dried fruits and canned goods. The trade in coffees is dull, and in teas fair. Molasses, rice and spices go out in correspondence to a demand that is more active than usual. Money is scarce and payments are rather slow.

CANNED GOODS.

We are now between tides. The ebb of the old stocks and the flow of the new are going on at a time when about the least attention is given to either. Fresh fruits, one after another come in their season. Likewise, of varities whose season is past housewives have put down a domestic supply that will engage the family consumption for some time. For two months more we may expect dulness, as during that time fruit in its natural condition will be available. Also, the summer holiday season, the time of rusticating, picnicking, etc., is past, and canned goods will decline a great way from the state of demand which was maintained throughout that season. There is no change in any of the prices current a week ago. The probabilities of a very light pack of peaches is directing more attention to the 1889 pack of this goods. Usually dealers will shade prices of these at the tail end of the season, but this year they are fimly held at $3.25 for 3's and $2.25 for 2's. There is a good demand from jobbers for canned peas, and further sales were made the other day at $1. There appears to be little doubt that some of the canned goods packers sold more peas than they were able to put up. We hear of a case where one packer had to buy from another to fill his orders. Though the market is now slow for this class of goods, there is every reason to believe that the year's consumption beginning on the new pack will severely strain the stock on the market. A round lot of strawberries was sold on Saturday for shipment to the North-west at $2.20 here.

The pack of canned corn in Maryland in 1888 was about 900,000 cases. Last year 400,000 cases were put up. This year, it is estimated, not over 150,000 cases will be packed there.

The New York Bulletin says: There is still some variety of opinion on the future of the market for salmon, and more or less contrast also in currenr report as to the present distribution. The bulk of testimony, however, goes to show that the distribution is gradually expanding, and more prominently at interior points than at the centre. Columbia River flats, as a matter of fact, are becoming rather scarce, and there seems to be no great surplus of Columbia River tall tins, despite the large pack this season and the extensive deliveries making. Considerable old prime red Alaska has been bought up quietly, until now there is little or nothing in the way of a good article left that can be had at under 90c. f. o. b. As to the new pack of Alaska fish, information is fragmentary, but the belief seems to be gaining ground that, with due allowance for existing conditions in England, a pack equal to that of last year will be absorbed in the event of prices being kept down close to the present level.

Davidson & Hay report the arrival of a shipment of new canned salmon in flat tins put up by Ewing & Co., New Westminster. The quality shows up very well.

COFFEES.

The local demand is quiet. Prices are stronger. Cables report a further advance of ⅛ on Rios. The formation of the "Bagging Coffee Co." in New York was expected to have the effect of a monopoly, but it is not thought its capital is great enough to control the whole Rio crop, and the company proposes to be constituted only to promote the stability of prices. They will be large buyers, and in the case of a decline in prices will be enabled to carry a large supply until values have recovered They expect by large operations, facilities for bagging by steam, and the owning of large warehouses to effect great economies in their business. It is proposed to purchase large warehouses and establish agencies in New York, Havre and London, and they will engage in any financial transactions which have coffee for a basis. Ten per cent of the capital is to be paid up on subscription, ten per cent when the company is organized and the remainder can be called for by the directors, when they deem it necessary, in installments of twenty per cent, with an interval of ninety days between each call.

DRIED FRUIT.

Trade goes rather quietly on its way in this department of stock. The surplus of old crops is small. Latest advices confirm previous reports that the crop of French prunes will be heavy, but remark that, owing to backwardness, it is yet impossible to gain information as to the probable average size of the fruit. The new raisins will not be on this market for a fortnight at least. Currants are getting into smaller compass here ; the recent sales of round lots having reduced the stock materially. Half barrels are very scarce and 5¾ to 6c. is asked for barrels.

Sultana raisins and Eleme figs—The reports from Smyrna are briefly that the low estimates of the crops lately sent out must be still reduced in consequence of the continued dry weather, and it is now certain that the result will not be more than half that of last year, which was also a short crop of sultanas, though a good crop of figs.

Valencia raisins—Nothing having occurred till this date to prevent the safe drying and housing of the fruit, the safety of the good crop already reported is pretty well assured, but it is yet too early to speak definitely, as very large quantities will be exposed for some weeks yet.

Currants—Are offered by cable at reasonable prices, considering the greater consumption that will follow the abolition of the English duty and the growing demands of France, still buyers are not operating freely, expecting still some little concessions in view of the very large yield already reported.

Prunes—This article is monopolizing largely the attention of speculators in the United States, and though the price is exceedingly high, some business has also been done here, chiefly in Atlas prepared, as their seems very little chance of a decline. Even ordinary fruit in casks cannot be imported to retail under 10c. per lb. and importers are very unwilling to operate in this class of fruit here, as the consumption must be very much affected by such high prices, notwithstanding the certainty of a much smaller apple crop.

NUTS AND PEELS.

The stocks of nuts on this market have suffered little diminution from trade transacted this week. Prices rule as quoted a week ago. Candied peels are improving abroad. Orders given this week at old prices were accepted, but manufacturers cabled, "Accept no more." Scotch drained peel put up in kegs of 100 pounds each arrived on Monday. It differs in quality in that there is not so much sugar in it. Quotations are 15c. for lemon and 16c. for orange.

RICE AND SPICES.

No change in either. The demand for rice is fairly active, and that for spices is good, pickling operations keeping up the tone of the trade to a higher pitch than that generally reached in other parts of the year.

SUGAR.

The sales this week have been rather small and few. There is no further change in this market, granulated being still 6¾ to 6⅞c. There is a scarcity of brights, for which the demand is strongest at the moment. There is an abundance of low-grade stock which can be sold at 5⅛ to 5¼c., the lowest quotation having been reached since last report. Raws are 5⅜ to 5½c,, and are scarce.

Willet & Gray, New York, in their weekly sugar circular, say: Raws unchanged. Refined advanced 1-16c. European markets remained considerably above the parity of ours, and the refiners here wisely accepted the offerings of raws at current prices, which resulted in a good business. The meltings were large, and refiners' stock decreased 10,356 tons. The total stock decreased 14,170 tons, and is now 18,339 tons less than at the same time last year. At the close refiners are disposed to hold off, but, as their supply is only moderate, they must continue their purchase. The position justifies an improvement in prices here, until our values are on a level with those in Europe. The reduced stocks on that side and the enormous consumption going on indicate steady if not firmer prices there prior to the time when new beet sugar will be ready for delivery, which is likely to be several weeks later than usual this year. Notwithstanding the large sowings of beets and the more favorable weather lately, the reports show a poor yield. The demand for refined here is still very light pending Congressional action on the tariff and in view of the small fruit crop. This is not likely to cause lower prices, because the position of raws is so strong, and, as there is now every probability that any tariff bill, which may be passed, will not take effect before January 1, 1891, dealers need not be so careful about keeping their stocks low during the rest of the active sugar season. Total stocks in all principal countries are decreasing rapidly. On July 17, 1890, we reported same, at latest uneven dates, as being 1,007,688 tons, against 623,643 tons at same time last year. To-day the latest advices show 789,530 tons, against 548,113 tons for last year.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Molasses is in good demand, quite a large quantity going into consumption. Trinidads are cheapest offering on a basis of 32 to 35c. in puncheons. New Orleans molasses in barrels is 90 to 95c. This higher price is a result of the duty. There is little on this market. Syrups are quiet. Corn syrup is not quotable now below 5c., the great advance in corn, which has gone up 70 per cent. in the United States, causing a rise in the syrup.

TEA.

Tea is in fair demand with a better feeling in the market. The extent of the advance in some teas is shown by the New York sale of last week, when a second Young Hyson that was bought three month ago at 13½c. sold at 17½c. There are a good orders for low to medium grade Japans which are in light supply. Low-grade blacks sell very well, the market for them improving as a consequence of the scarcity of low-priced good value Japans, and the reaction of that scarcity upon the price of greens. Indian and Ceylon teas are quiet. In London a decline has taken place in nearly all grades. Medium teas showed a fall in some instances of a penny or two pence per pound. Lower descriptions were less affected. Really good liquoring kinds are still badly wanted. Musters lately arrived from Calcutta appear to show occasional improvement in quality. All descriptions of Ceylons have participated in the decline, except those with special point in liquor.

The mid-August issue of the London Produce Markets' Review says: "Altogether upwards of 17,100 packages of Congou have been offered at auction, comprising a large selection of the various descriptions of both Red aud Black Leafs. Common grades largely preponderated, and prices for these were generally weak, tarry Black Leafs being especially depressed, owing to the very small demand for them. The lower qualities of Saryune also sold at such low prices that they are likely to pass quickly into consumption. Moning and Kaisow Siftings of new impor were largely offered, and realised low rates, some of the former being of very good quality. Prices for China Tea generally have reached a very low point, and will compare favourably with any other descriptions. As soon, therefore, as the trade recognise this, a better demand is almost sure to spring up. In contrast, however, to the common descriptions of new Tea, the value of fine Black Leaf is well maintained, and as the supply is decidely small, prices are not likely to recede. Souchongs have been largely bought, both by the home trade and shippers, the crop this season being the best for some years past. The commoner qualities of new-make have sold at a lower quotation, but the quality is rather indifferent; the finer kinds, however, are scarce, and realise full prices. The new crop of Soo Moo appears to be liked, as most of the parcels are thick and juicy, but all other descriptions of Red Leaf compare unfavourably with those of last season.

Falk's Table Salt.---Cleanliness, Economy.

THE OLD STYLE.

Hitherto Table Salt has been sold in bottles, jars and thin paper packets. Most cooks know only too well the labor required and the loss entailed in extracting salt from bottles and jars, and in grinding the brick-like packet salt.

THE NEW DEPARTURE.

FALK'S TABLE SALT never cakes, but remains perfectly loose in the packets, which are made of paper of a novel description, excluding atmospheric moisture.

It is scrupulously clean. No hand touches it, either in the manufacture or the packing. All this is done by machinery invented by H. E. FALK; and the paper bags prevent any hand from coming in contact with the salt either in shops or kitchens. Consequently, it reaches the consumer in the same state of perfect purity and cleanliness in which it comes from the brine springs of Cheshire. To be obtained through the Trade.

Canadian Agents: THE IMPERIAL PRODUCE COMPANY OF TORONTO, LTD., Brokers and Commission Agents, 69 Front St. East, Toronto, and London, England.

PETROLEUM.

Prices are firm at last week's quotations. An improved trade is noticeable.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

There is very little to say about the drug and chemical trade. It is going along at a very normal pace with no new features to outline in a market report.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

In the plentitude of trade stock upon this market the want is most marked for really good table butter. Arrivals continue to be liberal but the monotonously low proportion of table butter is about the most steadfast feature of the receipts. The price would mend if the quantity and quality of this select grade would rise. Good dairy tubs, pails, or crocks bring 15c. There is a very good supply of pound rolls at 18 to 20c., with the latter figure paid only for strictly choice. The demand has a considerable set in the direction of pound rolls. Creamery tubs go off at 18 to 20c., and are rather deficient in quality. Creamery rolls are 20 to 21c., and are in strong request. Old tubs are not moving, but are quoted at 5 to 8c.

Cheese is 9 to 9½c. Dealers are selling June make at 9¼ to 9½c. Prices have advanced 6d. in England.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Are very scarce and the price remains at last quotations. A lot of 50 bushels changed hands on Monday at $1.70. Stocks both in Canada and the United States are very light.

DRIED APPLES—Have gone up to 7½ and 8c., and nearly all that have been put on this market have been taken off. The low yield of the new apple crop has stiffened prices greatly and accelerated the movements of buyers to get a hold of the remnant still unconsumed.

EGGS—Are 15 to 16c per dozen. The supply at present is adequate, though not so liberal as to make prices shaky.

HAY—No. 1 timothy on track is $10 for new and $10.50 for old. The quantity offering is large.

HIDES—Cured are 7¼c. No. 1 green cows' are 6½c. No. 2 are 5½c. and 3 are 4½c. The supply is light.

HONEY—Is unchanged. The demand is slow, being still engrossed with the fruits now to be had. Prices are yet 9 to 12c. for clear, and 14 to 18c. for honey in the comb.

HOPS—Are dull and quote from 10 to 12c. for yearlings, 14 to 16c. for '89 stock.

OATS—Old are worth 40c. on track.

POTATOES—Are now in very good supply

still bringing $1.50 in large lots and $1.75 to $2.25 per bbl. out of store.

POULTRY—Chickens are 50 to 70c., and ducks are 60 to 80c. The market is kept very well stocked, no shortage being felt in either.

SKINS—Are 70c. for sheep. For calf prices are 8c. for No. 1, and 6c. for No. 2.

TALLOW—Rough 2c. Rendered 5½c.

WOOL—Is dull and unchanged at 21 to 23c.

FISH.

The supply of fish received this week is a little better than last week, and the local fish dealers are better able now to supply the demand. The prices for nearly all class of fish have advanced owing to scarcity. Trout is reported to be a little more plentiful, while white fish is very scarce. British Columbia salmon is in fair request, but the supply will be scarce from now on, as the run for that class of fish is about over. Lake herring is very scarce this week. The shipment is not large enough to supply the demand. There is the usual demand for pickerel. Black-bass is in good demand. The following are the prices :—Trout and whitefish 7c. ; British Columbia salmon 15 to 16c. ; lake herring $2 per hundred ; pickerel 5c ; black-bass 8c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The bulk of the orange stock that now meets the demand is Italian. The Sarrento or Rodi fruit is what seems to be fittest for the market yet. It goes at $8 for 200's or 160's. There is but a moderate demand, the supply of native fruits still taking off a great part ot the consumption on which the orange trade depends. The Jamaica stock so far on this market is but small, and prices are stiff, standing at $10 to$11. Lemons are $5.50 in 200's, and $9 for Messina stock in 300's and 360's. They are now in fairly strong request. Bananas are $1.25 to $1.50, and in weak demand.

PROVISIONS.

There has been a very satisfactory week's trade. Sales of long clear have improved, which is taken as a sign that the importation of it under the false classification of mess pork is about over. Smoked meats are in undiminished request, hams having advanced ½c. to their highest quotations.

BACON—Long clear is 8¼ to 8¾c. Bellies are 10½ to 11c. Backs are 11 to 11½c. Roll is 10c.

HAMS—Smoked are 12½ to 13c. Sweet pickled are 11 to 11½c.

LARD—Is 9¼ to 10c.

MESS PORK—Is $16 for heavy and $17 to $17.50 for short cut.

SALT.

The business transacted in the salt market this week was very fair considering the Liverpool prices which they have to compete against. There is not so large a sale for bbl. salt this week. The prices are a little lower. The Toronto Salt-works transacted the following sales for the week :—2 cars coarse salt at 70c ; 1 car bbls. at $1.39 ; 1 car dairy at $1.18. Smaller quantities sell at $1.55 to $1.60 for bbls.; 80 to 85c. for coarse sacks, and 55 to 60c. for ¼ sacks.

DRY GOODS.

Dry goods men are beginning to have their turn. The past week's business has been a large one. Trade has received a very strong impulse from the glowing prospects, which are now almost realities, of the year's crops. The eve of the fall movement of grain has never been a time of greater activity in the dry goods trade than it is this year. Prices remain firm in all departments.

MONTREAL

MONTREAL MARKETS.

AUG. 28, 1890.

GROCERIES.

The various lines of groceries show a rather quiet feeling at the moment, but this is natural with buyers awaiting the return of customers from the country vacation, etc. In consequence, business on the whole is of limited dimensions, but the outlook is very favorable for new business, in fact, as evidenced by the orders which have been placed for wines and spirits lately, which are generally a good barometer of the feeling of the market. The prospects are for a pretty full movement during the coming fall. The tone generally is firm in most lines of imported goods, while in our own produce with the exception of butter which continues dull, the tone is strong all round. Hops, especially show up in this particular, and the indications all point to pretty long prices for new crop this season.

DRIED FRUIT.

Aithough there is not much doing at present in dried fruits, the outlook is favorable for a good movement this fall. The same applies to green fruit which is steady in the whole with old stock well in hand so that the market is in a generally healthy state for fresh supplies. In dried fruit no business of any account is reported in new crop of raisins or currants, but with stocks of old well reduced prices are reported to open favorabiy. One holder who has already placed a few boxes of new raisins, says that he is willing to sell at 8c. and it is expected that figures will rule from 8 to 8¼c. on new crop as previously stated. First arrivals of them cannot possibly be here before the 15th of September. For currants the same remarks apply, but so far, no facts are available on which to base a spot price for new crop. Old stock is practically cleared out what little there is here, selling at 6c. in barrels and 6¼c. in small packages. For old stock raisins a few selected Valencies are offering at 8c. with layers at the same figure, while there is a small stock of Eleme which are held for 7 to 7¾c. Sales of Sultanas have been made at 12 to 13c. but we know of one round lot which changed hands under special circumstances for a lower figure, about 1c. less per lb. This however was an exceptional case and it is very unlikely that anything else could be moved at such a figure. In foreign green fruit the May importations are now all off the market, there being no Valencia oranges or lemons in first hands, the last lot of the latter changing hands a few days ago at $8.00 per box. Some Jamaica oranges are expected shortly, but none are on the market yet, the only fruit of the kind offering being some Messina lemons which come via New York and are selling at $7.50 to $8.00 per box according to quality. Prunes also are scarce like other lines of dried, and Bosnia are the only kind offering and sell at 8c. in 55 lb. boxes. There is no Turkish or French stock on the market so we do not quote them.

SUGAR, ETC.

The market has developed no specially new feature during the week, but the outlook is satisfactory on the whole, and a favorable feature noticed during the week is an increased demand for raw sugar, business in which is reported at 5⅛ to 5⅜c. per pound according to color. Granulated is slightly easier at 6⅜ to 6½c. In syrups the position remains firm and stocks here are very small, quotations ruling firm at 3½ to 4½c. with every probability of an advance in the immediate future, as no fresh supplies could be moved except at extreme figures. The same remarks apply to molasses which are held at 36c. per gallon, and 37½ to 38c. has been spoken of but we can cite no transactions at the advance.

TEA AND COFFEE.

The tea market has been active in a quiet way like other lines during the week, but there is nothing very special to note. Japans meet with a ready sale at 15 to 17½c., while advices from New York report additional firmness, which has its effect. Consequntly the spot market is rather bare of stock, as the changes favor a more profitable turnover in the former markets. Very little black tea is offering, and one importer has cleared all his old supplies at fair figures. Coffee continues about the same with a quiet movement in a small way. For five and ten bag lots we quote Rio 20 to 22c ; Santos 22 to 23c ; Jamaica 23 to 25c ; Maracaibo 23½ to 25½c. Guatemalio 22 to 24c ; Plantation Ceylon 24 to 26c ; Java 28 to 30c ; Mocha 30 to 31c ; Costa Rica 25 to 27c. Advices cite a firm market in New York on all grades.

SPICES

Remain quiet and firm with no particular business to note, and Pemento is worth 6½ to 7c, while there is no change in pepper, and Jamaica ginger is worth 17c to 18c.

RICE.

Business in rice is fair and the market seem healthy enough. We quote : Common, $3.70, Japan $4.10 to $4.25 and Patna $5.50.

CANNED GOODS.

There is no change in the general position of the market business ruling dull in most lines. Some fresh supplies of lobsters have been received, but prices asked do not seem to suit buyers so but little business has resulted. They are quoted at from $7.50 to $8.00 a case. Salmon continues quiet and we do not know of any round lots having changed hands. Advices from some sections state that the Tomato crop has been damaged but the expectations are for a fair pack but not a large one. Asking prices are $1 10 but buyers ideas are somewhat less. On the whole the pack of vegetables is not expected to be large and fairly steady prices are looked for.

GREEN FRUIT.

Stock in this line furnishes most of the activity to the fruit market at present, and so far the usual seasonable business has been done. Apples are rather dull, the stocks being light and of fair quality, prices ruling at $3 to $4 per barrel, which is a decline of about 50c. since last week. Bartlett pears are steady at $1.25 per basket and Clopp's favorite are offering at $7 to $8 per barrel and $1 per basket. Canadian peaches sell from $1.75 to $2 and Concord grapes at 10c. per pound with plumbs at $1 to $1.25 per basket. On the whole, business in these lines is quite up to the average, and some depression may be expected shortly when the demand for preserving really sets in.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

The egg market here rules easy but prices have been generally steady at 15½ to 16c. and we hear of no business under the inside figure. There is some accumulation of stock of late.

HOPS.

The hop market is excited at the moment in view of recent transactions in 1890's. A New York speculator having purchased here from Mr. A. J. Luce, the world-known grower, some thirty to forty odd bales of Palmers, for which he paid 42c. which is a pretty long figure. This is the first sale of new crop made on spot so far, and the lot went forward in the first Allan steamer to London this week. For the balance of the lot which comprises about 150 bales, a good figure, 40c., also was paid, and with these figures in view and very little danger of any material foreign competition this year higher prices may be looked for, therefore, no one need be surprised now that the first sale of 1890's on the London market some time ago made $1 a pound for the small lot of Washington that was offered. From New York continued strong advices are to hand. A contract for 100 bales 1890 Pacifics being closed for 32c. New York delivery, and telegrams from the coast report bids there at 27 to 28c. for Washington's and Oregon's. Locally there is very little doing and brewers do not seem to have much faith in the advance, but the outlook is that they will be disappointed. The small lot of 1890's at present on spot is firmly held at 20c.

ASHES.

The ashes market continues strong, and with light receipts all along there is not any likelihood of this strength being abated. First Pots are held at $4.25, and Seconds at $3.75. There are few Pearls offering, and no business is reported on which to base a figure.

BUTTER.

The butter market shows no improvement and offers from holders in the country are frequent, but nothing results, simply because there is nothing doing, except a jobbing business. For creamery it is claimed that 18c. has been made for August, but we doubt the figure, and think that 17c. may be looked upon as an extreme, while for best Townships dairy 15c. is about the idea. We quote late made creamery 16 to 17c.; finest Townships 14 to 15c., and medium and Western 12 to 13c.

CHEESE.

Beyond the speculative movement in the country there is no feature to the cheese market at the moment. Holders are actuated by a confident feeling, but there is some want of encouragement from the other side so that the market is unsettled. Still with the progress of the season the make should be worth more money and it is evident that some dealers think so, for further purchasing has been done in the northern New York markets by Montreal dealers on a basis of 8⅜ to 8⅝c. which means close to 9c. here. On the whole therefore the market may be closed as steady and we think that 8¼c. is the very inside figure on which a line of finest Canadian could be moved and even at that we think it unlikely that a large lot would be parted with. On spot business is confined to Townships and French country makes, with occasional shopping for other cheap lots, the prevailing basis being about 8⅛ to 8¼c. We quote: Fancy Augusts, 8¾, Finest July, 8⅜ to 8½, Finest Townships white, 8¼ and French country makes, 8¼.

PROVISIONS.

There is nothing doing in provisions, which continue without change. We quote Canadian short cut $17.50 to $18; Mess pork $17 to $17.50; short cut Western 17.50; lard 9 to 9¼c; for Western, and 8¼ to 8 1-2c. for Canadian in pails.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

The grain market is quiet and firm. There is nothing doing, except a small business in Lower Canada oats, which bring 40c. In flour the market is firm and higher all round, and city brands are firmly held. We quote: Straight roller, $4.90 to $5; extras, $4.65 to $4.75; fine, $3.25 to $3.50 and strong bakers, $6.00.

The stocks in store show a decrease of 27,751 bushels of wheat, 34,403 bushels of corn, 36,206 bushels of peas, 9,248 bushels of oats, and 1,018 bushels of barley compared with a week ago. Compared with a year ago there is a decrease of 237,478 of wheat, 13,394 bushels of peas, and an increase of 3,913 bushels of corn, 61,106 bushels of oats and 5,941 bushels of barley. The stocks of flour in store show a decrease of 9,107 barrels compared with a week ago, and 19,972 barrels compared with a year ago.

TRADE SALES.

At Suckling, Cassidy & Co's. auction rooms on Wednesday, the grocery and clothing stock along with the store fixtures, of M. R. Kidd, Peterboro', amounting to $6,627, was bought by Gough Bros., Toronto, at 60½c. in the dollar.

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday s yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

JOHN BAKER EDWARDS, P.L.D., D.C.L., F.C.S.,

Public Analyst for the District of Montreal, and Professor of Chemistry.

CHEMICAL LABORATORY, MEDICAL FACULTY, MCGILL UNIVERSITY.

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Company:

GENTLEMEN,—I have taken and tested a sample of your "EXTRA GRANULATED" Sugar, and find that it yielded 99·88 per cent. of Pure Sugar It is practically as pure and good a Sugar as can be manufactured.

Yours truly,

G. P. GIRDWOOD.

"SALESMEN AND SALESMEN."

"There are salesmen and salesmen," said the Street Philosopher, "and I do not wonder that the proprietors find it hard to get what they want in that line, judging from the number of poor clerks one finds in the stores he may visit. Some are anxious to sell and make you feel easy at once, and that you can just get what you are after. Others do not seem to care whether you buy or not, and only make the most perfunctory efforts to show that they are salesmen. I have no doubt these latter are always complaining that their employers do not recognize their merits. Very likely not.

"To illustrate some of the characteristics of salesmen, some instances are called to mind. Not long ago I had occasion to go into a clothing store for a coat. I knew the size I wore exactly, and called for it. I also knew that coats of the same number vary greatly in size. The clerk found a coat bearing the required number, but it was much too small. Instead of finding other coats, the clerk seemed to think that he had done his duty, and made no more efforts to effect a sale.

"I remember once of going into a hardware store, where the clerk sat reading the paper. I walked to the counter, but the clerk kept on reading. I waited a moment and then turned to the door. At this the clerk made a movement of rising, but I said to him : 'Don't disturb yourself on my account, I only wanted to buy something, and beg pardon for intruding on you.' What the clerk thought I do not know.

"Another time I went into a woodenware store for some article, and the stock was on a shelf. The clerk informed me if I would buy one he would get the articles down for me to examine. But I did not stay to examine.

"Not only are there poor sticks among salesmen, but they will also be found among 'salesladies.' Some of these are positively exasperating in their indifference to customers. I know they have had places to fill in those big stores where the 'bargain' advertisements bring out the professional shopper, but for all that, this lack of attention offends customers.

"I am pleased to go on record as saying that while there are many poor clerks, there are also many good ones, with whom it is a pleasure to deal. Their worth to the proprietor is well known, and they are never long out of a job; for while they work hard for themselves, they also work hard for their employers.—Ex.

The Inland Revenue Department has recently issued a bulletin of about thirty pages which is devoted exclusively to the subject of baking powder and which shows that the majority of the goods in the market are adulterated and unfit for use. Prof. A. McGill, who has had charge of this important work for the Government, says that "imperial baking powder is an excellent baking powder." A word to the sensible housekeeper should be sufficient.

A customer secured is a promise of greater salary in time.

Work can always be found in a store without double-million microscope.

As the design of THE CANADIAN GROCER is to benefit mutually all interested in the business, we would request all parties ordering goods or making purchases of any description from houses advertising with us to mention in their letter that such advertisement was noticed in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

THE SALMON PACK.

Statistics prepared by THE CANADIAN GROCER of the British Columbia salmon pack indicate that it will fall short of last season's by about 25,000 cases, though the exact results will not be known for some time yet. It will still be an enormous pack. Our estimate makes it about 370,000 cases against 395,000 last year. The largest previous pack was in 1882 when 249,400 cases were put up. The run of salmon this year was as heavy if not heavier than last. This was entirely unexpected for a heavy run, such as that of last year, is usually followed by a light one. The packers were not prepared for it, and were unable to put up all the fish they caught. The Dominion Government has recently been devoting a good deal of attention to the protection and development of this industry, and the unusual run of 1890 is no doubt due to this fact. The following shows the annual pack for the twelve years :—

Year.	Cases.	Year.	Cases.
1879	37,394	1885	107,088
1880	61,156	1886	163,004
1881	173,800	1887	204,000
1882	249,400	1888	170,000
1883	177,412	1889	395,000
1884	138,947	1890	*370,000

*estimated.

THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

The Exhibition opens on Monday. The energy, inventiveness and liberality which have made the success of this exhibition a matter of yearly progress in the past, are at work under the highest pressure, to make the present fair a superior evolution of its predecessor. The business men of the country should visit it. The whole industrial cosmos is there represented, and has its latest lessons for the intelligent, interested observer. A week would be well spent in the Exhibition park between the 8th and the 22nd. Business men who come, are invited to make use of our office as their postal headquarters. Their letters, if addressed to them at No. 6 Wellington st. west, Toronto, THE GROCER office, will be well taken care of till called for. Correspondence can also be attended to here without any inconvenience to us. Our city friends we feel sure will give the out of town merchants a thoroughly hearty welcome and make their stay enjoyable.

"CANADIAN GREASE."

In the stock of butter which is on this market now, the observer may trace, in not very dim outline, the features of the matured situation in which this dairy commodity will be, by the time spring comes round again. That situation will bear the stamp which has been impressed on all the back numbers of the spring situation of our butter market for the past several years. It is early to look for the "eating canker," while we have wholesome pasture and pure running water, and while we are yet so little removed from the opening of the new butter-making season. But it is not too early to find it. What do we find? We find already that the stream of trade has begun to deposit its annual detritus of bad butter along its course, and to pile it up at its mouth. It is a process made familiar to us by years of experience. In country stores and in city warehouses the work of accumulation has begun, and there is a very large quantity of June butter that has missed its opportunity ever to be sold as new butter. It is seldom we have made so much progress by the end of August in collecting our stock of unsalable butter for the spring market.

The name at the head of this article is what our butter has won for itself in the English market, where for some considerable time it has not been wanted. The name is a bad selling-brand. And it would seem that our butter is not to be unworthy for some time at least, of the addition it brought back from over-sea. Not only is there a large quantity that cannot be smuggled upon the current market, but there is a very large proportion of butter that will not keep. Buyers say that the stock goes off flavor this year much more than it did last year. There is more butter of the "cheesy" character than is usual. Consequently it will not keep. This "cheesy" characteristic is the fruit of which sour cream is the seed. It is bad because the raw material was bad; the cream had "turned" before it was used. Also, the makers were at fault. The cream need not have got into this condition. Makers, too, in many cases have not kneaded the butter free of moisture, and so have introduced the cause of early decay. It is said the cream this year continues fresh for a shorter time than it does in average circumstances. The reason which is put forth in explanation of this, is the rankness of the herbage and abundance in it of noxious weeds. In these vegetable conditions, it is held, are to be found the causes of speedy fermentation of the cream.

To the two unsatisfactory features referred to—the formation of a surplus, and the low-keeping quality of the stock—may be added two more :—first, that the quantity of butter made is larger than usual, and second, that the average of quality is lower. It is said that in this country there is not only the capacity but the buying will to consume all the good butter there is made here. Then how great must the quantity of bad butter be, as our consumptive demand is far from being equal to keep the market bare of all the butter put upon it! If the excess over our own normal consumption be bad butter, the loss is enormous. The value of our dairy exports would be millions above what it is if we had none but good butter. The country has to lose this, but upon what Canadians does the loss mostly fall? Plainly, upon the general storekeepers and grocers. Of course the amount obtainable from all the good butter we should make would be the proceeds of prices now seldom, if ever, paid. Therefore, the difference between the total now realized and that which should be realized would represent more than the loss suffered by the retailers. But there is no important part of that loss suffered by anyone else. The country simply does not get it and never paid for the proportion of the loss which is not borne by the dealer. The dealer perhaps gives 14c. for butter that should be made marketable for 22c., and the dealer sells it for 4c. The country is 18c. poorer than it should be, the retailer is 10c. poorer than he should be. His loss is on an outlay. Nobody laid out anything for the other 8c. of loss to the country.

The only redeeming feature now visible in the butter market is the increase in the quantity of creamery-made stock. If the rate of that increase can safely be taken as representative of the movement towards the abolition of domestic dairies, we may congratulate ourselves as a people, and the country dealers may congratulate themselves as a class. If such is the significance of this one redeeming feature, then it should rule the impression which we take away from the prospect and we should be hopeful.

TRANSIENT TRADERS.

In its last week's session the markets, fire and police committee of the Hamilton city council adopted a by-law relating to transient traders, which enacts: That no transient trader or any person who occupies premises in the city for temporary periods, and whose name has not been duly entered on the assessment roll in respect of personal property or income for the then current year, and who may offer goods or merchandise of any description for sale by auction or in any other manner conducted by himself or by a licensed auctioneer, or otherwise, shall carry on his trade or business or offer goods or merchandise for sale in manner aforesaid without having obtained a license so to do, provided always that this by-law shall not affect, apply to, or restrict the sale of the stock of an insolvent estate which is being sold or disposed of within the city in which the insolvent carried on business therewith at the time of the issue of a writ of attachment or of the execution of an assignment; that every such person before he commences to trade shall pay to the city treasurer the sum of $100 by way of license, which sum shall be credited to him upon and on account of taxes for the unexpired portion of the then current year as well as any subsequent taxes, should he remain in the city a sufficient time for taxes to become due and payable by him, and in any other event shall be taken and used by the city as a portion of the license fund.

This is a thorough going measure. We hope the committee's report embodying it may be adopted by the council, and that there may be no question that the by-law is intra vires of municipal enactment and enforcement. It is the first bold stroke yet made for the suppression of a crying injustice to resident tax paying traders. A migratory trader may camp nearly where he pleases, may despoil the trading limits of residents who have long contributed to the local exchequer, and, when he has quenched the demand, may strike his tent and go wheresoever he pleases. He has simply to avoid the assessor. The rent he pays his landlord is so appraised as to include the tax on the store only, as that is all on which the landlord is taxed, but the stock, which is the basis of the most grievous burden levied on resident traders, yields no tax directly or indirectly. We hope Hamilton may succeed. In that city was begun one of the most hopeful movements of the times for the uplifting and strengthening of trade, and we hope that movement, as carried on by the different Business Men's Associations throughout the country, may be helpful for the engrafting upon the city, town and village statutes of the whole country the principle involved in Hamilton's proposed by-law for the regulation of transient trade.

The by-law is particular to designate that mode of disposing of transient stocks which is most objectionable to the fixed trader, namely, by slaughtering auction sales. For these the specious plea has long been made, that they paid a tax in their employment of an auctioneer, although the imperceptible proportion of the license that would fall on an individual customer of an auctioneer would bear no proportion to the tax a stationary trader with an equal stock would pay. In fact, if a stationary trader concludes to have an auction he has to contribute to the payment of the auctioneer's fee and still be taxed on stock. So the employment of an auctioneer by the owner of the portable stock is not even in appearance a submission to local taxation.

The license fee is none too large. Also the measure provides for that fee being converted into an instalment upon the year's taxes, if the transient trader should make up his mind to become a permanent trader.

CANADIAN HOG RAISING.

It appears as if the hog-raisers of this country were at length to have a chance. That is what they want. They have a fair measure of protection in the present customs tariff, although protection that was adequate came tardily. But, as we said in a former issue, the farmer must be given time, as hogs up to the quantitative capacity of this market cannot be made forthcoming the moment increased duty is put on foreign hogs. Men have to be given time to provide the stock and to build up anew an industry that was overwhelmed by American competition. Given the time, they can accomplish the thing that is to be done. There are some who cry out against any helping hand being held out to the farmer by the government to revive the hog-raising industry, claiming that if any industry cannot of its intrinsic vigor maintain itself against all competition, it should be left to the chances of extinction. There might be less to say against that contention if the competition were the result of purely natural causes, if it were not itself very largely a product of customs creation. To-day, the stress of competition of United States hog and pork producers would not be sufficient to extinguish pork-production in this country, if the United States supply had a free outlet to other great pork consuming countries. Germany and France have both shut the doors of their markets to the American packer, and the millions of hogs which would go to these countries if but a reasonable tariff barrier had to be surmounted, were crowded against our boundary and overflowed our market. The competition, therefore, was very largely a matter of tariff creation, a result of the prohibitive duties which Germany and France were scared into establishing against the dreaded trichinosis. The only defence this country had was by recourse to the same sort of weapon as that by which it was indirectly attacked. It had to make use of its tariff to escape consequences of the French and German tariff.

Canadian farmers should between this and next autumn produce a large number of hogs. There is a market for them in this country, which the all-year operations of the packers will now be the steady support of. What adds to the strength of the farmer's position as a hog-raiser is the shortage in the corn crop of the Western States. This must greatly reduce the quantity of pork raised in the year between autumus in the United States, and must give our farmers additional protection in the higher cost of production which will be experienced by their old competitors in the Western States. Against our farmers, on the other hand, is the deficit from the average yield of this year's pea crop. This is offset again by the liberal barley yield, for which the farmers did not look forward very hopefully to a good market, last year's crop having been sold at very low figures, and the strong probability of the passage of the McKinley Bill standing against the likelihood of good prices this year. This barley can now be fed on the farm much more profitably than it can be sold, and will become a source of enrichment to the soil. With increased tariff protection, a sufficiency of fodder and a strong home demand in his favor, with also increase in the cost of production against his rival, the Canadian farmer ought to derive a considerable revenue from the raising of hogs for the coming year's trade.

Next season's California canned fruit will be largely put up in outside soldered packages. This method will allay the fear of lead poisoning, and restore trade with Germany, whose government prohibited old style inside soldered cans.

PRIZE GOODS.

MR. EDITOR:

Prize goods have become very popular in this city of late, especially among the smaller dealers. Glassware and platedware, set off by pyramids of baking powder tins or tea packages, have become the fashionable counter ornaments. As a show these goods look well enough, but the all important question to be considered is—Is there any money in the business? For my part I do not believe in it. We have tried a lot of Davis' New Era baking powder. They sold like hot cakes. The powder is very good, but to those drawing the smaller prizes the powder is very dear. The desire to get one of the valuable prizes is what makes the customer try his luck, but the articles worth having being always very limited, a large majority of those persons will leave your shop dissatisfied. Such transactions, I believe, will have a very injurious effect in a short time. Moreover, prize goods generally leave a very small margin to the retailer. And, again, you run a good chance that the last packages will remain on the shelves as dead stock.

Another system is to give a prize to every person who purchases a given cash amount. Pass-book customers are also entitled to a prize, if their accounts are paid in full regularly. In short, everybody who buys groceries for the sums fixed, and pays for them, will receive a prize. The customer who would leave a balance of say fifty cents on a month's bill, would lose his right to the reward.

This looks very well theoretically, but I have some doubts as to the results on a practical test. I doubt very much whether it would make "dead beats" pay their bills. Would it increase sales enough to compensate for the losses incurred in the purchase of the prizes? These amount to about 5 per cent. of the sums for which they are given.

Travellers tell us that prize goods are very successful out East. Now, Mr. Editor, my object in writing these few lines is to ask you to give your readers the benefit of your valuable opinion on the points raised. All grocers, I am sure, will gladly adopt any honest means of increasing their sales, and consequently their popularity.

Yours,

Ottawa, Aug. 26, 1880. A. E. P.

There is a very generally received way of testing departures from conservative methods of trade, and that is by the measure of their immediate effect. If that primary outcome of the novel device is an increase in trade, then the novel device is good. The word "good" in this sense is not necessarily connected with its use as a moral epithet. The principle involved in the departure may be neither moral nor far sighted. But both these defects in it are cheerfully overlooked by some traders, if it has the potency to create a lively spell in trade. These meet the objection on moral grounds by the cynical statement that the people are not honest when they see any opportunity to overreach the trader, and that they prefer a little go aheadness to the dull routine of strict measure for measure. The objection to a given method on the score of its shortsightedness, is met by the man of nimble wits and sprightly fancy, thus: that the scheme is not intended to grow hoary-headed in the service of trade, that according to the ideas which prevail nowadays it must be superannuated in a few weeks; some other bright notion must be ready to supplant it before it has quite outlived its popularity. The shortsightedness of the thing is held to be no fault, it is merely a condition to inspire a trader's versatility and inventiveness to have something else equally spell binding in its effects upon customers, who are not to be given time to experience any pall of the latest artifice.

But with this school of traders and their business philosophy we do not agree. Under all the rules of trade a man is guided by, there should be a substratum which is broken through by none of them. A man may add to his rules and may expand his methods as far as he pleases, if only he makes them form a system in perfect harmony with this substratum, which is honesty. For honesty, in the trader's practice of it, is a policy to which all methods should be conformed, and by the test of which they should be confirmed before they are adopted. The parliament of a country may make new laws by the volume, but these are always kept in strict subjection to a single pervading idea, and that is the intent of the national constitution. Honesty should be likewise the fundamental principel underlying all methods.

From this way of looking at the matter, we cannot come to any conclusion that the prize-idea is a good one. It does not appeal to the trading motives, but it does appeal to the gambling instinct. It would not be a good educator of honesty in the local body of custom, and would probably beget a good deal of retaliatory roguery. If a man had nibbled long at the prize-bait and after long gambling had got none of it, he would not unnaturally feel justified in running a bill for the sole purpose of cheating the grocer who had lured him on. The prize-system is at fault in that it does not yield equal value to all for the same outlay, and is therefore productive of many evils. It lowers the tone of business, it lowers the tone of public honesty and public thrift, and its consequences are apt to be visited upon the dealer by the dishonesty of those who did not draw good prizes.

WHERE WERE THE CUSTOMS OFFICIALS?

"Observer" says that last week an excursion steamer landed her passengers at the dock in this city and that said passengers had nearly one hundred baskets of fruit among them, all of which was allowed to be carried away without the formality of passing the customs and paying the duty. Why is this thus? he asks. The authorities always look after any unfortunate retailer who may evade the letter though not the spirit, while consumers can do as they please. But then the authorities must do something, otherwise the public would think them more ornamental than useful.

ARRESTED FOR FORGERY.

The article in last week's issue advising our London friends that two sharpers, R. B. Ford and J. H. Graham, were doing that city on a fake advertising scheme, was not in time to save all of them, but others were put on their guard. John Labatt, the brewer, and the Carling Brewing and Malting Co., were caught by them to the extent of $50 each. When Mr. Labatt read of their character he at once ordered the payment of the cheque stopped and informed the police. Ford was arrested Sunday at Windsor, when endeavoring to cash Labatt's cheque. Cheques for $50 and $25 respectively from Hiram Walker & Sons and the Malleable Iron Works, were found on his person. Graham was in Toronto on Sunday but left for Detroit before the Toronto detectives could get their hands on him. He was however caught at Windsor. Both men have been taken to Montreal. Ford is an American but Graham is a Canadian. He is married and his home is in this city. He duped a number of wholesale merchants by selling them space on a Board of Trade lithograph, promising to circulate 5,000 copies. He received $25 to $50 for a small space on the card, and only printed 10 to 25 copies, a few of which he showed to the advertiser and obtained the money. This is a scheme that is being worked day after day on business men. They have to confess that such advertising does them no good. As Barnum says: "The public like to be humbugged."

SOAPMAKERS' CONFERENCE.

A meeting of the soap manufacturers of Ontario was held in London, on Saturday. There were present:—Messrs. John Taylor, Toronto; Charles M. Dalton, Toronto; Robert Hervey, Brantford; William Judd, Hamilton; Fred. Richards, Woodstock; Thomas Elliott, Galt; and H. D. Long, London. The object of the meeting was to regulate price lists, and the manufacturers united to preserve uniformity. Mr. H. D. Long, manager of the London Soap Company, entertained the visitors and drove them round the city.

THE NEW EXCHANGE BILL.

Here is another article on the new Bill of Exchange Act which went into force on Monday of this week. The Bills of Exchange Act, therefore, passed by the last session of the House of Commons and coming into force on the 1st of September next, is of great importance to almost every individual in the country, as all are more or less affected by its provisions.

There are few, if any, direct changes. Many additions, however, are made; usages are rendered legal; doubtful points are made clear, and the whole measure is extended both in size and application, while the points upon which legal or technical issues depend are much simplified. A bill of exchange is defined as being an unconditional order in writing, signed by the person giving it, requiring a certain person to pay on demand or at a fixed future time a certain sum of money to the order of or to a specified person or to bearer. It is plainly stated that such a bill is not invalid by reason of its not being dated, or because it does not specify the value given or even that any value has been given, or because it does not specify the place where it is drawn or made payable. Such a bill, or draft, as we are in the habit of calling it, except when drawn upon persons in another country when it becomes a foreign bill of exchange may be required to be paid (a) with interest; (b) by stated instalments; (c) by stated instalments, with a a provision that upon default in payment of any instalment the whole shall become due. A bill is further defined as being payable on demand, which is so expressed or in which no time for payment is mentioned. It is also made plain that a bill is not invalid by reason of its being ante-dated or post dated, or because it bears date on a Sunday or other statute holiday. Three days' grace is allowed on all (excepting demand) bills, and no change appears to have been made in the rules regarding protest.

An important point for the merchant is to be found in the provision that "where a person signs a bill in a trade or assumed name he is liable thereon as if he had signed it in his own name. And again, the signature of the name of a firm is equivalent to the signature by the person so signing of the names of all persons liable as partners in that firm." This does not, of course, apply to forged or unauthorized signatures. The holder of a bill may refuse to take anything but an unqualified acceptance, and if that is refused, may protest the bill in due course. If he should take a qualified acceptance without the authority of the drawer or endorser, and they should refuse to subsequently assent to it, they are discharged from liability on the bill. Another clause enacts that where the acceptor of a bill becomes bankrupt or suspends payment before it matures, the holder may cause the bill to be protested for better security against the drawer or endorsers. The acceptor of a bill is precluded from denying to the holder in due course either the existance of the drawer, the genuineness of his signature, or his capacity and authority to draw the bill. Where a bill is drawn in one country and is payable in another the due date is determined by the laws of the place where it is made payable.

A cheque is here defined as a bill of exchange drawn on a bank and payable on demand. The authority of a bank to pay such cheque is terminated (provided there are funds) by countermand of payment or notice of customer's death. The old English system of crossed cheques is introduced by this bill, and enables the drawer of a cheque, by merely crossing it with two parallel lines, with or without the words "not negotiable" or "bank" between them, to compel the bank upon which it is drawn to pay the money only to the original payee of the cheque, or to him through some other bank. With regard to promissory notes, the most important clause would seem to be that in which it is enacted that in the event of such a note being made payable at a particular place it must be presented there for payment, but that the omission of such presentment on the date of maturity does not discharge the maker, though in the event of a suit the costs are at the discretion of the court.

While these would appear to be some of the main points in the new Bills of Exchange Act, it is in this, as in all other cases where technical and legal matters are being dealt with by Act of Parliament, impossible to say where peculiar circumstances may not bring out equally peculiar interpretations, though it is safe to say that in this particular case the Act is drawn up with skill and fidelity to the interests of the public; and is in every way a decided improvement upon the somewhat meagre terms of the former measure.

GOT AHEAD OF THE GRAND TRUNK.

Railroads generally get the credit of having no mercy. At any rate they show very little towards shippers. Their decisions are always against this class of their patrons, who have practically no appeal, and usually submit. Quite frequently the railroads charge a grain dealer with putting more grain in a car than the bill of lading called for. The grain man denies the charge, but the railways insist, and he pays the extra amount. P. MacIntosh & Son were charged, a few days ago, by the Grand Trunk Railway with endeavoring to pass a car of 900 bushels of oats as 700 bushels, and the freight on the extra 200 bushels was demanded. The MacIntoshes refused to pay. The railway insisted, and they had to pay. They did not want the contents of that particular car at once, and they ordered the railway to put it into store and give them a warehouse receipt. The receipt was, of course, for 900 bushels. A few days later they presented the receipt and demanded the oats. But the Grand Trunk found then that there were not 900 bushels, and could only produce 700 bushels, showing clearly that their charges against MacIntosh were false. Instead of paying up, as they made the MacIntoshes do they got down on their knees and begged to be let off. We would advise business men, before agreeing to pay over charges, to be certain that the charges are correct.

A CITY TRAVELLERS' ASSOCIATION.

A number of city travellers who represent the wholesale trade of Toronto met on Saturday morning in a room kindly placed at their disposal by Messrs. Sloan & Crowther, for the purpose of forming an association. Mr. R. Maxwell was appointed chairman and Mr. J. Owen secretary protem. Those present were F. Blackburn, S. Hustwitt, A. Piper, W. Sloan, G. M. Furnival, F. Macdonald, F. Galloway, W. Macpherson, J. Owen, R, Maxwell, and A. Maclean. After some discussion showing the advantages to be obtained by organization, the meeting formed itself into an association to be known by the name as "The City Travellers' Association of Toronto," A committee was appointed to secure a suitable hall and arrange for future meetings, The meeting adjourned to meet at the call of the committee.

BOTTOMLESS CIGAR BOXES.

SIR:—It would appear form your article of two weeks ago that the great cure-all in the matter of cigar regulations is to be found in tearing out the bottoms of cigar boxes as soon as empty, and that the department will consider this as satisfactory. I heard a suggestion the other day, which will also protect the cigar dealer from the inroads of the officials, and which is an evasion the same as spoken above. It is this: instead of emptying the box, leave one cigar in it. You surely then are at liberty to show your boxes as shelf goods, and since they are not empty you have no occasion to destroy them. How will that suit the high and mighty Mr. Cootyan? Verily, as you say, in your article, the Department will have to put on its considering cap and devise some other means to satisfy its abnormal appetite for honest trader's goods.

CORRESPONDENT.

They tell a pretty good story of an elderly gentleman from the city who is passing the summer in this section. Recently, feeling in need of some neckties, he wrote to his partner for a supply, saying: "Please send me some nice ties." The partner mistook the words for "niceties," and, though wondering at his friend's sudden craving for luxuries, shipped him a large box of fruit, bonbons, etc. The disgust of the recipient was expressed in words not found in Webster's Unabridged. — Great Barrington, (Mass.) News.

THE GROCERS AND HOLIDAYS

A holiday is a good thing, and we wish everybody could afford to take one, but we think people should forego the pleasure when it has to be enjoyed at their tradesmen's expense. There is a great fund of money belonging to the grocers that is kept in circulation at summer resorts. This is hard on the grocer. People should be brought to think of the hardship of it.—CANADIAN GROCER.

Every retailer realizes the truth of the above. Two classes trespass upon their rights in this respect, viz., the reliable but thoughtless tourist or excursionist, and those who deliberately plan to have a good time on the money that should be used to pay their account at the butcher's, the baker's and the grocer's.

We find another class of thrifty mortals belonging to the Co-operative Building Loan Associations, who, instead of paying their account at the store, use it to meet their monthly payment at the Building Loan Association. The grocer is not called upon to become the banker for those struggling for a home, however laudable the object. True it is that their customers are slowly acquiring title to property, but it is not right to use the storekeeper as much as possible dur ing the ten or twelve years a house is being paid for.

The only remedy for this and kindred evils is to insist on the prompt payment of accounts, or else refuse the credit. If the retailer has an abundance of money, and can afford to carry this sort of delinquent, then let him put the accommodation in shape to draw interest and then insist that his book accounts shall be regurlarly settled.—American Grocer.

The N. Y. Sun says:—"An English syndicate is trying to obtain control of the tobacco warehouses of Louisville and Cincinnati. The syndicate will be named The Western Tobacco Warehouse Trust. It is expected that the warehousemen of Clarksville Tenn., will join this syndicate, The negotiations are now pending, but the deal will probably be made within the next ten days.

The other night the store belonging to Mr. J. Johnson, general merchant of Bethany, was opened by burglars, who effected an entrance through a side window. They carried off with them a considerable quantity of tobacco, sardines, and several pair of fine boots.

No. 40 is the midsummer number of the current volume of the Pennsylvania Grocer. It therefore fittingly expands itself, and envelopes its modesty in a little of the bravery of style that is suitable to the occasion. There is no denying that our respected and worthy contemporary looks well in its post-holiday habiliments, which it so well fills in this special issue.

A deputation of Montreal liquor dealers waited on the Minister of Inland Revenue on Monday and asked that steps be taken to prevent Canadian bottlers from using the lables of foreign makers of liquor. They were told that the department had nothing to do with the matter, as it was the duty of those whose lables or trade marks was infringed to prosecute.

At a meeting of the Philadelphia Association on Monday evening, the 17th, a discussion on the "Delinquent Account System" took place. A new feature which will be instituted during the coming month will be a notice to employers notifying them of their employees' delinquency, and requesting their aid in the collection of the account.—American Grocer.

A committee from the Hamilton Board of Trade met with the Finance Committee of City Council on Friday night to discuss the single tax question. The Board of Trade representatives wanted a business tax on realty alone instead of a tax upon personalty as well. After a very long discussion it was decided to adjourn the meeting for a week, when the matter will again be considered.

The Picnic Committee of the Toronto Retail Grocers' had an excursion to the Falls on Wednesday, and they had a very pleasant time. At the Falls they had several races in which ex-President Mara was the winner. He was unfortunate enough to drop his watch. Bro. McCulloch's hat had a narrow escape from going over the Falls. Coming home the lake was rough, and the majority of the members communed in solitude.

Mr. Henry F. Moore, Editor of the Mark Lane Express, came out in the Parisian. He is going to the North-west to enquire into the wheat yield there this season. He states that the crop prospects in England when he left was fair. Wheat would yield about 28½ bushels to the acre, Potatoes were a poor crop, the disease this year being most malignant. Prices for North-west wheat would be very good, as all the harvests in the world, with the exception of Austria-Hungary, were poor. England would require about eighteen million quarters from foreign sources. The quarter is 8 bushels.

An exchange facetiously remarks: A grocer works fifty-two weeks per year; that's labor. Once in a while somebody pays him for his goods; that's capital. And once in a while some son of a gun of a dead beat runs up a big bill and vanishes without paying it; that's anarchy. But later on justice will overtake the last named creature for there is a place where he will get his just deserts; that's hell. When every grocer gets to selling his goods for spot cash, that will be business.

A fire broke out in McAndrew's general store, Buckingham, Ont., on Friday night, and is supposed to have began from a cigar thrown on the floor, as there was a lot of paper scattered around. The fire was not noticed until about 5.30, when it burst out of the windows. About $300 worth of stock is burnt. McAndrew's store was brick, and was one of the finest in the town, and the house was also brick and one of the best. The insurance ran out a few days ago. The house was occupied by J. L. Willis. The The furniture was saved. The total loss is about $10,000.

On Saturday the first actual work of the new Ottawa canning factory was begun, and in honour of the event a number of gentlemen paid a visit to the place in the afternoon. They found about a hundred men, women, and boys in the various processes of canning tomatoes. This is the first speculative industry outside of the lumber mills that has ever been started in Ottawa, and the fact that the promoters are French-Canadians speaks a good word for the enterprise and energy of our citizens of that nationality. The company has already ordered 400,000 tins and 200,000 wooden cases. The tins are made in Hamilton, and, strange to say, in that lumber city, the boxes came from Toronto.

The body of a well-dressed man, supposed to be James Moir, of Montreal, was discovered the other morning in the St. Francis river, near Windsor Mills. It appears that on the 12th inst. Archie Moir left with his family and the deceased, his brother, for a vacation at Long Island. On Wednesday, the 20th inst., the deceased did not return as usual to dinner, and, notwithstanding all efforts to find him, no clue was discovered to his whereabouts till the evening when Archie Moir was informed of the finding of his brother's body in the St. Francis, as stated. James Moir was at one time a member of the firm of Forester, Moir & Co., wholesale grocers, of Montreal. Leaving that firm he lost heavily in gold mine speculations. He then moved to Chicago and engaged in the insurance business. On the death of his wife, a year ago last June, he became very despondent, and throwing up his business in Chicago, came back to Montreal to live with his brother. It was then noticed that the deceased acted very strangely at times. How the unfortunate man came to be found in the St. Francis river is a mystery, although it is not thought that there has been any foul play.

The Markets

TORONTO, September 5, 1890.

GROCERIES.

The month has opened auspiciously. The last days of August were busy ones for the wholesale grocers, and in the past portion of the present week a still higher state of activity has been kept up. The revival is seasonable, and is attributable to the strong feeling which good crop reports and strengthening produce markets have given rise to. The fine spell of weather since Sunday has not been without it effect. Yellow sugars are in strong demand. Teas are also selling well. Canned vegetables have traversed the full swing of the pendulum from dulness to activity. Dried fruits are practically out of stock in several warehouses. Everything looks hopeful for the season of new fruit.

CANNED GOODS.

The sedative influence which the season of relaxed demand and of domestic replenishment had upon the trade of last week, is not traceable in the business done the last four or five days. Consumers are not maintaining a particular active trade at present, but retailers consider this a good time to lay in stock for the busy season. In many lines there is every sign of stronger prices in the near future. Tomatoes, which were expected to be in full stock, are now likely to be scarce. The early and continued spell of cold weather played havoc with the growing raw material, which a fortnight ago was abundant, healthy and likely to reach perfect maturity. The cloudy and cold days have made a chasm between the promise and its fulfilment, and we are to have a short crop of tomatoes. The later ones had no chance to ripen. There should have been at least a ten days' pack, and there was not near that. The raw tomatoes advanced in Hamilton from 35c. on the 25th ult. to 60c. on the 30th, all through the want of ripening weather. Corn is a light crop, and the canned stock is expected to be correspondingly light. Canners say they cannot fill all the orders they have taken for future delivery. Peas are very firm, those of the new pack going at $1.10 to $1.20, the latter price being paid for very well-known brands. The old pack is $1.05, and seems to be nearly done. There is a big inquiry now for salmon, a condition that is also born of the past week. A week ago there was a general attitude of shyness, and there was little doing in this year's pack. Mail advices from the Pacific coast are steadier on canned salmon. It is expected the pack will not be quite as large as was last year's, though much greater than in any previous to that year. New Horseshoe salmon is now quoted at $1.40 to $1.45 to arrive, the inside price being for 10 case lots. Lobster is unchanged. Scarcity is the controlling condition in the basis of present prices. Stock is hard to get. It is said that canned lobster is being largely imported into England at present. It is fetching good prices and going into consumption as soon as it arrives. There seems little likelyhood that prices will decline. Canned goods packers are scouring the country for plums, pears, peaches, etc.

Sloan & Crowther received to-day their first shipment of the new pack Lynx brand canned salmon, the sale of which they control here. Last year's stock gave every satisfaction and the quality of this is if anything superior. Samples opened to-day show great care in packing.

On Monday Davidson & Hay received a shipment of their Red Star brand of salmon, for which considerable inquiry has been made for some time past.

COFFEES.

Coffees were firm at 28 to 30c. for choice Javas, though sales of low grades were reported at 25c. Rios remain at 22 to 23c. In all grades prices are well maintained owing to the position of the market at supply and distribution points, though the demand here is very quiet. Of the "coffee pool" formed at Rio Janeiro, the New York Times reports a prominent coffee merchant of New York to have said: The men who receive the coffee from the planters are know as the comisarios. They advance money and supplies to the planters while the crop is growing. The coffee comes to them without having been graded, and they sell to the dealers or middlemen, who sort the coffee, make the grades and prepare it for the market. They sell to the exporters, who send the coffee to the markets of the world. The new company would be made up of the dealers or middlemen, who at present buy from the comisarios at whatever price they can obtain. But if a strong combination could be formed, they could refuse to buy of the comisarios at any price except that which suited them. Then they could turn around and demand an increased price from the exporters. Or they could disregard the exporter altogether and export the coffee themselves. The announcement that the company intended to establish agencies in different cities would seem to indicate that the dealers had considered that possibility. It had been said that two Brazilian banks had agreed to take stock in the company.

DRIED FRUIT.

The waning supplies in the warehouses here will hold out but a short time before the demand which is now active. That demand is cautious, moving large quantities off the market in small instalments. The consumption of dried fruits, however, is turning out to be capable of more than it was calculated to do, as it keeps the retailers buying many times, where they will not buy in large quantities. They prefer to keep to their present course until the new stock of currants and raisins is on the market, which it will be in a fortnight. Turkey prunes in hogsheads are not on this market now. They would cost 7c., that is those of '89 growth, laid down here from New York. Late mail advices say that the French prune crop is a short one and high prices are expected. More favorable reports come Treste by cable. An advance of 2s. has been established in Sultanas. The opening of Malaga raisins is cabled at a little lower prices all round than last year. Valencias are firmer abroad, 6d. under quotations being refused on Monday. Natural figs are reported ¼c. higher at points of production. Currants went up 1s. on Monday, according to cable advices.

NUTS.

There has been a slight improvement in the nut trade. The time of year is scarcely far enough advanced for any notable run on stocks. Prices are unchanged and firm at quotations. The Grocery World says: Nuts are moving up, especially almonds, filberts, walnuts and Brazil nuts. The likelihood is that they will stay up, too, and perhaps go higher. The almond and walnut crop in Brazil is very short. In Tarragona, an island in the Mediterranean, where almonds are very largely raised, cholera now prevails, and the crop stands a very poor show of being picked, or marketed even after it is picked. California will only show a fair crop of almonds and these will fetch high prices along with the European article. The crop taken altogether is inclined to be inferior in quality as well as scarce. California walnuts are plentiful, but are thicker shelled and not nearly so good in quality as the European. Brazil reports a short crop in Brazil nuts also. These nuts are all conveyed to London whence we get our supplies. Pecans are mostly raised in Texas. The crop is good in quality but small. Pecans that a year ago could have been bought for 6c. now bring 8 and 9c. The new nut crop will begin to come in generally from September on.

RICE AND SPICES.

The demand for rice has not dipped so deeply this week as it did throughout the six weeks anterior to this one. The week's sales have not been small though. Spices are still in lively request, and a still brisker business is looked forward to when the later fruits and vegetables are ready for pickling.

SUGAR.

The sugar trade has been a very important one in respect to the quantity sold. This has been a week of quite unusual activity in the local sugar market. There has been no change in the price of granulated or other white, and none in the price of yellows, though for the lowest grade of the latter 5 7/8c. has been almost uniformly paid. Granulated is 6¾c. in quantities up to and above 15 barrels, and 6⅞c. in quantities below 15 barrels. Yellows are 5⅛ to 6¼c. Raws are 5 to 5¼c. The market is poorly stocked in bright yellows, and for these there is quite a special call. Although there is no advance in the prices of Canadian sugars, there are stronger symptoms outside. The price of both cane and beet is reported through private channels to be higher. Our own refiners are also firmer. Last week prices might have been shaded by them, but there is not the same anxiety to stimulate business this week.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their review of the sugar market, say: The market was somewhat affected by the stringency of the money market and the fears of railroad strikes, but recovered quickly on their removal and on the continued advance in Europe, which advance was 4½d. per cwt. for the week. The continued rise in Europe is getting to be serious for refiners. Their stocks are reduced 9,314 tons this week (and 10,356 tons the previous week), leaving refiners' stock 62,623 tons, or two weeks' supply without receipts. To keep their stock from exhaustion means increased purchases at higher prices, and a consequent advance in refined. September is usnally a large month of meltings, and next month should be no exception. Refined is about 2c. per lb. cheaper then last year at this time. About 15,000 barrels refined were sold for export at the decline. Total stock in all the principal countries, by latest uneven dates, is 711,279 tons, against 515,462 tons at same time last year. This represents a decrease of 78,251 tons for the week.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Molasses has not been in so active demand this week as it was during the fortnight which closed the month of August. Syrups, which were quieter then, are in greater request now. In both commodities the prices which were quoted last week are unchanged.

TEA.

Teas have moved freely. In no line of grocery stocks has there been greater activity. The price of low grade Japans still keep above those of last year, but this is not now causing any perceptible decline in sales. There is more low grade stock now on the market and salable at 18 to 20c. On this there is a strong run. Congous are taken off by a good demand. Prices rule as quoted a week ago.

The Bulletin says of teas in New York:—Several of the jobbing houses reported a remarkably good distribution of teas this week, with a noticeable increase in their sales during the last two or three days. In some instances the run has been on particular varieties, but most reports were to the effect that interest has extended over the general line, and that the increased purchases by the jobbing trade latterly have gone little beyond the securing of goods required to meet current demands. In other words, it would appear that the consumption is of sufficient volume to keep the statistical position favorable and impart more than ordinary strength to values. Old Formosas appear to have been given particular attention by quite a large number of buyers, with the result of making more than a slight impression upon jobbers' supplies. Low grade teas in general have also fared remarkably well, and 1c. per lb. advance on prices accepted a week ago was obtained by more sellers than one.

PETROLEUM.

There is no change in the prices of the various grades of refined. Business is improving, the shortening daylight having an awakening effect upon the coal oil trade.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

The market is featureless. Trade moves along at its normal rate, and prices are all quotable at the same rates as they were last week.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

There is a bare supply of prime butter. More of it in any shape would find a good market here without depressing present prices. The average of quality of the dairy-tub offerings is below medium. There is a large quantity of very acceptable butter coming in tubs, but there is a very small proportion of it which rises to the grade of fine.

The best of it is not long in deteriorating, as stock this year seems to be generally wanting in keeping quality. Tubs are worth 14 to 15c. Large rolls are arriving in occasionally small lots and bring 13c. Pound rolls are 16 to 18c. Store-packed is 12 to 14c. Creamery tubs are worth 20c., and creamery rolls 22 to 23c. The creamery butter at present in stock is said to be very good. Commission dealers say that there is already a huge surplus of butter in the cellars of country merchants, and that the outlook leads them to expect a repetition next spring of the stagnated overloaded condition of the market that so embarrassed trade last spring. The policy of selling at once seems not to be in more general practice than it was a year ago.

Cheese is firmer in sympathy with the English market, and there is little sold below 9½c. for full cream cheese, though there is business yet done at 9c. by some who have not gone up with the outside market. Skim-milk cheese, of very good value, is to be had at 7 to 7½c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Have been shipping away from one quotation after another until they stand firmly now at $2. There is an eager demand for all that are to be had, and the capabilities of the supply seem to have been unexpectedly large. Still the stock must be very low at this stage.

DRIED APPLES—None can be got at less than 7½c., very few below 8c., and not many at any price. The market has disgorged nearly all it had to give up, as buyers have been liberal of their offers.

EGGS—The odds are in favor of the demand at present, the supply responding rather tardily. Prices are consequently good, and they are gaining in firmness, dealers paying 16 to 17c.

HAY—Receipts up to the full call of the market come in by rail and wagon, the loose probably keeping the local consumers' demand fairly supplied. The price is $9 to $9.50.

HIDES—Have advanced a half cent. No. 1 green is 7c., and No. 2 is 6c. These prices are firm. The supply is low.

HONEY—There continues to be a quiet time in the honey-market. The year's trade between this and the next summer will be likely to be a very good one, as the apprehensions of an excessive stock have been removed by the shortness of the flow. Clear is 9 to 12c., and comb is 14 to 18c.

HOPS—The market has developed strength, which however, has not manifested itself in any advance on long-current prices. The scantiness of the crop in outside centres of production is firming prices and preparing dealers for an advance that they believe will be lasting. There is still a lot of the old '88 crop in stock yet, but it is virtually unsalable, having parted with its qualities. The surplus of '89 stock is a very small one. The present year's crop is already offering at 25 to 30c. Prices of '89 hops are yet 14 to 16c.

OATS—There is no change in last week's prices, 40 to 41c. on track. These prices are for both old and new.

POTATOES—There is a fairly active de-

THE OLD STYLE.

Hitherto Table Salt has been sold in bottles, jars and thin paper packets. Most cooks know only too well the labor required and the loss entailed in extracting salt from bottles and jars, and in grinding the brick-like packet salt.

THE BEST.

THE NEW DEPARTURE.

FALK'S TABLE SALT never cakes, but remains perfectly loose in the packets, which are made of paper of a novel description, excluding atmospheric moisture.

It is scrupulously clean. No hand touches it, either in the manufacture or the packing. All this is done by machinery invented by H. E. FALK; and the paper bags prevent any hand from coming in contact with the salt either in shops or kitchens. Consequently, it reaches the consumer in the same state of perfect purity and cleanliness in which it comes from the brine springs of Cheshire. To be obtained through the Trade.

mand, to which the supply keeps pace. They bring 80 to 90c. per bag.

POULTRY—Ducks are 60 to 70c. and are scarcer. Chickens, on the other hand, are more plentiful, and go at 50 to 60c. The market for turkeys has not properly opened, though some few have been taken at 10c per lb.

SKINS—Sheep are 70c. Calf are 7c. for No. 1, and 5c. for No. 2.

TALLOW—Rough sells at 2c. and rendered at 5½c.

WOOL—Is 23c. The stock held here is large and not apt to be put on the manufacturers' market for sometime.

FISH.

The fish market is reported to be rather quiet this week, owing to the scarcity of fish and the high prices for which they are now selling. Arrivels of trout are this week reported to be larger. Trout is generally more plentiful in the fall than white fish. British Columbia salmon shipments are not expected to be as regular now, as the season is drawing near to a close. A small quantity is being received every other day. Lake herring is very scarce this week. A better supply is looked forward to from now on. A local fish dealer received a shipment to-day. Pickerel is in poor request. There is about the usual demand for black bass, but the shipment is not large enough. The prices for the week are: Trout and white fish 6½ to 7c.; British Columbia salmon, 16c.; lake herring, $2 per hundred; pickerel, 5 to 5½c.; black bass, 8 to 9c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The orange stock is now chiefly, if not altogether, of Jamaica growth. That crop has been got pretty well off the trees and upon the market, so that prices begin to settle down to the point at which they are likely to rest. Jamaicas are now $8.50 per barrel. There is a quiet trade, which the fulness of the market in other toothsome fruit is to blame for. Messina lemons are $8.50 to $9. The cool weather gave a set back to the lemon trade and sales have been lighter than they were in the business done two weeks ago. Bananas are in very low demand, not being able to hold their own against the rivalry of the season's domestic fruits. Prices are $1 to $1.75.

PROVISIONS.

The winter packers re-opened on the first inst. Stock was immediately forthcoming in liberal quantity. A considerable number of dressed hogs were put on the market on Tuesday, and went, in the majority of cases, at $7. Purchases, however, were made at $6.50 to $6.75, these were the exceptions. A very good week's trade was transacted in smoked meats and long clear.

MARKETS—Continued.

BACON—Long clear is 8¼ to 8¾c. Bellies are 10½ to 11c. Backs are 11 to 11½c. Roll is 10c.

DRESSED HOGS—Sold at $6.75 to $7.

HAMS—Smoked are 12½ to 13c. Sweet pickled are 11c.

LARD—Is 9¼ to 10c.

MESS PORK—Is $16 for heavy and $17 to $17.50 for short cut.

DRY GOODS.

The state of trade this week is, compared with the business done at other periods of the year, truly gratifying. There was a large influx of buyers on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, while travellers' reports were were well filled with mail orders. The warehouses have not been the scene of so much stir in a twelve month. Prices are steady and unchanged.

SALT.

Salt has been in very fair request this week. The prices are firm and unchanged. A cut in the sale of barrel salt is the only change made in the prices this week. The sales transacted by the Toronto Salt Works for the week are: 2 cars bbls. at $1.38; 2 cars sack at 70c. Smaller quantities sell at $1.50 to $1.55 for bbls.; 80 to 85c. for sacks, and 50c. to 55 for ¼ sacks.

MONTREAL

MONTREAL MARKETS.

SEPT. 4, 1890.

GROCERIES.

Business in different lines of groceries has been rather dull during the past week, mainly owing to the fact, that most of the houses are awaiting new goods. As we have said, though the outlook is favorable and stocks are generally in good condition for fresh supplies. In dried fruit raisins and currants are enquired after, and buisness to arrive has been done in the former at 8c., while in canned goods this year's pack of fruits and vegetables is not expected to be heavy and steady prices are looked for. In produce nothing of importance has transpired, except extensive country buying of butter by one leading operator here, who has practicallly scooped in all the desirable late made selections of creamery of the month of July and August make, and prices in consequence have jumped up to 19@20c. from 16@17c.

DRIED FRUIT.

The fruit market has shown no change since our return last week, trade being rather quiet on the whole, pending the arrival of new goods. In dried fruit a prominent feature is the enquiry for currants which are very scarce at 6 to 6¼c. and one dealer who cleared out his lot some time ago tried to replenish his stock with some fresh supplies from New York, but was unable to do so under a cost price laid down of pretty close to the above figures. Nothing is reported in the way of business in new crop, but for first arrivals figures in the vicinity of 6c. has been bid and it is expected that they will open somewhere around that figure as they will cost laid down fully 5½c. There has been some fair business to arrive in raisins during the week, and as we intimated last, first sales were at 8c. one importer cleaned out all his first arrivals at that figure. In green fruit we have nothing particular to note. Lemons and oranges move quietly at unchanged prices.

GREEN FRUIT.

The most prominent feature in this branch is the dullness of fall apples. Offerings are not very large but are altogether to much for the demand which is poor, and prices rule easy at $1.75 to $3.00 and it is only an occasional sale that is made at the outside figure, the bulk of trausactions bring on the lower basis. In winter apples we have no news except that purchasing is being done by our dealers through the country, and the outlook is for a good report, demands this year from Great Britain as recent advices state that the crop is even shorter than it was last year, while the continental countries will have but little surplus this year. Other lines of seasonable fruit such as grapes etc., etc., are unchanged from the prices quoted a week ago, with the usual movement in progress.

SUGAR, ETC.

Sugars have been in fairly active demand during the past week, and cable advices cite a firm position on beet and cane, and prices here, although unchanged, are steady at 5 to 5⅞c. for yellows; 6⅜ to 6½c. for granulated, and no large transactions in molasses are reported, but prices are firmly held at 35 to 36c. Syrups have advanced 2 to 3c. per lb. under light supplies and a fairly steady demand.

TEA AND COFFEE.

There has been a pretty fair business in Japan teas since our last, and grades worth from 16 to 18c. are almost unobtainable. New York houses instructed agents to withdraw all teas for a few days during the latter part of last week, and this accelerated the scarcity. Blacks are firm at the recent advance of 1 to 1½c. per lb., and coffees are firm, but trade is light. We quote: Rio, 20 to 22c; Santos, 22 to 23c; Jamaica, 23 to 25c; Maracaibo, 23½ to 25½c; Guatemala, 22 to 24c; Plantation Ceylon, 24 to 26; Java, 28 to 30c; Mocha, 30 to 31c; Costa Rica, 25 to 27c. The New York market is firm on all grades.

RICE.

There is nothing to add regarding the rice market, and trade remains quiet. We quote common, $2.70. Japan, $4.10 to $4.45, and Patna $5.50.

SPICES

The spice market is without change. Jamaica ginger is firm at former figures, while Pemento and pepper are unchanged.

CANNED GOODS.

Trade in canned goods continues very quiet. There is nothing doing in canned fish, but lobsters and mackerel are very firm. Salmon are rather quiet at the moment and packers' agents find difficulty in placing any further orders. Recent weather has had its influence on the tomato crop, consequently held-over stocks may prove valuable before long. Advice from the country regarding corn and tomatoes speak of a falling off in them, while the pack of peas is fair, but fruits will be scarce and prices are expected to rule generally firm in consequence. There has been no change during the week.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

The egg market has ruled firm since our last and receipts have not been so heavy, which is attributed to the fact, that purchasing has been done in Ontario on American account in anticipation of the MacKinley measures. It is understood that outside figures have been paid in this connection, as high as 16c½c. in the country being quoted. Spot prices here are firm at ½c. advance at 16 to 16½c., and there is quite as much business at the outside figure as at the inside.

BUTTER.

The feature of the butter market during the week has been the scoops of desirable late made stock made by one trading exporter here to the exclusion of others. He paid pretty long prices for his holdings, as high as 17 to 18c. being given. He has also bought a lot for spot, taking over some 1,100 tubs from earlier creameries during last week at a range of 17½ to 17¾c. The local demand shows no improvement, but the manipulator of the deal referred to is counting on the assumed shortage in the States, and the fact that country holders, puffed up by present prices will hang on to their September and October makes for fancy figures. Our advice to them is to sell as they go along. It is understood that creamery is now held in the country for 20c., while choice dairy, although not in much enquiry, is unobtainable at 16c.

CHEESE.

The cheese market is essentially unchanged, the same ruling features characterizing the market. There is an absence of encouragement from the other side, so that business on legitimate orders is light, and when the purchasing operations in the country are left out of account there is very little to this market. Factorymen's indeas on fancy late made cheese are around 9c. that figure being inside, but so far there has been no spot business here over 9¼c. which may be considered a fair basis for the present.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market shows no change, and there is only a quiet movement in pork and lard to note. The former is quoted at $17 to $17.50 for mess and $17.50 to $18 for short cut, while the latter is quiet at 8 to 8¼c.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

The flour market has adopted a rather duller feeling of late, as money buyers are offnow the market, having purchased supplies for some time ahead during the recent active turn. As to prices they are unchanged, city brands being steady at $6.00 for strong bakers and $6.30 for patent spring, but straight rollers can be moved at $4.90 and there has been business in round lots to arrive on this basis. The stocks in store show a decrease of 4,137 barrels compared with a week ago, and 20,909 barrels compared with the same time last year. The grain market is without change and with a very quiet business doing. In fact except a few odd sales in Lower Canada oats at 40c., there is no spot business to note, but engagements are reported in corn at Chicago on Montreal account. The stocks in store show a decrease of 17,166 bushels of wheat, 14,989 bushels of corn, 22,226 bushels of peas, 11,916 bushels of oats, and 4,862 bushels of barley compared with those of a week ago.

ASHES.

The ashes market is firm and unchanged under light supplies. We quote first pots $4.25, and $3.75 for seconds.

THE CRANBERRY CROP.

The leading cranberry growers in southern Plymouth and Barnstable counties have been interviewed and full reports of the condition and prospects of the crop obtained. For several years Wareham has led the district as a cranberry producing town, and here and in Carver, Rochester, Plymouth, Middleboro', Marion and Mattapoisett, the mires are loaded with the fast ripening fruit. If the frost is sparing of nips the harvest of the next six weeks will far exceed anything before known. An increased acreage of large extent, added to the prospect of good returns from the other bogs, is accountable for this.

Down on Cape Cod the order of things is changed. Fire worms and the drouth got in their work early in the season, and the bogs lying in the valleys of the dunes and sand hills are, many of them, in a ruling poor condition. Still, many bogs at Dennis, Harwich and through Barnstable are in excellent condition, especially those where they are shielded by creeks which are a true and always reliable waterway. The upland bogs in the Cape districts where not so protected by plentiful head waters, have been severely scourged by the drouth and the fire worm. The increase in acreage of the Cape Cod bogs may offset the loss from these causes, but it is doubtful.

The losses on Cape Cod, however, can hardly exceed the increased crop of southern Plymouth County towns, and, taken altogether, the prospect is flattering for a crop of 100,000 barrels in all, barring accidents to come between now and the close of harvesting in October.—Grocers' and Canners' Gazette.

Do you think any big jobbing house would buy on the quotations of one firm. They get all the quotations, consult independent trade papers, wire importers and brokers, have their own correspondents on the spot, and keep keen track of the markets. That is the way they buy. That is the way you ought to buy. The idea of putting your trusting little hand into the grasp of some big firm and saying: "Here, gentlemen, I'm a poor, ignorant, too lazy to read, country storekeeper; take me just as I am and treat me right. Please use me right." Of course they'll use you right; but they are in business to make money, and it will be their kind of right. And you're the fellow they keep the prices up on a month after the market has dropped, and work off old stocks on, and unload on when they are stuck. They're honest, but they're human. Be a man. Put up your two dollars, read a good, live independent paper and think and buy for yourself. Don't be a Jobber's baby.—Grocery World.

Restore goods to their proper places as soon after using as possible.

A customer secured is a promise of greater salary in time.

THE CURRANT CROP.

In their report of the new currant crop, Messrs. Burmuli & Co., London, say:—"The new crop is estimated at about 140,000 to 150,000 tons. Want of rain in early spring has failed to help the development, hence both grapes and berries are small, and the yield is proportionately lessened. The fruit is sound and free from rottenness, and the quality, though probably somewhat deficient in size, will be up to the average if fine and dry weather prevails during the drying process. Cutting commenced last week on the uplands, and by the beginning of next week it will become general. The growers anticipate rather high prices, somewhat near the figures obtained for the last shipments of the old crop. It is to be hoped, however, that the shippers will be prudent, and will not force shipments too early, thereby paying high prices for fruit prematurely cut and insufficiently dried. The consumption in France during the season of 1889-90 will have attained by the end of this month about 85,000 tons, against about 50,000 in 1888-89, and 33,000 tons in 1887-88. Of this quantity 70,000 tons have been imported direct from Greece, and the balance was made up by the stock of old and importations from other countries, principally Germany, Holland and England. An excise of manufacturing duty (droits de fabrication) of about 12 frs. per 100 kilogs of currants and raisins has been lately imposed, and will come into operation shortly. It is yet too early to form an opinion as to the influence this new tax will exert upon the use of currants for wine-making in France. The prevailing opinion is that the manufacture will simply pass from the large factories to the house-holder and the wine-grower, the tax not being levied on wine brewed from currants and raisins at home, nor on that manufactured by co-operative societies, military regiments and wine growers (when the latter blend it) with their own produce. In our opinion the use of currants in France depends largely upon the French vintage. If it is as short and of as good quality as that of last year, France will require as many currants as during the closing season, in spite of the new tax."

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday s yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

DRIVING A BARGAIN.

Though very liberal to those who are deserving, Chief Justice John A. Peters of Maine is sharp in driving a bargain. He would rather lose his dinner any time than miss the chance of having a good joke. The following story is told of him :—

One evening last spring he went down to a market in Bangor, and seeing some fine large smelts for sale asked the price.

"Fifteen cents a dozen," was the reply.

"Yes ?" queried the judge ; "but what will you take for half-a-dozen ?"

"Seeing you are a good customer, judge, I'll sell you a half-dozen for seven cents."

"Indeed ?" mused his honor. "Come to think of it, I am the only one at home who cares for smelts, and I guess three will do. What will you charge me for a quarter of a dozen?"

"H'm," grunted the dealer. "Ez you trade here ginerally I'll put a quarter of a dozen into you for three cents."

They were ordered and neatly tied up in a paper and paid for.

The judge lingered over the marble slab lovingly.

"They look so good," he said, "that I guess I'll take another quarter of a dozen." These were also wrapped in paper, and the judge paid his three cents. In a few minutes three more were bought, and then, as his honor was about to go home, another three were purchased, making 12 in all.

The judge says it was fully five minutes before the marketman could be made to believe that he had sold a dozen of smelts for three cents less than regular price, and had been to the trouble of making four packages instead of one.—N. E. Grocer.

The following memorandum has been sent by the Inland Revenue Department to tobacco dealers:—

Excise officers are hereby informed that if any two portions (top, bottom, or sides) of a cigar box to which the revenue stamp is attached are removed and destroyed it will be considered a compliance with the provisions of section 263 of the Act as amended by 53 Vic., chap. 23. The packages thus broken may then be exposed on the shelves of the dealers as dummies.

(Signed) E. Miall, Commissioner.

THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

The tokens of the present year's best achievement in the spheres of industry, art and science, now form an imposing panorama in the pavilions, outbuildings and enclosures of Exhibition Park. This year the country seems to be richer than ever in specimens that are typical of comparative progress and of absolute excellence. Culture in all departments seems to have advanced. Canadian vegetable and animal life, national skill, ingenuity and taste, all seem to have scored a point higher in the steep ascent towards perfection. The year might have been a disappointing one in the wealth of its productiveness, and the splendor of our Exhibition might have been dimmed. But although this might be, we think the people would not be disheartened by the deficit pictured in it, so much as they would be urged on by the possibilities of which it would present the unfilled outline. We believe an Exhibition to be a good thing, if it is the best the year can afford. We believe that which is now in progress is the best the year can afford, and the resources of this year are not meagre. That the Exhibition is so good is due to the co-operation of producers and directors, who have culled, assorted and displayed the finest that an exceptionally fine growth can offer.

The visitor will not find many confusing intrusions or dispositions of exhibits. Exhibitors have sought, and have usually been allowed, to be installed in the quarters they occupied in former years. The buildings are appropriated to the respective classes of exhibit they contained last year. The mental map of the grounds which each visitor took away a year ago needs to be little modified. It will be found a faithful guide through the grounds this year. The things exhibited are different, as are also the diversions. All roads now lead to Toronto, and the rates are special. The traders of the country should not miss the opportunity to spend a few days at the great fair.

THE McKINLEY BILL.

The hair that held the sword, which, in the opinion of certain pessimistic Canadians, is to lop the branch from the parent tree, to cleave this country from its British connection, will not hang together much longer. The McKinley Bill, at the time of writing, is all but a fully enacted revision of the United States customs tariff. The Senate has ordered it to its third reading by a majority of ten. The vote upon the formal question, "Shall the bill pass?" is the finishing touch, which shall have been given in that chamber before this reaches our readers. The vote will of course be as that on the motion for the third reading was. The bill will then be referred back to the House of Representatives, for that body to pronounce upon the Aldrich amendment, which was added to the bill in the Senate stage of its discussion. The text of the main bill had been passed before in the lower house, and there is little doubt the amendment appended in the Senate also will pass. That amendment gives to the President the singular power of imposing a duty on the sugar, molasses, tea, coffee and hides of any nation which he considers to be levying too heavy a duty on United States products. The McKinley Bill, unmodified by this amendment, makes the above named commodities absolutely free. With this amendment it leaves them free to the producers of such countries as the President considers to be giving a fair equivalent in the lightness of their restrictions upon United States products.

Though the bill is virtually passed, Canada will still go on raising crops and live stock. She will still hold to the conviction that there is a demand for her products which no United States statute can put a wall around. That very trade which the United States has so assiduously courted, with the South American, Central American, Mexican and West Indian ports—that is, the Latin-American trade—which is sought to be snared by the Aldrich amendment, is one for which this country can now be a more energetic competitor. The West Indian trade we have already begun to develop by means of a subsidized steamship line, and we are now sending a special Commissioner to Jamaica on a trade errand. Britain promises to be a barley market that will afford a solacing substitute for the one lost in the United States. We have not space in the present issue to name the Canadian products now weighted by a heavy United States Customs duty. We shall do so in another issue.

TORONTO TRAVELLERS' ASSOCIATION.

The City Travellers' Association of Toronto, held its first regular meeting in Room C. Shaftesbury hall, on Saturday afternoon. Forty-five new members were enrolled, representing the different branches of the wholesale trade. An election of officers resulted as follows: President, R. Maxwell; first vice-president, M. C. Lynde; second vice-president, W. Sloan; secretary, J. Owen; treasurer, A. M. Piper; directors, F. Gallow, S. Huswitt, J. Mortimer, A. McBain, A. H. Lawson, F. Blackburn, F. McDonald, J. A. Mills, B. McCann, R. J. Woods, A. A. Graham, and C. J. Graham. A committee was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws. The association will hold its next meeting on the afternoon of September 20, in Shaftesbury hall.

BANKRUPT STOCKS.

The reference which we made last week to the resolution passed by the fire, markets and police committee of the Hamilton city council, had to be kept within space-limits that precluded any consideration of the part of the resolution relating to bankrupt stocks. That is an important part. In it the committee has discriminated between bankrupt stocks brought from places outside the city, and bankrupt stocks which have developed in the city's own trade. The latter stocks are made free, subject only to the tax-liability to which all the citizens are. The former are put under a special tax of $100. The position is therefore all in favor of the local insolvent's stock. The committee seems to have considered all it was competent to make provision for, namely, the unjust competition forced upon stationary dealers by outside adventurers, and the unequal terms upon which local bankrupt stock and bankrupt stock transferred from outside were put on sale. Both these vexations have been modified. That is, stationary dealers paying tax as citizens upon their stock, now have the satisfaction of seeing transient dealers assessed for a considerable license; and disposers of local bankrupt stocks, also paying civic tax, are no longer at the disadvantage of competition against other bankrupt stocks which pay no tax.

But the Hamilton committee has only touched the bankrupt evil with the wand of reform. Must the bankrupt stock which is the residuum of a business carried on outside the city always pay a special tax? If A is an outsider who comes into Hamilton with a bankrupt stock that was bought at 46c. in the dollar, and stays three months to sell it, of course he will have to pay a license fee. If B, a man now trading in Hamilton, goes to some town outside of Hamilton and buys a bankrupt's stock at 46c. in the dollar, and from the same store as he does a normal trade carries on an abnormal one in this stock for three months, should he not also pay a license fee? We think he should, but have no doubt it is against the spirit of the committee's resolution that he shall. The city receives a regular contribution from this dealer as a resident, while from the interloping outside owner of a bankrupt stock it does not, and it simply aims to redress this inequality. If B, the resident trader, handles nothing but bankrupt stocks, it is unlikely he pays as much tax as a resident who does the same amount of trade in stock bought directly from wholesale sources. The latter has goods that are not depreciated by a failure, which are therefore more highly valued for the purposes of assessment, as they are for anything else.

The legislation that is to solve the question as to how the bane of bankrupt stocks is to be done away from the path of legitimate retailing, must come from business conferences not from municipal bodies. The latter will egislate more with an eye to civic revenue than to the protection of a minority of its citizens, and it is only as the latter end is reached through a measure aimed at the former, that municipal bodies will favor the trading minority. In giving free ingress to bankrupt stocks to the stores of resident traders, city and town councils feel that they are bringing cheap goods to the great body of the people, and are therefore doing a popular act. If bankrupt stocks are to be eliminated from trade, it must be by the pressure of commercial public opinion, which must be brought to bear through conventions, etc.

SO-CALLED MESS-PORK.

The discovery was announced in these columns some time ago, that United States pork was being brought into this country, not in spite of, but in evasion of, the intention of recent tariff amendments which increased the duty on imported hog-products. This discovery and the general ventilation of it were not followed, as they should have been, by a suppression or cessation of the practice. American provision houses still abuse the nomenclature of hog-products, by using terms in it for classes of pork that are properly indicated by other terms. And, it seems that in the province of Quebec, appraisers, or the persons trusted by them to examine barrelled pork, are ignorant of the terminology which is used in the tariff items themselves. There is still a very large amount of pork going into Quebec province from the United States, on which one and a half cents a pound is paid instead of the prescribed duty of three cents. Mess pork is admissable at 1½c.. the package to be free. All other pork is 3c. The Customs authorities have recently decided in the specific case of western mess-pork, that as it is boneless it shall be classified as clear pork, and shall be dutiable at 3c. per lb., and the barrel containing it at 20c. This has all along been the intention of the revised tariff. The discrepancy between the duty paid on this pork and what should be paid on it is $3.20 per barrel. Entered as mess pork, dutiable at 1½c., the barrel free, the shippers pay $3 a barrel. Entered as clear pork, dutiable at 3c. per lb., with 20c. for the barrel, they pay $6.20 per barrel. If officials knew the difference between mess-pork and clear pork, there would be very few barrels of American pork get across the line, for under the incubus of $6.20 of customs duty, that pork would be too dear to sell. But there is a large quantity of that pork, in violation of the Customs Act, being brought into Quebec province. Officials should be looked after by those who deal in Canadian pork, as through the ignorance of such officials the dealer in the native product is denied the protection the government has provided for him. The Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa Customs appraisers and examiners appear to be acquainted with the distinction implied in the terms "clear pork" and "mess pork." At all events, no clear pork is got directly in this market by Americans, so far as we can learn.

THE ONION TRADE.

The present year's onion crop is now mostly out of the ground, and is drying. Little of it will be ready for the market in much less than a fortnight, and there will be a large part of it unfit for three weeks or more. The curing process has to be undergone before the stock is in a condition to store, and that process requires about three week's. At the end of it, the onions are like hay after the making: they are a marketable commodity. They will soon be ready for the market, and the market is now ready for them. In the United States the onion crop is short, and in this country it is full. A strong inquiry has already set in from across the line, and already dealers have good openings for the placing of large orders, but the stock has to be bought yet from the growers. The position of the latter is rather firm for high prices, and values have not yet found their level. Before they can do so, the market must have been opened some little time, but there is every sign that when the conditions get settled the advantage will be with the holders of stock. The crop is large, as the yield was good and the ground under onions was more than usual. The United States, instead of being a competitor in the market, will afford us a market. Enquiries for future delivery are now the more eager from the United States the more the time draws near for the expected passage of the McKinley Bill, the large dealers wanting to get a hold of stock before it is made dearer by the additional duty. Growers are asking from 60 to 80c.

CHICAGO MEDIATORS AT OTTAWA.

Hon. Mr. Foster, Minister of Finance, on Monday received a deputation composed of Messrs. Echert, of Montreal, and Miles of Chicago, representing the firms of Swift & Co. and Armour & Co., Chicago, and Mr. McCrail, pork packer of Montreal, who were accompanied by Mr. C. H. Mackintosh, M. P., Hy. Bate and C. B. Powell, of Ottawa. Their object was to request an official interpretation of the tariff in reference to imported mess pork. It was explained to the Minister that the dealers had made contracts for delivery, basing their figures on letters received from the Department of Customs, and now found that another interpretation had been decided upon. They asked, therefore, that relief be granted them. Mr. Foster said the question was one for the Minister of Customs to deal with, and he would lay the matter before him promptly upon his return to the city. The mess-pork which these traders had given orders for was western, boneless pork, and therefore, subject, under a recent decision of the Customs Department, to a duty of 3c. per lb. It should be if it is boneless, as that makes its clear pork, which these dealers will no doubt call it themselves when they come to dispose of it in trade.

THE TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

At the monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association the following members were present: Messrs. Mills, Thackray, Williamson, Berwick, Roberts, McCulloch, Binnie, Mara, Partridge, Clarke, Jones. Mr. Mills, the president, occupied the chair. The meeting was called to order at 9:30.

The minutes were read by the secretary, and upon the motion of Mr. Berwick, seconded by Mr. Roberts, they were confirmed.

NEW MEMBERS.

Mr. Clarke proposed Mr. W. L. Priestman.

NIGHT MEETINGS.

Mr. Williamson moved, Mr. Roberts seconded the resolution, that meetings be held at night.—Carried.

THE PIC-NIC.

The Chairman reported that the pic-nic committee was not in a position to give its final account of the pic-nic, but there would evidently be a very small balance in the hands of the committee.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The secretary read a letter fram a Halifax correspondent which runs as follows :

HALIFAX, Aug. 22, 1890.

JNO. F. THACKRAY, Esq.,
Sec. Toronto Retail Grocers' Ass'n.

DEAR SIR :—As we have about completed an Association here among retail grocers, I would take the liberty of asking for some information from you. First, as to the method your Association follow in protecting the members from bad pays. Second, do you consider it advisable to have a paid secretary; said secretary, a man who has no connection with the grocery business, or in other words, a disinterested party? As we meet September 1st, for the completion of the organization, you would confer a great favor by sending what information re the above questions that you can conveniently let us have. The copy of your by-laws you kindly sent me has been adopted by us almost word for word. Trusting to hear from you soon.

I remain respectfully yours,
H. V. WIER.

Another communication from Batavia, N. Y., was as follows:

BATAVIA, Aug. 27, 1890.

SEC'Y Toronto Retail Grocers' Ass'n,
Toronto, Ont.

DEAR SIR :—As the organization of such an association as you represent is about to take place here, I have thought you might be prevailed on to give us some information and advice in this connection. A copy of your by-laws and any blank forms you use, as well as an outline of the working of your Association, would be very gratefully received. Business men here have at last wakened up to the fact that they must protect themselves from dead beats, and as we have a large town (10,000 pop.) and a large number of merchants, we are confident such an organization can be kept up if only started properly. Your kind attention to this will greatly oblige,

Very respectfully yours,
E. M. JEWELL, 99 Main Street.

The secretary reported that he had replied to both in compliance with their respective requests.

EXCHANGING LISTS.

The Secretary also reported a verbal communication from the representative of the Bakers' Association, proposing a monthly exchange of delinquent lists between the two associations.

Mr. Williamson moved, Mr. McCulloch seconded, that the exchange be made, as proposed by the Bakers' Association.—Carried.

LIMITED HOURS OF BUSINESS.

The discussion of the question of closing on the Wednesday afternoons throughout July and August was carried on informally, with the result that all were pretty well agreed that the closing was advisable, that there would be little lost thereby, that if the leading stores did it there would be no need for anxiety as to what the small stores would do, and that, therefore, the movement should be begun at once among the leading grocers. Various suggestions were made as to the manner in which the movement should be begun, whether through the enlistment in its behalf of the daily press, or through the use by members of the correspondence columns of those papers.

Mr. Williamson moved, and Mr. Roberts seconded, that Mr. Thackray in his rounds between this and March do all he can to get the answers of individual traders to this question : If a majority of the trade are in favor of closing on Wednesdays in July and August, would you be willing to close?—Carried.

A STONE WEIGHT.

It slipped out casually in a desultory conversation on the subject of the weight of a stone of rolled oats, that the 12 lb stone had been abandoned by the member who at a former meeting was said to be making that short weight his standard.

MATCHES.

The prices of matches were given some attention, when a member said that some dealers were selling a grade of matches at 7 cents.

Moved by Mr. Williamson, seconded by Mr. Roberts that the meeting adjourn.—Carried.

IN LIMBO.

MONTREAL, Sept. 3, 1890.

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER,

SIR,—I enclose a paragraph from the Montreal Star, of this evening, giving an account of the capture and incarceration here of the two fakirs, Ford and Graham, whom you showed up so well in your last week's paper. I believe your publication was the only paper warning the trade people against these sharpers, notwithstanding that I believe the Globe, Mail, and Empire knew of their rascally transactions. Why the daily papers are so slow in showing up fakirs who are preying on the legitimate business of such papers I can't see. You will, no doubt, be able to add some Toronto firms' names to the Star's list of Montrealers. If you can, by all means let's have them. We want to see the names of parties who are "laying back" for soft snaps in advertising. I know some of these firms have refused to entertain any proposition to advertise in good legitimate publications, but the first genteel fakir that comes along with the name of Mr. Van Horne or Mr. McNichol, or of some other prominent person on his lips, they jump at the advertising scheme, and write a cheque at once for the amount, fearing the opportunity will be lost of currying favor with these great corporations if time is not taken by the forelock. If these ambitious business men would stop a moment to consider the utter impossibility of these officials having anything to do with such schemes, much less with the men that advocate them, they would save their money. I have some facts in these cases that may be interesting reading matter later on. Below is the Star's report.

Repectfully yours,
AGENT FOR LEGITIMATE ADVERTISING.

H. B. Ford and T. H. Graham, the two young men who became so unenviably known in connection with the Disabled Firemen's Fund, appeared in the Police Court this morning. They were both fashionably dressed and seemed far from downcast by the position in which they found themselves. When Detective Campeau left from here to arrest Ford in London, Ont., a telegram was received from Chief of Police Williams of that city saying that Ford had gone to Windsor. When our own Campeau reached there he found that Ford had been arrested by another detective Campeau, the brother of the Montreal officer, who had taken Ford on the suspicion of having forged the name of Mr. Labatt, the London brewer, to a cheque for fifty dollars. After some discussion as to who had the prior right to the prisoner the Windsor Campeau allowed the Montreal Campeau to take Ford, but when on the point of returning, a telegram was received stating that Graham was on the way to join his partner. The detective accordingly prolonged his stay till the arrival of the Canadian Pacific train, and in consequence had the pleasure of the company of both on his trip back to Montreal. They arrived yesterday evening by the Chicago express, and were lodged in the Central Police station, where they passed the night, as no one came to bail them out. This morning two women, well known to the police, at whose house Ford used to live, and one of whom has been supposed to be his wife, called, but they were the only persons who seemed to have any interest in them. Shortly after Chief Benoit had a short interview with them, during which Ford, who does most of the talking, promised to make everything good if they were let off. The Chief, however, told them that the law would have to take its course. When brought before Judge Desnoyers, Ford pleaded that it was all a mistake, but the Judge told him that appearances were against him, and advising him to get a good lawyer as the only thing that could be done, said he was compelled to hold them till Friday, when Chief Benoit said he would be ready with his witnesses. After they had returned to the cells a search was made in their luggage for the little red covered subscription book, which would be the main evidence against them, and which Ford said he had torn up. After finding a number of love letters and several pictures, amongst which were three different photographs of Chief Benoit, one of President Van Horne of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and some female faces, various papers and drafts of contracts in connection with their different moneymaking schemes, all duly classified, and some letters from his mother, the much-wanted book was found, but as he had stated, most of the leaves had been torn out. Next a letter was found from Alderman George Washington Stephens, threatening them with legal proceedings unless some matters were settled. After that another letter signed by one "John Thompson, Treasurer O. C. L. D.," was discovered, authorizing Ford to collect subscriptions for the Labor Day demonstration. Besides these, a number of documents, purporting to be recommendations from a number of well-known business people who vouch for the integrity of Graham and Ford, all written in the same hand-writing, were found together with telegrams, notifying them of their danger of being arrested. Before the search was ended the leaves of the subscription book were found, and if the signatures are as genuine as they seem they will furnish most positive proof against the two men now in gaol. From the first leaves found, it appears that besides the subscriptions of which the chief was aware, the following collections have been made by the enterprising couple :

Canadian Pacific Railway	$ 500
Thomson, Dunstan & Co	100
Bingham and Webber	100
Great Northwestern Telegraph Company	100
Grand Trunk Railway	500
The E. C. Gurney Co	100
Total	$1,400

All these subscriptions are marked "paid." The leaves also contain the following subscriptions for the Labor Day Demonstration, also marked paid :

FROM MONTREAL :
Beaver Line	$ 100
Williams Manufacturing Company	20
Montreal Rolling Mills	100
Dawes & Co	40
H. & A. Allan	100
W. Clark	20
Wm. Johnston & Co	25
FROM LONDON, ONT.:
John Labatt	50
Carling Brewing Co	100
Hiram Walker & Co	20
Total	$ 575

In regard to the last mentioned subscriptions Mr. John Thompson, who is supposed to have written the letter authorizing Ford to collect them, was seen at Lovell's, where he is employed. He says that Ford was introduced to him by a mutual friend and was simply permitted by him to try and place tickets. He has never heard of him since.

"Those two fellows also tried to work me," said Chief Hughes this morning, "but they couldn't do it. They submitted a written proposal to me somewhat in the same nature as that submitted to Chief Benoit and I read it over. I told them at the time that I could not do anything, anyway, before laying the matter before the Police Committee. When I came to the last paragraph of their communication. in which it was stated that 'the whole thing would wind up with the biggest picnic ever given in America,' I put my foot on it, and made up mind not to have anything to do with them. I am not sorry for it now."

Chief Benoit will personally visit all the people who have been victimized, and see what steps can be taken to have them recouped. Graham is a member of the Commercial Travellers' Association.

[Next week we shall point the moral which the career of these fakirs teaches to business men generally, by naming Toronto firms that have been their easy victims.—ED. GROCER.]

BUSINESS WILL BOOM.

The cash value of this year's crop in Ontario is placed at nearly one hundred and twelve million dollars, as compared with one hundred and two millions in 1889. This is an increase of nearly ten million dollars, or twenty-five dollars for each family in the province. With abundance in Ontario and Manitoba there should be a big boom in business during the coming fall and winter. —Daily Telegram.

The increased yield and increased prices have fully doubled the purchasing power of the farming community in Canada. Another condition exists which gives as much satisfaction to the trading public as good crops and good prices. It is the receptive condition which merchants all over the country are in. The questionable prosperity of the last few years has induced careful buying habits among both wholesale and retail merchants, which results in there being no overloading to amount to anything throughout the province. Farmers will be a position to buy ; merchants are in a position and disposition to buy ; wholesale men have been buying largely; and manufacturers are looking with zest on the active demand for goods. In fact, we take it, this is going to be a great year for buying and selling.—Daily World.

Plumbago, which is the basis of stove blacking, has advanced about 50 per cent.

THE FALL TRADE.

To the city retailer who has successfully passed the summer spell of dulness the spectacle of the schoolboy "with shining face" wending his way "unwillingly to school," which may be seen any morning next week, for the first time since July first, should be particularly pleasing, for it means the return of many families from the country expressly for the purpose of placing their children in the schools again, and therefore a revival of business. This custom of spending the hot season at seaside and country resorts undoubtedly causes a decided diminution of the business of the average city retail grocer, but as "it's an ill wind that blows no good," so what the urban dealer loses inures to the profit of the country grocer, and the total volume of business undergoes but little shrinkage when the cities become too warm for comfort and health. But the city grocer finds no consolation in this fact, he only knows that the general exodus of people who can afford a sojourn in the country, as well as many others who cannot, but manage to do so by staving off the payment of their grocer's bill—he knows that this exodus means loss of trade for him, even if others reap the benefit, and gladly welcomes back the returning customers. Not all grocers who dwell in cities do absolutely lose money by the absence of customers in the hot weather, although their volume of sales of course must be reduced, but many manage to make their profits run about on their former level by pushing the sale of those summer specialties which pay better profits than staple groceries, and hence while the demand for the latter may fall off very materially, the net earnings of the dealer may not show any important decline.

These returning thousands arrive in town with sharpened appetites, the result of the breathing fresher and cooler air than that of crowded city, and their ability to consume the edibles handled by grocers must certainly be greater than in the spring and early summer months preceding their departure to "fresh fields and pastures new." Hence the city distributor of groceries may confidently expect during the succeeding month or two an active demand for all descriptions of fancy and staple food products of a seasonable nature. Each year the country grows richer, and the means of the individual correspondingly increase, as a rule; articles which a few years ago were luxuries now have become necessaries of life in the city, and the most expensive kinds of teas, coffees, fancy groceries, etc., are in more and more request every year. This is true of all sections of the country, but more especially of the centres of health, refinement and luxury, such as New York, Boston, Chicago and other large cities. It behooves, then, the enterprising city grocer, particularly at this season of the year, when urban populations are at about their highest level, to raise the standard of quality, instead of maintaining it at the same level that satisfied his patrons in former years.

Locality must of course govern even the city dealer ; the grocer in a tenement house district cannot expect a demand of the same character as those who cater for the residents on Murray Hill, but progress though slow is still perceptible in the former districts, and the cream of the tenement and cheaper boarding house trade is not to be "sneezed at." This is a point we wish to urge upon our readers. Always aim for the best. No matter where your store may be situated, try to cater for the cream of the business in that locality. To do this you must keep a little better goods than your neighbors; you must be in a position to satisfy the demand instead of repeating the parrot cry of: "Sorry we're out of it, but here's something just as good," when the truth is it is nothing near the quality of the article asked for. Let Tom, Dick and Harry be content to supply your neighborhood with articles of the average degree of quality with which the market is almost always glutted, but you, our enterprising reader, want to do a little better, and you will certainly, all other things being equal, reap your reward in a large and highly remunerative patronage.—Merchants' Review.

A combination has been formed on ultramarine blue and prices have advanced.

Mr. D. Weismiller, Kippen. writes "business is improving with us now and we expect to do a fair fall and winter business after the Fall shows and Exhibitions are all over." In a few weeks outside work will be over and then we can close up early in the evening thereby affording us an opportunity for reading and writing a little more for The GROCER.

Smith & Keighley have been fortunate in securing a consignment of new crop Nagasaki tea. This class is particularly scarce and much sought after this season.

In Chatham, Ont., Mr. John McCorvey has bought John McKerrall's interest in the grocery business that has so successfully been carried on under the style of McCorvie & McKerrall.

James Murray, a young man employed in Robert Evans & Co's seed warehouse, Hamilton, was drowned at the Beach while swimming near the piers on the bay side. Capt. Campbell grappled for and recovered the body.

Mr. T. W. Costigan, of Montreal, proposes establishing a sardine packing factory at Campobello. He has leased a building at Welchpool, and engaged a foreman who managed the St. Andrews Sardine Company's business.

The fire brigade was called out to a fire shortly after twelve o'clock on the night of the 4th inst., in the grocery and fruit store of W. Webby, 177 King street west, Toronto. The damage was trifling. The fire originated from a spark from the stove.

The dry goods and grocery store of Mr. R. J. Johnson, Bethany, was burglarized a few nights ago. There were taken about twenty pairs of boots, a case of tobacco, and several things in the grocery line. Fortunately there was no money in the tills, which must have been discouraging to the party.

According to the Pennsylvania Grocer, the Philadelphia Association has decided against the project of co-operative buying, a committee appointed to consider the subject having come to the conclusion that it is not advisable for an association to go into the wholesale grocery business, a wise decision.

A seizure has been made at St. Johns, Quebec, of a number of hogs which had been smuggled across the line, and placed in a car among a number of Canadian hogs and cattle. The Customs Department ruled that they be confiscated to the crown and held for slaughter. Levi Goodhue, who smuggled the animals, suffers the loss of his team and cart, and will also have to pay a fine.

The Compound Lard bill, which passed the House of Representatives last week, will hardly pass the Senate at this session. It is intended to protect the market against spurious lard, of which cotton seed oil is an important constitutent, as the Oleomargarine bill was to prevent imitation butter. It is estimated that the present product of compound lard is 320,000,000 pounds annually.

The Quebec board of trade has memorialized the Government in view of the whiskey smuggling which prevails in the lower St. Lawrence, that coasting vessels bound for Quebec and Montreal be compelled to report at one or more places below Quebec, and that a fast revenue cutter be detailed to cruise in the suspected district. No action on this memorial will be taken until the Cabinet re-assembles after the holidays.

The E. B. Eddy Manufacturing Company's No. 1 Telegraph Matches contain more to the case than any other matches in the market, as the paper boxes (small) are made on a wonderfully ingenious machine. They are of uniform size, and do not vary in count. Their Telephones No. 2 are the very best and cheapest match to be had ; all boxes are of uniform size and are substantially of the same uniform count. There is no doubt about the superiority of their matches over all others.

At a meeting of the executive of the Great Central Fair to be opened at Hamilton on September 22, a letter was read from F. W. Fearman, who cons dered that a mistake was made at most of the exhibitions in giving prizes to the fattest pigs, overlooking the pigs with good sized bodies. He suggested that a prize be awarded for the best pen of hogs for packing purposes. Mr. Fearman's suggestion came too late to be carried out this year, but his letter was filed for future reference.

Sir Baldwin Walker, captain of H. M. S. Emerald, has filed his answer to the summons and complaint of James Baird, the St. John's merchant whose lobster factory on the French shore was closed last June by Sir Baldwin's orders. Sir Baldwin at first intimated, presumably under instructions from the British Government, that he would pay Mr. Baird's claim; but he has at last chosen to put in a defence, and he urges the plea that his acts were justified by the orders the Imperial Government issued to give effect to the modus vivendi. The trial will come off in November.

A meeting of the creditors of B. F. Kastner, general dealer, Mitchell and Sebringville, was held in the office of Messrs. Gibbons, Mulhern & Co., in London one day last week. The statement shows assets to the value of $22,400, which were sold to E. Kastner, brother of the insolvent, for $15,500, payable in three, six, and nine months, he to pay the preferred claims to the amount of about $500. Another brother of the insolvent, who until a short time ago was his partner has a claim of $1,500, which is being disputed. If that claim is set aside, the estate will pay about 60c. on the dollar.

A celebrated comedian arranged with his greengrocer, one Berry, to pay him quarterly; but the greengrocer sent in his account long before the quarter was due. The comedian, in great wrath, called upon the greengrocer, and, labouring under the impression that his credit was doubted, said, "I say, here's a pretty mul, Berry; you have sent in your bill, Berry, before it is due, Berry. Your father, the elder Berry, would not have been such a goose, Berry; but you needn't look so black, Berry, for I don't care a straw, Berry, and shan't pay you till Christmas, Berry." — Manchester Grocers' Review.

DRUMMERS IN THE ORCHESTRA.

The tenth annual Sængerfest, held recently in Waterloo, seems to have had its contingent of commercial travellers. The Chronicle says :—And the "boys" were there too,—that is, the "Knights of the Grip" as their richly ornamented banner showed to the admiring thousands. These jovial sons of commerce, the pioneers of trade to whose persistent efforts the opening of unexplored regions of the commercial world is due, were here and enjoyed the Singers'-Feast and drank the cup of enjoyment to the brim. Headed by the Waterloo Cadet Band and the Cadets, they marched through the principal streets to the Picnic Grounds. Noble, at the head with his trunk upon a barrow, followed by Alderman and McKay and the silk emblazoned banner of their ancient order, the rest of the society bringing up the rear, each man carrying in addition to the Union Jack and Stars and Stripes, a huge sunflower on his breast. They had fun galore, and as one of their number remarked to our reporter, "he hadn't so much fun since he had the measles." Their singing in the park was greatly enjoyed, the songs of Germany blending with the airs of Auld Scotia and the merry tunes of Erin, and honored as they were by the presence of our band they felt entirely happy. Among the number were genial J. D. Stewart, President pro tem, representing Eby, Blain & Co., Mark (the only Mark) T. Lester, of Gowans, Kent & Co., C. J. Duncan, of J. D. Ivey & Co., and Alderman the Paint Man, and many other Toronto boys. Montreal was ably represented by R. J. Neagle, of Green Sons & Co., while Hamilton, Brantford and Petrolea sent worthy proxies in the person of W. E. LaChance, of Wood, Vallance & Co., Milton Wilbee, of Wm. Patterson's Biscuit Works and J. M. McKay, of McMillan, Kittredge & Co., respectively. There were many more but owing to the dense crowd surrounding the board of the Knights at the Park, our reporter could not approach near enough to gather the names all in, but suffice it to say, They were all there.

GROCERIES.

The tone of trade was quickened to a high degree of vibrativeness by the demand for groceries which was heard from in every wholesale house during the week just past. Before that there was a very perceptible phlegm had overgrown, and business was rather dull. The incursion of visitors to the Exhibition following the numerous arrivals during the millinery openings, the maturing of the fruit season, and above all the sudden and successive advances in the price of sugar, all these had something to do with the increased animation in the trade of the week we have gone through. Not only was the demand for sugars good. It was also particularly strong for all grades of teas of all descriptions. In canned goods business was done that must have a very settling effect upon the market, in respect to those features that were problematical. Money seems to be plentiful as payments are met with little request for renewals.

CANNED GOODS.

Pruits and vegetables are not in so steady request as they were at the time our last report was prepared. There is still a good trade done, however. The reason for the slight decline in activity is the firmer attitude of packers and brokers. The stock being wanted more for an anticipated than for a current trade, retailers hold off when the market rises. The whole stock of old peas held here, and which was selling at $1.00, is now off the market, or nearly all off. This makes way for the new pack, which is very firm at $1.10 to $1.25 according to brand and quality. Corn shows a rather unsteady market, as there are conflicting estimates of the crop and pack. Jobbers ask $1 for last year's corn, and $1.25 for this year's. Canned tomatoes were offered early in the week covered by our report at 95c. They turned out to be stock of an unknown packer, and jobbers therefore did not buy largely. Brands that have a reputation are $1 to $1.25 by packers, but jobbers have so far not gone with any eagerness on the market. Packers recently offered new apples at $1.10 for 3's and $2.75 for gallons ; one firm had sweetened 3's for which they wanted $1.50. Plums were offered at $1.60 for Lombard 2's. Packers' agents are devoting their chief attention to fruits. The supply of salmon is increasing and prices are lower ; flat tins are held at $1.65, special brands at $1.40 to $1.50, and ordinary at $1.30 to $1.35, with lots obtainable as low as $1.27½ to arrive. Lobsters firm at $195 to $2 for ordinary, with Star and such well-known brands at $2.20. The Clover leaf brand is exceedingly hard to get. A shipment for Sloan & Crowther is expected to arrive before the week is out.

COFFEES.

The coffee market is going from strength to strength. All South American and Central American grades are stiffer than they were a week ago. The causes are short crops, increased consumption, and the greater cost of production in Brazil since the emancipation of the slaves in that country. The demand for coffee just now is good, and the stocks held are light, so that prices show no sign of weakening in the near future. An artificial cause that may be looked for to have a confirming effect on the strength already acquired in the formation at Rio Janeiro of the Coffee Bagging Company. Mocha and Java coffee, like the other classes, are firm and high.

DRIED FRUIT.

Stocks of old fruit are very nearly exhausted. Old stock Valencias are offered at 8c., with lots at 7½c. New Valencias to arrive are offered at 8c. The first of the new crop, it is thought, will be here this week, and, as usual, there is a great deal of rivalry between the wholesale jobbers as to which will win the race. Holders of currants are clearing up old stocks at various prices; barrels and halves are quoted at 5½ to 6c. Sultanas firm; a lot sold at 12½c. the other day. Patras can be bought at 5⅞c. with Vostizzas at 6½c.

NUTS.

There is little change that is not comprehended in the phrase "increasing firmness." There is an advance, as, well, noted in the Prices Current, on Bordeaux walnuts. Jobbers are getting 13c., and are selling at 12c. in lots.

New York dispatch of recent date says:—Very hard days are coming for those who love to crack and munch the savory peanut, for the price of the peanut is moving skyward. The high price is due, it is said, to the short crops of last year and the year before. Last year one-third of the average crop was gathered. There seems to be some doubt about the crop this year. Some dealers say that it will begin to arrive about the middle of October and will be large ; others that it will not begin to come in before Nov. 1. Of the latter contingent some say that the reports from the growers are to the effect that the vines are looking well, but there are few nuts on them. The largest peanut markets are Norfolk, Petersburg and Smithfield, where there are mills in which the nuts are made marketable. They are first thoroughly winnowed, cleaned and sorted, then they are put in bags holding from 90 to 100 pounds and shipped to jobbers. Planting begins in the latter part of April and lasts until the middle of May. Harvesting begins ordinarily about Oct. 1 and lasts through November.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is steady and in fairly active request. Spices are in strong demand, the pickling season still furnishing a strong support to the market. The pepper crop from all information that can be gleaned is a fair one. It is a significant fact that while population has doubled and trebled in this and condiment consuming countries, yet the production has not greatly increased.

SUGAR.

We have arrived at another sugar epoch, a time of some excitement in the domestic market of that commodity. Last Friday Canadian refiners advanced their prices on granulated ⅛c., a movement accompanying an equal one in the New York market made the same day. On Saturday New York went up another on granulated, and on Monday the same advance was made here. The prices of granulated now stand where the sum of these additions carry them, namely, 7¼c. for less than fifteen barrels, and 7⅜c. for fifteen barrels or more. Yellows have also moved up in some grades and are firmer. The prices now holding appeared for awhile to be clenched by large buying. Dull business, taken along with an easing which was reported on Wednesday in the New York market, might have made the supply side of the market here yield, but an active demand, which is always set going by an advance, gave a strength that was not supposed to be intrinsically in the situation. Already the refiners have come down an eighth on yellows, but jobbers have not followed their example.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their review of the sugar market, say: Raws advanced 3-16c. Our market is still ½c. lower than London prices for spot sugar, but on a parity with that market for October shipment of beet, and, as there is reason to expect increased strength on that side in the immediate future, we anticipate still higher prices here for both raws and refined during this month. The consumption throughout the world since January 1 has been enormous, mainly in consequence of low prices, so that the increased production is very largely absorbed. We find the total stock in all the principal countries reduced to 615,157 tons against 501,493 tons at same time last year. As to the new beet crop, M. Licht now anticipates a less favorable yield than that of last year.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The Grocery World says:—Syrups are going up. The reasons are two-fold. Fruits have failed and table sweets of this kind will be wanting this winter. This will increase the demand for the article. Then corn from which syrup is largely made now, has suffered severely in the West from untoward weather, and the prospects are for a short crop and higher prices. The prospective increased demand and increased cost of supply have therefore forced the market up."

In this market syrups are steady, though purchases have been made at the refineries the past few days at a shade lower figures. Molasses in good demand at 33 to 38c. for dark to bright in tierces, with barrels 2c. higher. Martinique is reported to be paying the highest price for Trinidad molasses for the making of rum. A shipment of 1400 puncheons was recalled from the part of Boston to which it had been sent from Trinidad, and was sold in Martinique. Prices have therefore gone up from 4 to 5c. in New York.

TEA.

The tea market continues very strong. It is now in a healthier shape than at any time in the past five years. Stocks are light, and the demand good. Primary markets are higher; exchange is higher, and the indications are that a little later this market will be considerably higher. Teas at present prices here are considered a good purchase. Japan teas are stiffening. Several consignments on the way here have been ordered to New York, as prices there are higher than they are here.

Latest reports from the London Tea market state that there has been a higher demand for all sorts. The lower grades of whole leaf teas being a shade dearer, and the arrival of some teas with improved quality tends to concentrate greater attention upon the Indian market. The report of better teas to come forward from Assam and Cachar appears to be borne out by recent remarks.

"During the year 1889 there were 110 tea plantations in the Madras Presidency, with an approximate area of 7,172 acres, which yielded a total of 884,916 lbs., of tea," says the Indian Agriculturist. Ninety-eight of these plantations are in the Nilgiris District, seven in the Malabar Wynaad, two in the Madura District, and three in Bouanghi tanna of Srungavrapukota Taluk of Vizagapatam District. Although about 8½ acres have been planted in the last three estates there was no yield, in consequence of the crop not being harvested, as the plant is not thriving. The average yield per acre of mature plant was 400 lbs. in the Malabar Wynaad, 190 lbs. in the Nilgiris, and 10 lbs. in Madura. The number of coffee plantations was 15,478, with an area of 184,125½ acres, and an approximate yield of 12,382,580lbs. of coffee. This industry was confined to the district of Malabar, Madura, Nilgiris, Salem, Tinnevelly, Coimbatore, South Canara, Vizagapatam, and Amantapore, Malabar heads the list with 10,471 plantations, with 60,547 acres; Madura has 4,183 plantations with 6,065 acres; Nilgiris, 694 plantations and 82,145 acres; Salem, 49 plantations in the Javadi and Yelagin hills with about 25 acres; Tinnevelly 49 plantations with 2,650 acres; South Canara has 8 plantations with about 71 acres, and Coimbatore, 18 plantations with 1,808 acres. As with tea, the coffee plantations in Vizagapatam are confined to Bouanghi tanna, where there are three plantations over an area of 710 acres. It is expeted that the outturn this year will be in advance of the results obtained last year from the same cause.

PETROLEUM.

There is no change in price, and the state of the demand continues the same.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

Trade is fairly active and prices are steady at standing quotations.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The cooler weather has been attended by an improvement in the quality of the butter marketed, the peculiar susceptibility to heat this summer on the part of the stock brought here, being a leading cause of rapid deterioration. In the quantity there has been no decline, and although the proportion of good butter was higher than it was a week ago, yet there was an abundance of bad. Dairy tubs are in liberal supply at 14 to 15c. The contents of the tubs have been more generally of purely recent make than was the case in dead midsummer or late in August, when tubs holding butter made at various periods, mixed butter, were offered. That class of tubs is now offering as medium at 10 to 12c. The large rolls now in receipt are few and almost without exception are made up of mixed grades, a considerable quantity of June stock being now made up in this more inviting outer form. Crocks and pails, like the majority of the tubs, contain nothing but new butter, and are worth 13 to 15c., some very good samples being bought in these packages Pound rolls are very plentiful, and the butter they represent is mostly very good. The most usual price paid is 18c. Creamery tubs, not by any means in oversupply, are 18 to 19c. Creamery pound rolls are 21 to 22c.

Cheese is very firm at 9 to 9½c. Sales in trade are made regularly but not in any perceptible increase upon late business. The firmness is a consequence of the stronger position of the outside market.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—There still continues to be a sufficient stock to prolong the season's trade at the high prices quoted in our last report, viz., $1.80 to $2. It is only because the prices are so high that the surplus lingers so long, for the voracity of the demand is great enough to sweep the market bare at reasonably good prices.

DRIED APPLES—There are some yet, but not more than enough to supply those whose needs are so strong that they will pay 8c. There are not many will do this for immediate consumption, at a time when the various fresh fruits are to be had at prices proportionally no higher, but the dried apples are wanted for next year's market, the supply from the new crop giving certain promise of being very small.

EGGS—Are scarce and firm, 17c. being the prevailing price, though there are sales made at 16c. All are wanted that the producers can offer. The prices for farmers' baskets of strictly new-laid eggs are 19 to 20c.

FRUIT—In a recent circular, Frank Rand & Co., fruit brokers, London, England, say: "It is rather early to make any definite estimate of the Apple crop on the Continent, but of this you may be assured that the usual exporting countries, viz.:—France, Holland, Belgium, Germany and Denmark, will be unable to export many to this country this season unless at very dear prices. Take with this our English crop, which is even shorter than last year, and we have no hesitation in stating there will be a steady demand throughout the season for American, Canadian, and Nova Scotian apples at good prices."

HAY—The arrivals now are chiefly, almost entirely of the new make. There is an ample supply, which at this season is not required to be large, arriving by rail. There is no change in the price, $9 to $9.50 continuing to be paid. Street receipts are moderately large.

HIDES—Are unchanged. No. green are 7c., and No. 2 are 6c. The supply is low, and the market is strong. The season for more abundant stock is now drawing nigh.

HONEY—Has undergone no change. It is plentiful and in easy demand. Prices are therefore no higher. Nor are they lower, as holders believe there will be a good market after the season opens when everything must be got from store. Clear honey is 9 to 12c., and honey in the comb is 14 to 18c.

HOPS—Are showing increased strength. The crop of 1889 had a poor chance, as it was large in other parts of the world as well as here, and had the further disadvantage of competition from a large overplus of the preceding year. Now all this is changed. Crops in other hop-countries are generally short, and last year's stock is about off the market. Hops of '89 growth are 16 to 18c., and those of the present crop are yet unfixed in value, but are nominal at 25 to 30c.

OATS—Are 41c. on track. Mr. Martin Todd, of Todd & Sons, Galt, who was on change on Monday, said the Ontario oat crop would be larger than the earlier reports would indicate. The acreage was larger than last year, and the crop picked up materially during the past few weeks. He figured it that the total crop would be 20 per cent. less than the average.

POTATOES—There are no rail receipts yet. Arrivals in farmers' wagons are 70c. This price is not firm, as stock is plentiful and the demand is not so stiff.

POULTRY—Chickens are 50 to 60 cts. Ducks are 50 to 70c. Both are in abundant receipt, but the market is not large.

SKINS—Sheep are 80c. There is now a good trade in lamb skins, which at this season are usually offering plentifully. Calfskins are 7c. for No. 1, and 5c. for No. 2.

TALLOW—Rough is 2c., and rendered is 5½c.

WOOL—Is easy at 21 to 23c.

FISH.

No class of fish is now plentiful, nor is the demand especially strong. This latter conditionof the market is not owing to unseasonableness of fish as an article of consumption, but is due to the high prices which is the consequence of general scarcity. The season for white fish is nearly past, and the present stock being low, prices are advancing, white fish now quoting at 7 to 7½c. Salmon trout, rather more plentiful, but still in deficient supply, is 6½ to 7c. There may be a good stock of salmon trout caught yet, as there is time for another run. Lake herring are $2 per hundred, by count. A small shipment of black bass from the inland waters about Peterboro' has reached this market. The fish are very good, and are selling at 9c. The season for taking salmon is near its close. One small run of large fish is yet to be heard from. The present price is 16c. Pickerel are 5½ to 6c. There is a very small supply of them.

GREEN FRUIT.

The orange stock has still its contingent from Sorrento and Maori groves. Sorrentos are $7.50 to $8, Maoris are $8.50 to $9. This class of stock receives the major part of buyers' attention at present, as Jamaicas, selling at $7.50 to $8, are not yet at their best, and are not yet in full supply. The orange trade is a quiet one yet, the popular fruit being now peaches, plums, pears, grapes, etc. Verdelli lemons are $6.50 to $7. There is a very easy demand for them, the late cool weather being a hindrance to active trade. Bananas are in very low request. They bring $1 to $1.75 according to size.

PROVISIONS.

The opening of the pork packing houses was not too soon. The stocks of smoked hams were beginning to get in small compass. They cannot be replenished in less than 60 days, so that the supply will be low before it is increased from the factories. There is a continuous strong demand for all smoked meats, and a very good one for long clear bacon. Hogs are coming in very freely, and the market for them has suddenly gone down, the price now paid being $5.50.

BACON—Long clear is 8¼ to 8¾c. Backs are 10½ to 11c. Bellies are 10½ to 11c. Rolls are 9½ to 10c.

DRESSED HOGS—Are $5.50.

HAMS—Smoked are firm at 13c. Sweet pickled are 11c.

LARD—Is 9¼ to 10c.

MESS PORK—Is $15.50 to $16.50.

DRY GOODS.

The excellent trade of last week has been followed by one almost equally good this week. The reduced railway rates brought in a great many traders with orders for fall trade. Next week is expected to be better, as the railway rates are easier in the last week of the Exhibition. Prices are steady, and money is fairly plentiful.

GROCERIES.

This branch of trade in its different lines has witnessed quite an active movement during the week. More especially in wines and spirits, new crop dried fruits, and sugars, all of which, in fact have been exceptionally active as will be seen from the appended detail. On the whole, therefore, the fall business has opened out, as expected, in a pretty satisfactory manner. The general tone is firm in most lines of imported goods, while in our own produce the feeling of holders is at least that way, although the speculative tendency manifest formerly has been dampened by enhanced ideas as to values.

SUGAR, SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

The sugar market has been quite active during the week, especially in raw varieties, and transactions involving round lots of stuff have been effected. Dark muscavadoes are firm at 5¼c., while bright are stiff at 5⅜ to 5 1-2c., with vacum kane at 6¼c. One house cleared 145 hogsheads at these figures, and for the balance, a lot amounting to 240 hogsheads, refused bids within the merest fraction of the above figure. With regard to the refiners they are quite as high, and granulated is quoted stiff at 6¾c., an advance of ¼c. on last week, and a 1-2c. for the fortnight. Yellows, also, are very firm. Syrups and molasses are steady at 45 to 65c. for the former, and 34 to 36c. for the latter.

TEA AND COFFEE.

The tea market has been affected with other lines by an active feeling, and a considerable business has transpired during the week. Low grade Japans, especially, have been in good request, but are unobtainable while blacks have furnished a good business at an advance of 1 1-2c. per lb. on previous figures. Coffee has been moving quietly along at steady figures. We quote :—Rio, 20 to 22c; Santos, 22 to 23c ; Jamaica, 23 to 25c ; Maracaibo, 23½ to 25½c ; Guatemala, 22 to 24c; Plantation Ceylon, 24 to 26 ; Java, 28 to 30c; Mocha, 30 to 31c ; Costa Rica, 25 to 27c.

CANNED GOODS.

Trade has been fair, and a good distributive enquiry is to be noted during the week. First-class brands of lobsters are scarce, but ordinary grades are in ample supply, and offers at $7 during the week did not meet with a very encouraging reception. Mackerel have been selling at $5, but during the week offers of $4.50 laid down have been refused. In salmon no change of importance has occurred, and dealers report a slow movement at the moment. In vegetables, the pack of tomatoes it seems will be small as we have intimated. Offers by Western canneries are reported at 95c., but we do not hear of any business of importance.

FRUIT.

The prominent feature of the fruit market at the present moment is the activity of staple lines of dried foreign fruit, and we have to note a considerable business in raisins during the week at 8 to 8¼c., the entire lot of first arrival ex S. S. Circassian, some 3,500 half barrels having been sold at these figures. The market in consequence is very firm for spot goods, and it is unlikely that anything except a round lot would be turned over at the inside figure. In other lines there has been no very prominent feature. The first direct steamer, the Drocona, has been delayed at Patras, and will not leave Denia until the 16th, so that she is not expected to arrive before the middle of October. She has a consignment of currants which everyone is anxiously awaiting, as there is no stock on spot at all. It will cost 6½c. to lay the Drocona's consignment of currants down here, and prices are expected to open at 6c.; in fact bids of that figure to arrive have been made but have not resulted in anything. In staple lines of green fruit there is nothing special to mention. The only stock offering in first hands are Jamaica oranges, a few small lots of which are knocking about at $7.50 to $8.

SPANISH ONIONS.

The first consignment of this line in crates arrived ex Circassian, and is offering at $1.25 per crate, which is a comparitively high figure. The market is very firm on them under a good demand in New York, where 90c. has been freely offered.

APPLES.

As stated, summer apples continue a drag on the market, and this week we hear that more consignments are being sent to Boston in the hopes of a turn over there. So far no advices have been received of the first consignment, except in one instance where the sale of a small lot was wired at a range of $3.50 to $3.75 per barrel, the buyer in the case taking a selection, On spot the range is, as we have stated, wide, being $1.75 to $3.00, according to quality. With regard to winter growths they are being bought up rapidly in the west, according to all accounts, and recent news received here from the Goderich district is to the effect that Yankee buyers are offering all sorts of prices for anything that is offering. This bears out the information we have already given, that $2.25 to $2.50 per barrel had been paid for the fruit on the trees, while contracts have been made east of Toronto as high as $3. From England further advices indicate that expectations of a good enquiry are likely to be verified, and orders have been placed for a few round lots to go out by the first steamers of early fall varieties.

SPICES

The spice market, like other lines of groceries, is firm, and business is moving at good figures. Jamaica, ginger, Pimento and pepper are all firm and unchanged.

EGGS.

The egg market rules firm, and there has been a fair movement in progress since our last report at an advance of 1-2c. at 16 1-2 to 17c. Stocks, here, are not large and the demand continues.

HOPS.

The hop market has exhibited no specially new features during the week, and there does not seem to be any great desire on the part of consumers and brewers, here, to do business. However, if they are holding off for better terms we do not think they will get them, as growers seem confident of their own figures. Recent operations in the country have been on a 25c. basis, and it is understood that several yards in Ontario have been purchased somewhere around this by Montreal men, but no such bids have been made here. Such purchasers therefore must be in anticipation of equivolent offers, or of an outlet through exportation. Recent advices state that there are not many 1889 hops remaining, and that the crop of new is about the average. Advices from New York indicate a somewhat quieter feeling with a tendency to a conservative course of operations, so that a range of 25 to 27 1-2c., which we quote seems to be a fair one, and even then growers should remember that such offers are based on prospective business, therefore there is just as much a chance of there being reduced in the immediate future as advanced. Perhaps it would be as well to accept bids now made on the principle that the safe and sure course is the best.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market shows no material change, and the only movement is pork, which has met with a fair enquirey in a jobbing way. We quote: Canadian short cut pork, $17.50 to $18 per barrel; mess pork, western, per brl $16.50 to $17; short cut, western, per brl $17.00 to $17.50 ; hams, city cured, per lb 12 to 12½c.; hams, canvassed, per lb 12 1-2 to 13c.; lard, western, pails, per lb 9 to 9¼c.; lard, Canadian, in pails 8¼ to 8 1-2c.; lard, C. O. P., 10 1-2c.; bacon, per lb, 9 to 10c.; lard, com., refined, per lb, 7 1-2 to 7¾c.

BUTTER.

The market may be chaaacterized as a little "offish" at the moment. This is no doubt due to the fact that the enhanced figures now held out for by country holders has rather dampened the speculative spirit that was manifest a week or so ago. At any rate there is not such a desire shown to take hold as was exhibited then. Still in odd instances here and there we hear of further purchasing at long figures, but they are exceptional cases. One fact, however, is certain beyond doubt, and that is the factory view, and farmers will not let go now except at outside figures. This is just as we expected, and the question whether it is a wise course or not remains to be seen. Of late there has been some hunting around for choice township dairy and we hear that it is held for pretty long figures, which in one or two instances has been paid. The figure being over 17c., but this is not a fair general price. For creamery, we think 19 or 20c. fills the bill, although of course late made stock could not be moved on the basis, but this is certainly all that would be bid on spot at the moment.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

The flour and grain market continues quiet and there has been no alteration to the position outlined a week ago. Business is of moderate dimensions, in fact, outside of a small trade in Lower Canada, sales at 39 to 40c., there is nothing doing in grain, while in flour buyers generally seem to have well stocked up during the recent activity.

The stocks of flour in store on Saturday last shows an increase of 2,227 barrels compared with a week ago and a decrease of 20,883 barrels compared with a year ago. The stock of oatmeal is 10 barrels less than it was a week ago and 658 barrels less than at the same date last year.

The stocks of grain in store on Saturday last compared with those of a week ago, show a decrease of 22,720 bushels of wheat, 12,424 bushels of corn, 23,081 bushels of peas and 29,423 bushels of oats. Compared with the same time last year, there is a decrease of 257,976 bushels of wheat, 16,721 bushels of corn, 4,347 bushels of peas, 23,215 bushels of oats, 11,485 bushels of rye, and an increase of 1,299 bushels of barley.

CHEESE.

The market does not show any material change. There is a desire to do business in late made goods. Buyers figures have been too low to allow of any extensive operations in the country. On the whole, at the moment, we think that the market has a somewhat tired feeling which may be attributed to the persistent refusal of the English market to follow the advanced ideas here ; that is in an adequate manner ; and the fact that operators who have been indulging in speculative purchasing in the country, are of the opinion that they have enough cheese for the time being at least. The course of recent country markets uphold this view, and advices which have been already noted indicate that some operators are pursuing the usual tactics, of fancy bets here and there, in different country sections, with the idea of a "hold back', which will enable them to work off some of their present holdings. On spot we do not hear of much business, but 9 1-2c. seems to be the prevailing idea. We can cite no instance where it has been actually made, while to-day some claim that offers of the figure have been refused. On the whole the market has an indefinite tone.

LIMITED PRICES.

As human nature is the same all the world over, so are the vicissitudes of business and the obstacles and evils with which merchants have to contend in a great measure similar in all civilized countries. Therefore it would not be surprising to find retail grocers in Great Britain combatting the same trade evils which have aroused the hostility of the retail trade in this country, and seeking as eagerly as the latter for the most effective remedies. A perusal of our English exchanges from week to week convinces us that this is the case, and that such subjects as early closing, the competition of cutters and of big universal stores, etc., are attracting as much interest in the retail associations there as they have attracted here. It was not long ago that the subject of the cutting of prices on proprietary articles was brought up in one of the retailers' associations in this vicinity, and resulted in a resolution appealing to the wholesalers' associations to co-operate with the retailers in a demand that manufacturers should refuse to sell storekeepers who cut prices beyond a profitable limit. Other associations in this State have tackled the same subject, the steady encroachments of big dry goods stores upon the grocer's own field, by the sale of soaps, tea, coffee and proprietary articles having cut deeply into the profits of the latter and even threatened his very existence. Many remedies have been suggested, but so far nothing has been effected, and the cause of irritation still exists At a recent meeting of the Southamption, England, Grocers' Association an animated discussion took place on this same subject, and the speakers, with scarcely an exception, attacked the policy of masterly inactivity by which the manufacturers of proprietary articles have been governed, while the prices of their goods have been cut to an unprofitable level to the injury of the trade in general. It was also generally agreed that it was the duty of such manufacturers to protect their customers against loss by fixing the lowest limit at which their goods should be sold. It appears that there are in England, as in this country, a number of exceptions to the class of firms of whom the grocers complain, and that several well known houses have fixed a limited price on their goods, which has effectually stopped the cutting practices, but they are unfortunately in the minority, hence the necessity for some action being taken by the retail trade. One speaker at the Southampton meeting, after some animated remarks, concluded thus :

I may add, by past experience, many firms have done and are doing much to put an end to this reckless way of trading. I might cite the names of many firms who have most effectually stopped cutting. Gentlemen, we know it can be done, and the time has come when we must demand this reasonable support, and, if refused, let all the grocers unite together not to have any more transaction with such firms, for, I maintain, any house who will no raise their voice against the style of trading I have mentioned should be driven out of every town in the country. Let us not rest with folded arms any longer, but let us unitedly, as an association, do all in our power to crush the enemy in our midst, and in so doing we shall confer lasting good upon an important section of the trade of this country and this town, which has of late years resorted to so many shameful practices to get together a business. I am glad to hear that some of the associations in the country are uniting their efforts, and I hope and trust that the day is not far distant when all will be united in one strong band; then many of the most difficult questions of our day will be solved, and we shall not be fighting against each other, but all striving to promote the general interest of the trade, which will be for the benefit of the individual.

In the latter portion of the foregoing extract is revealed the solution of nearly every problem with which retail merchants in every country ever have had or ever will have to grapple. Price cutting, early closing, the collection of debts, the protection of the trade from dead beats, and nearly every difficulty or evil that has baffled the merchant class, all will be speedily removed or settled when once the trade becomes solidified into a strong association for mutual protection. Difficulties which now appear absolutely insurmountable to American merchants will dissolve like snow before the glowing beams of the sun, when every town and city in the United States has its merchants' organization, tributary to a State association, and the latter in turn to a national organization. It has been said that if the horse only knew his own strength and the weakness of man, the latter would be deprived of a very useful servant. It seems to us that the retailers of the United States resemble in one respect the noble animal, inasmuch as they appear to be unaware of the enormous power they possess when banded together for all laudable purposes.—Merchants' Review.

Every line of goods embodies a history and a science worth years of study to understand.

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday s yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Company:

GENTLEMEN,—I have taken and tested a sample of your "EXTRA GRANULATED" Sugar, and find that it yielded 99·88 per cent. of Pure Sugar It is practically as pure and good a Sugar as can be manufactured.

Yours truly,

G. P. GIRDWOOD.

THE BUSINESS TAX IN HAMILTON.

The business tax question was discussed on Thursday evening, the 4th inst., at a meeting of the Hamilton finance committee, specially called for the purpose. Two deputations attended—one representing the board of trade, in favor of exempting the merchants, personally, from taxation, and one from the freeholders' association, opposed to the proposition. The gentlemen from the board of trade were: President John Knox, George Roach, George E. Bristol, A. T. Wood, W. H. Gillard, W. A. Robinson, Alex. Turner, F. W. Fearman, Chester Fearman, and R. B. Skinner. Prominent among those from the freeholders' association were: M. Brennen, president; Thomas mitchell, E. Martin, Q. C., D. Kelly, C. W. Meakins, George F. Jelf, George M. Barton and Wm. Kavanagh. President Knox, in the course of his address, said that the present system of personal property taxation was unjust and unfair to the merchants, as they occupied the most valuable buidings and land in the city, and paid both rent and taxes. The merchants had no desire to evade their just share of the taxes, but the personalty tax was an iniquitous tax, and levying it was practically fining the mercantile community for doing business in Hamilton, and tended to drive them out of the city. Speeches in favor of the adoption of the business tax were also made by Messrs. George E. Bristol, vice-president of the board of trade; W. H. Gillard, George Roach, A. T. Wood and R. Skinner. In reply to a remark made by A. T. Wood, Ald. Copp said there was a great difference between the merchant and the manufacturer. The merchant could sell anything in his store, but the manufacturer had to invest his money to a great extent in unsalable property. If the manufacturers were to remove from Hamilton the prosperity of the city would be destroyed. E. Martin, Q.C., M. Brennan, Thomas Mitchell and George R. Jelfs acted as spokesmen for the freeholders' deputation, and opposed the business tax scheme as unjust to the rest of the community. After the debate ended and the deputations withdrew, the finance committee decided to obtain the city solicitor's opinion on the business.

SPECIAL TO OUR READERS.

As the design of THE CANADIAN GROCER is to benefit mutually all interested in the business, we would request all parties ordering goods or making purchases of any description from houses advertising with us to mention in their letter that such advertisement was noticed in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

A COMPREHENSIVE DEFINITION OF MESS PORK.

From the definition of mess-pork authorized by the Customs department last spring, that department deduced a corollary a few days ago, which excludes heavy clear pork from the class covered by that definition. This rider on a departmental decree was logical, because it was manifestly in pursuance of the original intent of the item in which was set down the duty on mess-pork. The rider was expedient as a means to give particular statement to a sense that could be got at without straining, but which would be the better of explicit wording. Because of the literal vagueness of the item in the tariff amendment, many American provision houses had been able to get in heavy clear pork as mess pork, and the Customs department felt it to be necessary to authorize a definite discrimination between mess-pork and heavy clear pork. The department's ruling made heavy clear dutiable at 3c. a pound, and not at 1½c. as mess pork is. Representatives of the lumbermen of the country and of Chicago pork-packers, however, protested against this ruling as soon as the acting head of the department returned from his vacation, and their protest before him and the Minister of Finance was successful in overthrowing the rule of the department, which had discriminated between mess pork and heavy clear pork. The petition of the lumbermen's and Chicago pork packers' delegation was granted, and heavy clear is now admissible at 1½c. per pound.

Thus has the government to a large extent undone the work of last session. That work left us in a position to begin with encouragement the culture of Canadian hogs on a large scale. This is the second concession made directly to Canadian lumbermen, but indirectly and with equal profit, to United States pork-producers, and the concessions have been made after a very firm beginning in the interests of native producers. The boneless western pork will come in as mess pork, but once here it will be sold as clear pork. Already American packers are opening up stores in this country from which they will sell long clear bacon, which they brought in as mess pork. And this is happening while the American Congress is enacting tariff legislation that is specially hostile to Canadian trade.

INCREASED COST OF TURKISH CABLES.

Importers of Sultana raisins and other dried fruit grown in Asia Minor, were recently puzzled for a few days to account for the non-responsiveness of their agents in that oriental quarter. Answers that were expected thence immediately upon receipt of important cable inquiries or advices were not forthcoming at all. Messrs. Bendelari & Co. of this city recently sent a despatch to a house in Smyrna, and received no reply, though one was awaited long after it was due. A second one was sent, to which a reply came, accounting for the silence that the first had not broken. The reason the second inquiry was answered, was that it had been worded in undisguised English. This, or any other national speech, is an unusual medium of cable communication in commercial circles. There is a system of cable parlance used by business men which is called the Code. One word in it will stand for a lengthy phrase, or for a group of particulars. An importer or exporter can find in it all the material he wants to word any commercial despatch. Secrecy is not more the object than is brevity. A man who is sending two or three cables a week would gladly make use of a cypher system if by it he could make one word stand for five words of his own language, particularly when every word used costs 49c. to be transmitted to Smyrna. It is easily seen that at least half the expense of cabling is saved by the use of the Code.

The reason that Messrs. Bendelari and other importers received no reply to cables sent a short time ago, is that the Code is prohibited by the Turkish government. The Code has long been under prohibition, but has nevertheless been successfully and continuously used up to the present. The regulation forbidding it was looked upon by Turkish operators as a dead letter. But the breath of life has lately been breathed into the letter. This may be a time when the Porte may be extra-abnormally suspicious of foreign intrigue, or it may be some new civil servant has taken high office in the telegraph department, and wishes to show his zeal. The latter as a way of accounting for the matter, is a way not unfamiliar to the people of this country. Whatever the cause, the Code is now disallowed, no messages veiled in its terms are delivered, and importers have to pay two or three times as much for cabling, as all cables have to be so much longer.

THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

The Exhibition passed the meridian of its success on Thursday. It is now on the wane, not through the decline of interest in it, but through the flux of its appointed time. On the whole, it has been a triumph, though over its first week's course bad weather shed almost disastrous eclipse. That, however, did not prevent the progress of the great show's development. The work of occupation and display went on, until at the end of the week, the outlines sketched by the management were fairly distended by the concrete assemblage of heterogeneous products. The exhibitors ably backed the management, in its enlightened endeavors to make the show a success, by the abundance, quality and variety of their contributions to it. Nor was the patronage behind-hand. The grounds were filled, from the time the exhibits were all placed, until the hour of going to press. The first week was a time of preparation. That fact always makes attendance numerically lower for that week. This year there was added to the effect of that circumstance, the untoward behavior of the weather, which threatened to extinguish the fair on the first Thursday. The average, however, has been pretty well preserved in the sum of the two weeks' attendance. We give below brief reference to some of the departments which have an interest for grocers.

HONEY.

The exhibit this year is notable for a great shrinkage from the amount shown last year, and usually shown in all years. This shrinkage is no consequence of a deficit in the year's yield, but is merely the effect of an Exhibition rule that is in operation this year for the first time. That rule has been imposed by the necessity for economy of space that is yearly becoming more restraining upon the committee's liberality. Each exhibitor was given very much less room than was assigned a year ago. Consequently, the total honey exhibit was smaller. It amounted to 20,000 pounds, a weight which was often surpassed by the products exhibited from a single apiary. But while the exhibit fell so far short of the quantity formerly to be seen at the Exhibition, it was more than up to any former honey display, in the opinion of bee men, ever seen in that building.

While the smallness of the exhibit signifies nothing as to the productiveness of the year's flow, yet it would not greatly mislead if it were taken as representative of that, too. For the yield is only from one-half to two-thirds of what it was last year. The flow was abundant in the earlier months of the gathering, but became quite stinted as the season advanced. There is but a short crop of inferior honey. The basswood bloom, which provides the chief nutriment for the secretion of the lower grades, although of fine promise was of short duration. In this respect it was like the rich apple bloom, which came to so little. The bees fed this year mostly on clover and thistle blossoms, which yield the best of honey, but which cover only a part of the honey-gathering season. Prices, therefore, are likely to be good ; the great scarcity of low grades, the very considerable shortage in the whole crop, and the poor yield of fruit, all operating to make honey rather sure of a good market.

Among the appliances for extracting honey, though a multifarious assortment of them was shown, there was little to be seen that was not exhibited last year. The solar wax extractor, the invention originated or elaborated by Mr. Alpaugh, of St. Thomas, was the most novel thing to be seen. Another, of special interest to the grocer, is a section crate, furnished with the usual glass front, but, in addition, with a wooden slide like that of a match-box, which permits a section to be removed for sale very conveniently. The prizes were numerous. The number of competitors in any section did not exceed nine.

BUTTER.

The foreigner who would take his opinion of our national butter-making from the picture presented now in the dairy department of the Exhibition, would be certain to be highly prepossessed in favor of the handiwork of our countrywomen. The contrast between the scene now at the Exhibition and that which may be beheld in the month of April within the warehouse of any produce commission dealer in this city, is staggering, inexplicable. It is a contrast which should have its lessons for the country merchant. Of the two spectacles—that of the dairy exhibit, and that of the spring market —which has the country merchant contributed the more towards bringing to its visible condition ? It is a great pity that exhibit, so grateful to the senses of smell and sight, were not more truly representative of the domestic butter-making of this country.

DAIRY UTENSILS.

If the appearance of the butter in the dairy department is itself a deceptive laudatory offering to the excellence of our butter-making, the various mechanical devices for making and preserving butter good are equally flattering to the interest, supposed to be wide-spread in this country, in the cause of good butter. We should make good butter, it may be supposed, if we use the apparatus that we have developed or introduced. One of the most scientific mechanisms for the dairy is exhibited by the representative of a Glasgow firm. It is a cream separator. In it, centrifugal action is employed to separate the lighter particles of cream from the heavier volume of liquid in which they are suspended. The very high rate of velocity with which this machine causes the milk to revolve, is a rapid and sure means of separation, the light element—the cream—being whirled together in the centre, the heavy—the skim-milk—being whirled to the outside of the vortex. A channel for the reception of the cream, which ends like the issue of the spiral groove in a screw, carries it off into a vessel placed to receive it. The cream is thus taken from purely new milk, and is ready to churn in its freshness, before it has been tainted, as it must be, in the long course of stagnation considered necessary by the old way to raise cream.

Various kinds of churns, all embodying some principle that is of merit in the economy of butter-making; numberless packages, for keeping, storing and shipping butter; refrigerators, grocers' pails, etc., are exhibited. The mechanical contrivances do not seem to be wanting to the maker of butter. The skill, care and handling now need improving if the general quality of our butter is to reach the high standard exemplified in the quality shown. Cheese boxes and cheese presses are also to be seen in many degrees of size and quality.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

Potatoes, onions, carrots, beets, cabbage, cauliflowers, etc., make a very good show this year. Whatever the sum total of the yield may be, it is evident the country does not lack specimens of superior growth. The general expectation seems to be in favor of very good crops in these vegetables. The North West Territories' contribution to the department indicated was large, typical and of excellent sample.

GRAINS, ETC.

From the agricultural hall is wafted an aroma pleasing to the nasal sense and to the patriotic instinct. A more bounteous offering of first fruits this country has not made for many years in that building which is consecrated to the service of Ceres. In this exhibit lies the earnest of a better financial order of things. The value of the grain that is in the country should be felt in increased buoyancy throughout our whole social system. The grain exhibit bodes well.

WINES, LIQUORS, ETC.

The products of Canadian breweries and distilleries were as full and varied as usual. Manitoba ciders, porters, ales, stouts; Pelee Island wines, etc., were very attractively displayed. The barley, hop and grape crops are all very good this year.

TOBACCO.

A very instructive object lesson in tobacco may be learnt by the spectator who cares to go through specimens in all the stages from the crude to manufactured product, for all are to be seen in the main building.

SALT.

Table salt, in linen, paper and glass packages ; coarse salt in barrels, sacks and bags; salt of all kinds and for all purposes was tastefully exhibited.

SPICE MACHINES.

Coffee cleaners, crushers and spice crackers are there for the investigation of the grocer. Details, illustrations and prices can be learnt on the spot.

THE TRINIDAD EXHIBIT.

The Trinidad exhibit is made up chiefly of articles that would be sold in this country by the grocery trade. A line of steamships, subsidized by the Canadian government, now makes a link between the trade of that British island and this country, so that it is not improbable a considerable demand for Trinidad products may take root in this country. Among the articles exhibited are : dried bananas, guava jelly, banana cake, dried pineapples, pineapple jam, mammu apple jam, various grades of honey, varieties of pickles of Trinidad vegetables, Brazil mountain cabbage, hot sauces, Trinidad relish, (for roasts, etc.) cocoanuts, molasses, sugars, rice, white rum, sauce, nutmeg, coffee beans, crude cocoa, refined cocoa, cocoanut meal, etc. The exhibit is a very interesting one, and gives a hint of the lines that will be apt to be the next new ones introduced to the public through the grocery trade of this country.

THE SPANISH AND CUBAN EXHIBIT.

Other products for which overtures have lately been made to open a market in this country were illustrated by the exhibit of the Spanish Vice-Consulate. The lines shown were wines, cigars, pickles, cork and chocolate.

BISCUITS.

Christie, Brown & Co., had their usual full display of crackers, etc., which they made a popular feature of the main building by their gifts of samples.

VINEGARS.

The Badgerow-Falconer Company had a very fine exhibit of vinegars and syrup. It was large and very tastefully displayed. The whole case of bottled stock presented in this exhibit was bought by Mr. J. Butcher, the Queen St. grocer. The Badgerow-Falconer firm has a trade that extends into the United States, 100 cases of their syrup and 25 cases of their malt vinegar having been shipped a few days ago to a Buffalo customer.

BAKING POWDER.

The Cook's Friend is on hand again this year. That baking powder appears to be always adding to the big constituency of consumers it has long been a standard with.

FILING CABINETS.

A prominent feature of the grand display of the Office Specialty Manufacturing Co., 118 Bay street, at the Exhibition, was the big Shannon Filing Cabinet made expressly for Eby Blain & Co. wholesale grocers of this city. The largest letter and bill filing cabinet yet made in Canada for any one firm. 108 Files—with labels classifying and distributing one years business of that firm. The contents are subsequently transferred to books or binding cases for future ready reference. Every grocer should have one of these cabinets.

PICKETT'S EUREKA COFFEE CLEANER, STONER AND GRADER.

This machine, manufactured by W. I. Brotherton & Co., Bay City, Mich., is one of immense value to large dealers in coffee. Through an ingenious combination of draft and gravity it accurately cleans and grades coffee of any description, such as Jamaica, San Domingo, Savanilla, Hayti, etc., at one run through, not only removing chaff and ordinary dirt, but all stones and other foreign matter, at the same time carrying the perfect beans to one box, the smaller imperfect ones to another and very small and broken beans to a third ; in other words thoroughly cleaning and perfectly grading the coffee ready for market. It has a capacity of 2,000 lbs or more per hour, requiring little power. The same firm manufactures the Watrous Spice cracker, which greatly simplifies and lessens the work of preparing spices for grinding, and its makers claim will save its cost to even small spice manufacturers in a short time. The Canadian patents for both machines are for sale. Full particulars may be obtained from the manufacturers.

THE UNITED STATES CUSTOMS TARIFF.

To each item of the following list of Canadian products are appended the customs rates that were levied under the old and that are to be levied under the new United States tariff respectively. The new tariff will be in force after the first of October, unless the time of grace to United States importers is further extended by some arrangement not at present likely to be effected. There is also a shadow of contingency in the possible refusal of the House of Representatives to acquiesce in the changes introduced by the Senate after the Bill left the former chamber, but the possibility is one that may be practically ignored. So far as the action of the lower house is concerned, the Bill may be considered passed.

THE SUGAR SITUATION.

The course of the sugar market during the past six weeks and the present position of the world's supply afford a fresh illustration of the "unexpected" coming to pass, and a good many are now inquiring why it is so, and what has become of the sugar. The largest crop of beet sugar ever produced on the continent of Europe has disappeared with surprising rapidity, and the world's supply of cane sugar is likewise at a very low point, and as a consequence prices have been steadily advancing under the legitimate influences of supply and demand. The position is in striking contrast with that of a year ago, when a speculative deal in Europe attempted to buy up and corner the available supply, and, while it succeeded in temporarily raising prices to a much higher level than has been reached this year, the end was disastrous to a large majority of those who took part in the deal. A very different state of affairs, however, has existed this season, for, without the aid of speculation, the actual requirements of consumption have so far used up the available supply of the world that there is at present an absolute scarcity, which is likely to be still more marked before new crop supplies come upon the market. Eight months ago there was no indication that prices would reach their present level, because attention was fixed upon the enormous beet crop that was being produced in Europe, but large as that crop has proved to be, reaching the unprecedented total of 3,630,000 tons, it is now apparent that sufficient allowance was not made for the increasing demands of consumption. There was still another feature of the situation last winter that did not receive sufficient attention, and that was, that the invisible supply of the world had been very closely absorbed, furthermore that the world's production of cane sugar in 1888-89 was smaller than for three preceding years. As a consequence the outlet was larger and a larger crop of beet sugar disappeared with much greater facility than would have been the case under normal conditions. The extent to which the requirements of consumption have drawn supplies from unexpected sources is shown by the fact, that during the past season the continent of Europe exported to India over 100,000 tons of refined, which is entirely a new market for continental refiners, while American refiners exported of their product since January 1st to date nearly 16,000 tons against only 221 tons the year previous, the bulk of which was absorbed by Great Britain. The present condition of the world's visibie supply—and it is generally admitted that there is nothing hidden away and out of sight—shows that apparent consumption last year was very much larger than estimated, and that the surplus margin now available is none too large to supply absolute wants until the new crops are ready for market. Under these circumstances the prospects of the next crop are of peculiar interest. There has been a large increase in the acrage of beet sowed this year in Europe, but thus far the weather has been so unfavorable on account of a preponderance of rain and moisture, that the latest tests show a material falling off in the weight and saccharine value of the beets, and hence the yield of sugar will be relatively much smaller. No definite estimates have been ventured yet, but M. Licht estimates that the crop will not exceed that of last year. The cane crop prospects, however, are much more hopeful than in 1889, the Louisiana crop, which will be the first to effect this country, promises to be unusually large, and while it is early yet to foreshadow with any definiteness the outlook in the West Indies, the progress thus far has been far more favorable than last year. The total production of 1890-91, promises, therefore, to be larger than last year, but against this must be placed the probabilities of increased consumption, which in this country will be stimulated by contemplated changes in the tariff.—N.Y. Shipping List.

The retail liquor dealers of Toronto are up in arms against the brewers and distillers. The dealers have formed an association, of which nearly every shopkeeper in the city is a member. By-laws and rules are being prepared for adoption. One of their complaints is that the brewers supply small customers direct, and thus deprive them of the trade for which they pay a heavy license to enjoy. A meeting was held in Shaftesbury hall the other night, but owing to the absence of the president very little business was transacted.

Secretary Wills, of the Board of Trade, has received a letter from Messrs. Dubois & Bouilla, commission agents of Guatemala, offering to effect sales of articles manufactured in Canada in that country, and offering to place before Canadian consumers the agricultural products of Guatemala.

Mr. Harry Langelier, of Winnipeg, passed through Toronto for Montreal Monday week. Harry is one of the best travelling men in the far west, well known and well liked. His many friends will be pleased to hear of him having done what he terms a land office business this fall.

A man named Duncan MacFarlane, of Alvinston, who has been managing Paul Weidman's store at Glencoe, had been stealing money from the firm for a couple of years past. He was caught in the act, gave a mortgage of $400 on a farm he possessed, and left shortly afterwards for Detroit.

One of the most respectable and solvent business men of Brantford has received a circular inviting him to correspond with a certain man with a view of purchasing $25,000 worth of United States bogus notes for $1,000. The address to which he was to telegraph was Morris J. Gandy, New Oxford, Adams Co., Pennsylvania.

One of the pleasures we have is seeing where and how the retail supplies are made. Last week our representative was shown through the factory of J. McLauchlin & Sons, Owen Sound. They now have one of the most complete biscuit and candy factories for its size in our country. Mr. McLauchlin takes a pleasure in showing visiting trade men his place.

Joseph R. Cherrier died last week in St. Joseph's hospital, Hamilton. Mr. Cherrier was some time ago one of the most prosperous and well-known of Hamilton's grocers. For many years he was a member of the firm of Cherrier Brothers, Market square, and afterward carried on business on his own account. He was a prominent member of St. Mary's Roman Catholic congregation. He was in his 65th year.

John A. Craig, aged 37 years, one of the best known commercial travellers and a highly regarded citizen of London, died Saturday morning of typhoid fever, after a few days' illness. He was a Presbyterian and a prominent Sunday school worker. He was a Mason and Oddfellow, and also belonged to the Royal Arcanum. He was born in London, and leaves two girls, aged 8 and 5, his wife having died five years ago.

Fire was discovered early on Saturday morning in W. O'Connor & Co's tea and coffee store in Hearn's block, St. George's square, Guelph. The proprietor lives over the store, and the family escaped through the skylight of the roof with only their night clothes on. The flames were confined to the one store, but not an article was saved. The loss on the stock, fixtures and furniture is about $4,000; insurance on building, $500.

A man giving the name of John McDonald went into Tuckett's tobacco factory, Hamilton, and asked to see Mr. Tuckett, whom he professed to know. As Mr. Tuckett was not in the visitor said he would wait, and the clerks went on working as usual. But on looking up a few minutes later Mr. Lamoreaux, the bookkeeper, saw McDonald slipping out with a caddy of tobacco under his arm. The fellow saw he was observed, and ran, but Lamoreaux caught him, and he was locked up to answer for his shortcoming. He was sent to gaol for a month.

Efforts are being made by the business men of Madoc for a closer connection with the C. P. railway, and by close connections with all passenger trains night and day at Ivanhoe station on that road by a cheap bus line. The Ivanhoe station is only a few miles south and connected by a first-class gravel road. A letter has been received by Mr. Wood in reply to the application, and it will in all probability be carried out. Express, mails, passengers and light freight can then be delivered by that line twice a day.

Mrs. A. E. Irvine, of London, tobacconist, assigned on the 4th inst., to Mr. E. Weld, barrister, for the benefit of her creditors. The Division court bailiff having seized under an execution prior to the assignment, and having refused to withdraw from the premises in favor of the assignee, the store was locked up during the following Saturday. Later, an injunction against the bailiff was obtained by the assignee, restraining the bailiff from any interference with the assignee in the performance of his duties, and the business is now being carried on again.

A recent order of the treasury department at Washington is likely to have a harassing effect upon those who import or ship goods through the United States in bond. The order is that all goods bonded for Canada must be corded and sealed. When a package reaches the United States frontier the customs officials place a cord around each package and affix a customs seal thereon, making a charge of ten cents per package The order is of a vexatious character, but if persisted in will stop importations via New York and the shipment of goods from Ontario to British Columbia by the Northern Pacific route.

BY WM. H. MAHER.

CHAPTER I.

Although I was not twenty years old when I made my first trip on the road as a salesman, I had been at work for eight years, and was, in many things, as mature as most young men of twenty-five. Part of those eight years was spent as a boy in a Connecticut factory, but during five or six of them I worked in the factory office. At nineteen I followed Greeley's advice and "went west," securing a position as book-keeper in a wholesale hardware store. Everything about the stock and the way of doing business was new to me, except such tools as we had formerly bought as supplies in the eastern factory; tools used by machinists and carpenters, and everything that came under the head of mill supplies. In these items I had a better understanding of the goods than had clerks of much longer experience, but in farm tools, builders' hardware, tinners' and blacksmiths' tools and stock, I was very green. But I posted myself as well as I could, when I was able to be away from the books, and I began to be ambitious to be a salesman, and to go "on the road."

I was determined to better my condition, and to get into such grooves as would one day take me out of the ranks of clerks, and give me a place in the firm. In the East advancement had seemed surest by way of the office, in the West everything seemed to depend on a man's ability to sell goods and hold his trade. I was not long in the house when I observed that the traveling men seemed to be the real managers. They were consulted upon every purchase; they were advised with as to credits, and they seemed to go in and out as their own sweet will suggested. As I became acquainted with other houses on the street, I also noticed that when a clerk was taken into partnership, it was not the book-keeper, nor the stock clerk, nor the house salesman, but it almost invariably was the traveling salesman. Seeing and noting these things I concluded that I would be a "drummer."

But, after settling this to my satisfaction, there remained a harder task before me, and that was to persuade the firm to send me out on a trip. The senior was not a very enthusiastic man. You might sit beside him and work yourself into a white heat of excitement as you went over your plans or your purposes, but he would come out of the campaign just as cool as he went in. With him business was dollars and cents as well. I fidgeted over my books quite a while before I was able to open the subject, but finally I broke the ice:

"Mr. H., I believe I could sell goods on the road; I wish you would let me make a trip this spring."

He did not look up, but said in a dry way:

"What makes you think so?"

"I feel it in me."

"Are you sure it isn't colic?"

I had no answer to make to such a question as that, and I kept still.

We scratched away at our books in silence for several minutes, and then he turned to me :

"You have never sold any goods, have you ?"

"No, sir."

"You haven't been around the stock much since you came here ?"

"Yes, sir ; whenever I could be out of the office."

"And yet you think you could go out on the road and make a profitable trip, do you ?"

"I think I could."

"Well, I don't see why you should think so."

"I am pretty confident," said I, "that I can sell goods, and am willing to go out and try it. The expense of being out a couple of weeks will not be much, and if I find I am not doing well I can come home."

He seemed struck with this view of the matter and with my earnestness, but did not decide the question then.

The junior partner was an entirely different kind of a man. He was ready to take chances in anything, and if you went about it right you could talk him into agreeing with you upon any project promising profit in about fifteen minutes. I went to him and won him over to my side, and then waited for some sign from the senior. In a few days it came.

"Supposing we let you make a trip, when do you want to go ?"

"Next Monday morning," I answered.

"Are the books in shape ?" he asked.

"They will be then."

"I have been talking the matter over with Mr. G., and we have decided to let you go out on the C. & T. Road. You can try it for a week, and if you do at all fairly you may finish the trip. If you find it is not paying expenses, come home on Saturday night."

"Give me some idea of the amount I ought to sell to pay expenses."

"If you sell $100 a day you may keep on ; if you fall very much short of that, you had better come home."

"How much do the other boys average ?" I asked.

"Peter's sales run about $900 a week ; Chris sells from $1,000 to $1,200. We are well satisfied with $150 a day."

I immediately made up my mind that I would sell $1,000 a week or else I would stick to book-keeping.

Our business was shelf hardware, nails and glass. We made a specialty of cutlery, because it was profitable. The firm had not been in business many years, and had some heavy houses to compete with. The road I was to take was the hardest one to sell goods on leading from the city. Whether it is the case to-day or not I do not know, but at that time it was always very hard to sell goods eastward from any given western city. The roads leading from city to north, south or west brought trade to you, but the road going east always carried trade to the eastern city.

One hundred miles east of us was a city three times as large as ours, and on the road I was going the merchants naturally turned to this city for their goods. I was to be tested on the hardest route, but I did not mind it so much as I would have done had I known more about it. Then it was reasoned that, as I was a new man, I might as well take in a number of towns where we had never sold any goods up to this time.

I bought a blank book, had it indexed, and then began to post up for my journey. I commenced at one corner of the store and kept right on down that side, then around until I came to the place I started from. I opened a package of every article I came to; had the boys explain to me what it was for, if I did not know ; entered the name in my book under the proper letter, put down the different sizes or numbers if there were any, over each size writing the cost, and under it the selling price, being assisted by the head salesman.

In this way my book gave me a complete inventory of our stock and what it cost. As to the selling mark, there was not much reliance to be placed upon it. I told the senior I would like some instructions on this point.

"There is little to be said," he replied ; "the only instruction we give is to get all you can. When you must sell low, why, sell low; and when you can get a big profit, get it. You must feel around and see about what your man has been paying and govern yourself accordingly."

That was a satisfactory way so far as I was concerned, and I was turning away satisfied, when he called me back again.

"Have the boys been telling you the points to watch closely ?"

"No, sir."

"They ought to have done it. In our business there are a great many different qualities of the same goods. Now if you quote a price for a leading brand and your customer has been buying a poorer and cheaper article, you will have trouble, unless you are able to explain and convince him of the difference in the goods. For instance, a man here to-day wanted some German-silver spoons ; I quoted them at $30 a gross for tables ; he said he bought of our neighbors for $27. Now, we keep none but Hall & Elton's, and they are 10 per cent. higher and better than any other brand. I explained the difference to him, gave him my experience with other spoons, and sold him. Points like this will constantly come up, and you must be ready for them. As you haven't any experience to fall back upon, you must draw upon your imagination."

I supposed this was the end of the lesson, but he began again.

"When you go into a store and have told your story, the chances are the man will want to test your prices, and will ask your figures on certain articles. In these circumstances you want to quote low prices, because he will ask you about things on which he is posted. On the route you are going some goods are sold very cheap, and you had better quote leading articles very low to every hardware man, but when you come to cutlery and notions stick it on ; he will never know the difference."

This time I was allowed to go, but my ideas were a little mixed. I was to draw on my imagination for experience, to quote leading articles low, and "stick it on" cutlery and notions. When I sat down to think it over, I was like the boy who "wanted to go home." I was not at all sure but that I would have done much better to have stood by my desk. But I had gone too far to turn back, so I sat down and wrote to the men on the route whose names were on our books, saying that I would be at their place in a few days, and hoped they would find it convenient to give me an order for goods.

When this was done I went out to see the sample trunks, and when Saturday night came I was ready to be off on my travels bright and early Monday morning. As I left the store the stock clerk called out : "Here's a story of a traveling man, that I want you to read ; you will find it profitable for correction, reproof and instruction." It had been written by a well known wholesale dealer of our city, and under the circumstances had peculiar interest for me. Here it is, worn and torn, but it has slept in my price-book for years.

OUR NEW TRAVELING MAN.

His name was Smith : John Smith. I am aware that when I say this I throw some doubts upon the truth of my sketch, but I beg the candid business reader to remember that the only John Smith who ever figured in fiction was the one who held his place in the business world because an Indian maiden endorsed his papers, and probably furnished collaterals to help him along. Since then John Smith has been dropped by novel writers, and is only allowed to appear in print when the most matter-of-fact incidents are related.

Mr. John Smith was a real, flesh and blood individual, and he appeared in the counting room one morning asking for a situation. I looked him over from head to foot, and he looked at me. I have no doubt his opinion of me would be more entertaining reading than would be mine of him. I said to myself, if his tongue is smooth enough to tell a good story, his face will be a sufficient introduction. His cheeks were rosy, as if he was just off the farm ; the whole impression one gained of him was that he was an innocent, honest, good-natured big boy. And yet, if with that appearance in his favor he was shrewd and cute enough to get big profits, what a jewel of a traveling man he would be !

"Yes," said I, "we want a traveling man. Have you ever sold goods on the road ?"

"No, sir; I have been in a retail store down in the centre of the State, but am anxious to get into a wholesale establishment."

"You would like to travel, eh ?"

"Yes, sir."

"What makes you think you could sell goods on the road ?"

"Well, we want a man to go over the new roads just opening in the North," said I, "and, if you want to take hold, we will give you a chance."

"What salary do you give ?"

"We will give you what you are worth, and the more that is, the better we will be pleased. You will have to stay a few months in the house to become familiar with the goods, and during that time we will let you draw enough to pay your actual expenses ; after you have made a trip, we will then agree upon your salary."

John was satisfied, and in a few days came to work for us. Perhaps the first of his excellences that I noticed was that he was a very artistic whistler. At certain intervals the whole house would echo his music, and if I took the trouble to look out into the packing room, I would be certain to see Smith stretched on the ledge and whistling to the rest of the clerks and the porter, they standing in a semicircle around him. I concluded to give him free rein, for I saw that this whistling might be turned to good account in the country. As well whistle an order out of a man as tease it out of him, always providing the profits were good.

Then it struck me John was extremely careful of his person ; that is, his habits of personal cleanliness were extraordinarily well developed. Our business was selling hardware (and I admit at once that it is not the branch of trade for a delicate, sensitive nature), and Smith undoubtedly had his nerves painfully irritated a great many times in the day ; that is, in plain English, he was obliged to soil his hands.

Think of a person of refinement being compelled to lift, and weigh, a bladder of putty ! Or to handle an oily, sooty chain ! It must be torture, and torture of no mean degree. When you look at this in the proper light, you will see why so many young men are forced behind the counter of the dry goods stores.

At any rate, Smith was compelled to wash his hands every ten minutes of the day, and when he wasn't washing his hands and whistling he was blacking his boots. I had no fault to find with this. I sympathized with him. If I had been a little less busy I would occasionally have blacked my own boots ; not because I wanted to copy after John, but every man, and especially every business man, ought to black his boots once in a while. It is a duty he owes to society. Then, again, John's elegant boots would attract attention in the country, and you must get a man's attention before you can sell him. See ?

When he had been three months in the store, he told me he was fully posted about the stock and wanted to know when he should go on the road. I said he might go whenever he had his price-book ready, and towards the end of the week it was arranged that he should start next Monday morning.

Saturday morning I called him into the office, and gave him such advice as the manager of the house can properly lay before one of his clerks. Of course I was careful to treat him with that distinguished consideration that his position entitled him to ; he had consented to represent our house over the Long Valley R. R., but I was not to presume on that.

I told him he had been in the store long enough to see about what profits we expected, and that it was the profit that we were working for, not glory. At the same time I suggested that as he was carrying our name into a new field, a great deal would depend on first impressions, and it might be advisable to quote some goods pretty low, in order to gain a foot-hold.

His manner of receiving the advice convinced me that no natural timidity would stand between him and success. During all the time I was talking he picked his teeth with a quill tooth-pick, only removing it at such times as was necessary to suck air through his teeth. "He's cool," said I to my partner ; "he'll do."

The next Monday morning John came in to get some money to pay traveling expenses, and then he shook hands with everybody and started off. I may have had some misgivings as I saw him pass out at the door, but my fears were for his clothes, not for him. His coat was a new broadcloth, made specially for the occasion. His trousers were of some light cloth, very delicate in color. His vest was a fine white Marseilles, and his kid gloves were verging on lavender. Add to this a heavy gold watch chain—I won't vouch for its being solid—and you might well suppose that he was putting himself in danger. But when I remembered how careful he was of his hands and his boots, I took courage again.

A day passed away and the mail carrier failed to bring us a letter from John. That was all right, though it would probably crowd the boys when we did hear from him.

Another day, another, and another flew by, and still there was nothing from John. I got out of patience with him for holding his orders so long, but didn't know where to write or telegraph him.

At last we heard from him. If he did not send the big bunch of orders we expected, he gave a good reason for it. Here is the letter ; I keep it in a certain pigeon-hole of my desk to show my traveling men occasionally.

GENTLEMEN :—Send Root & Co., York Centre, 3 kegs 8d. nails, $3.15 ; 2 kegs 10d. nails, $2.90. Terms, 90 days. I could have sold more goods if prices had been right, but as it was I left quotations and the parties promised to send in orders. I think I can eventually build up a big trade on this road. Please send my washing to Blue Lick, where I will be next Wednesday.

Respectfully yours, JOHN SMITH.

I sent John a letter at Blue Lick, a short one : "Come home at once ;" and then I bought a ticket to a good town on the road where he had been. There was a retailer at that point who had bought goods of us, and I wanted to ask him a question or two. He was a jolly old German, and just the man to give me the information I wanted.

After we had chatted a minute or two on other topics, I came to my errand.

"Mr. Villhauer, my agent was here a week ago, wasn't he ?"

"No ; no azhent from you."

"Why, yes ; a tall, nice-looking young man, name of Smith."

"Schmidt ! Creat shiminy, was dat your azhent ? Schmidt ! Ha, ha, I laughs till mine goat tears my pack. Schmidt ! Yaw Schmidt was here. Pig fellow ; tall as a liperty bole ; pooty face ; shiny poots ; glothes yust in de topmost style ; und tigles his teeth midt a fedder. Yaw ; Schmidt was here."

"Why didn't you give him an order ?" I asked, though feeling a little queer.

"Gif him ordher ! Creat Peter, he tid not wish it. He says, 'Meester Villhauer, you want no goods to-day ?' and I say, gareless, 'No, I guessh not.' Den he say, "All righ-et,' und pegin to fissle."

"To what ?"

"To fissle ; screech mit a hole in his mout, you understan ?"

"Oh ! Whistle."

"Yaw, fissle ; und I tink he take de roof off mine house. Den he onquire have I any shoe-plack , und when I say 'No,' he say dis is tam pooty town ; don't got no shoe-plack in the tavern, nor in the shtores ; und he dake out his hand'chief and wipe his boots. Foo ! I could not shtan' it longer any times, und I shout like plazes. Maype, he dells you I not dreat him polite ? Eh ? No ? Ha, ha ; if I tied to-morrow I should laugh at dat cuss."

I went home a wiser man. When John came in I informed him we had concluded to let that road go, and consequently would have no further need of him. He reminded me that I was to pay his expenses while he was learning the business, and said he owed some bills around town for board, washing, etc., amounting to eighty dollars. I gave him that amount, and five dollars more to take him home, and I have not seen him since.

When the books were posted, I found he had drawn something like three hundred dollars for his three months' "necessary expenses," and that fact restored my self-respect. I am satisfied that the fault was in his clothes, not him, for would any one but a very smart man expend three hundred dollars in three months in necessary expenses ?

TORONTO, September 18, 1890.

GROCERIES.

The week has been one of strong activity in wholesale grocery circles. The number of Exhibition visitors who combined trade with sight seeing was large, and the velocity of the current demand was about as great as that of the week before. Sugars and teas were leading commodities in the trade that was done. Canned goods partook to a less extent in the activity of the demand. Payments were good.

CANNED GOODS.

There has been a fair inquiry for all lines. Prices of canned tomatoes are well maintained, packers being still strong, the impression that they will have a shorter pack being still a controlling influence in the prices asked. Values are higher as the following comparison of buying prices, September 1 to 15 since 1884 at Hamilton, will show: 1884, 25c.; 1885, 30c.; 1886, 45c.; 1887, 50c.; 1888, 35c.; 1889, 40c. 1890, 70c.

Jobbers who have sold to arrive at $1.10 have withdrawn quotations. Corn remains at $1 to $1.10; peas at $1.05 to $1.15; apples and pears, nominal; peaches, 3's. offered at $3.25 to $3.50, and blue and Lombard plums at $1.90 for 2's. Salmon, irregular, at $1.30 to $1.60. These are some green gages in stock, which are selling at $1.75 to $1.85.

A sale of 800 cases new canned tomatoes was reported to have been made by Black Bros., St. David's on Friday last to a Hamilton house. The price was not known.

Boulter instructed his Toronto broker to advance new canned tomatoes to $1.05 f. o. b. Picton, which would be equal to about $1.10 here.

COFFEES.

The prices of coffee are very firm, but there is not a particularly strong demand in this market. The higher prices of low grade teas are partial causes of the strength in the coffee market. The primary cause is a shortage in the supply.

DRIED FRUIT.

Most wholesale houses were able to fill orders for new Valencia raisins last Friday morning. The arrival of the first shipment is usually a cause of considerable stir among the wholesalers, a matter of keen rivaly being which firm is to get its stock first. Messrs. J. W. Lang & Co., won the race this year. Valencias are now pretty steady at 7¾ to 8½c. New currants are expected to be in in a fortnight. Vostizza cases are 6½c., and Patros in cases are 6c. These easier prices are a consequence of the approach of the supplies of new fruit. Prunes and figs show a prospective market of undoubted strength. Writing from Bordeaux, September 1, E. M. Dadelszen says: "French plums are such a small crop that business will be very difficult and small. Prices of prunes are being so forced up by New York that business is dangerous. This is why I have made no offers. I have large open orders but find it difficult to get goods enough."

NUTS.

Prices here are at the mark indicated last week, with the exception of Marbot walnuts, which have gone up to 13½c. In the foreign markets filberts have gone up 1s., and Tarragona almonds advanced 6d.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is in moderatively active demand, but the state of the demand here is not the ruling circumstance in the prices. These so far are unchanged, but there are strong indications that they will soon be advanced. They are now very firm, prices having gone up at the sources of supply. Spices are unchanged.

SUGAR.

The sugar market has maintained the strength gained two weeks ago. Prices are unchanged and buying is active. Bright yellows are scarce and firm. The trade is stimulated considerably by the ripening of the plum crop. The orders are chiefly for small lots, the retail trade rather mistrusting the stability of present prices. The favorable report of the beet crop, as estimated by M. Licht tends to encourage the expectation of ultimate weakness in the market.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their weekly circular say: Raws advanced 3-16c. Refined advanced ¼c. and declined ⅛c. Refiners have not caught up in deliveries with their recent large sales, and the condition of the supplies of raw sugar is not such as for them to wish to stimulate the demand for refined. Nothing checks refined buyers quicker than a reduction in price, with cause or without, and the present reduction may prove somewhat fictitiously based. Certain it is that any decline in raws is without foundation in ruling conditions and must prove only temporary. Total stocks are further reduced 11,871 tons this week, and with the tariff bill removed from the market for the rest of this year, by its not taking effect until March, 1891, the normal condition of the sugar trade will not be interrupted. The limited conditions of the raw sugar supply markets, taken altogether, are certainly without precedent and may have a marked effect a little later if not judiciously managed. The market should be closely watched. Total stocks in all the principal countries 521,404 tons, against 615,157 tons last week and 483,722 tons last year.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are firmer, with a fair demand and light supply. Refiners sold on Monday at ¼c. advance on previous sales Molasses is in active demand especially on local account, barrels going at 36 to 40c. for West Indian, as to quality.

TEA.

The commodity of leading interest in the grocery trade is at present tea. Japan tea of low grade quality is very scarce. There was too much indifference shown in the early part of the season, as the market had abounded in low grades of good value for a considerable time. But prices were rising while our old stock was being rapidly depleted. Consignments on the way to this market were diverted to New York. Growers are going out of low grade production very fast. That is one reason for the high prices. Another reason is, that since the passage of the United States Silver Bill, which directs 450,000 ounces of the world's supply of silver every month into the national treasury, the relief which this gives to the silver market starts the price up, and the Asiatic countries, whose currency is entirely silver, have consequently to pay more for the material of their coin and in return must get higher prices for their products, the chief of which is tea. Congou tea has gone up also, partly as a direct effect of the advance in Japans, which advance threw a great part of the demand on Congous. Stocks are being rapidly reduced. Prices of all low grades are firm at 16 to 20c. for Japans, 12½ to 17c. for blacks and 17 to 20c. for Young Hysons. A few new Hysons are being shown, but the prices are about 6c. higher than the same grades of old and buyers won't touch them. Shipments of Congou tea from China to London will be 28,000,000 pounds short, while the shipments of Indian and Ceylon tea will be increased 12,000,000 pounds.

Indian teas have been active and a considerable amount of business has been done. From London we learn that new arrivals continue to show improving quality, hence more tone has been given to the market. All grades have met with good competition, and wherever specially attractive liquors can be met with, advances are readily paid. Teas for price are fully a farthing above last weeks rates and are keenly competed for. Ceylons showed improved amination, and prices all round have improved. Broken Pekoes with quality are a penny to two pence dearer, and all the lower grades show an advance of full a half penny.

PETROLEUM.

Prices remain at last week's quotation. The price of crude petroleum went up on Monday a half cent, but so far this has not been followed by any advance on refined.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

The business done throughout the week was a fairly good one, and was on a basis of prices stable at last week's quotations.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

It is a difficult matter to find sale for low and medium grade butter, which is the main constituent of the stock now on this market. For fine dairy tub butter there is as usual a good demand and a very good price. Good dairy tub butter is 14 to 16c,, medium dairy tub is 10 to 12c., and store packed is 10 to 13c. Creamery tubs bring 19 to 21c. Creamery pound rolls are 21 to 23. Dairy pound rolls are 17 to 20c. Local consumption, owing to the great crowds attending the Exhibition, was large. Cheese is worth 9¼ to 9¾c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Remain at $1.75 to $2. The small stock makes it impossible for business to be large, and the high prices further deter buying.

DRIED APPLES—Are firm at 8 to 8½c. The uncommon firmness at this season indicates a situation all in favor of the holders.

EGGS—Are unchanged at 16 to 17c. The supply is light.

HAY—New timothy is worth $9.50 to $10.

HIDES—No. 1 green are 7c., and No. 2 are 6c. A carload of cured sold on Monday at 8c.

HONEY—Is 9 to 12c. rendered, and 14 to 18c. in sections.

HOPS—Stock of the '88 crop is selling yet at 8 to 10c., and there is a considerable remnant of that crop. Hopsof '89 growth are firm at 15 to 18c., and are far from plentiful. This year's hops are selling at 25 to 40c., but the market for them has not yet become settled.

OATS—Bring 45c. in car lots. Arrivals are rather short.

POTATOES—Carsare nominal at 60 to 65c. on track. Out of store lots bring 75 to 50c. per bag.

POULTRY—Chickens are 50to 60c. Ducks are 60 to 75c.

SKINS—Sheep are unchanged at 80c.

TALLOW—Rough is 2c. and rendered is 5½c.

WOOL—Is 21 to 23c. with little changing hands.

FISH.

The principal feature in the fish market is the scarcity of all classes. British Columbia salmon is especially scarce, for a local fish dealer has only received 100 lbs. within the last three weeks. The prices for nearly all have advanced. They run as follows : Trout 7 to 7½c., white 7 to 8c., British Columbia salmon 15c., lake herring $2 per hundred, pickerel 5c., black bass 9c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade has been very listless since the opening of the Exhibition. There is a scarcity of stock and an indifference in the demand that work together to bring the market into a very inactive condition. Jamaica oranges, now the only kind to be had, are $7 to $7.50. Rodi lemons, also all of their class, are $7 to $8. New Messinas will be in next week. The banana trade is also dull, holders aiming to get rid of their stock, as the season will soon close. Prices are from 85c. to $1.25.

PROVISIONS.

Trade has been up to the point of activity that has marked it for the past several weeks. Smoked meats are still in strong demand, and hams are becoming scarce.

BACON—Long clear is 8 to 8¾c. Backs are 10½ to 11c. Bellies are 10½ to 11c. Rolls are 9½ to 10c.

DRESSED HOGS—Are coming in very slowly. They are worth $6.50 to $6.75.

HAMS—Are firm at 13c. for smoked, and 11c. for sweet pickled.

LARD—Is 9¼ to 10c.

MESS PORK—Is $15.50 to $16.50.

DRY GOODS.

The week has been a satisfactory one to the city wholesalers, who report a strong run of orders through both their road staff and the calls of retailers visiting the Exhibition. There has been no change in prices.

SALT.

Salt is in fair request at present. Prices still keep firm and unchanged. The sales transacted by the Toronto salt works for this week are: 2 cars coarse salt at 70c., 1 car bbls. at $1.40; 1 car dairy $1.25, smaller lots sell at $1.50 to $1.55 for bbls.; 80 to 85c. for sacks, and 50 to 55c. for ¼ sacks.

MONTREAL

MONTREAL MARKETS.

SEPT. 18, 1890.

GROCERIES.

The activity noted in this line last week has been continued, and if the movement has been less it is solely due to the fact that buyers are waiting for goods to arrive, there having been a good clearance in several leading lines of stocks offering on spot This applies more especially to dried foreign fruit, all of the first arrivals having been disposed of, while in teas, coffees, spices, etc., supplies have been all brought down pretty low. In brief the week has been quite an active one.

SUGAR.

The market for raw sugar has continued active during the week, and further transactions of round lots have occurred in addition to the business noted last week, while a further advance of ⅛c. has been established and the market has been almost cleared of stock at 5¼ to 5⅜c. for bright grocery Muscavados. Of course refiners act in accordance, and granulated on which we noted an advance last week is firmly held at outside figures, 6¾c.

SUGAR, SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are very strong and lots of American which were offering a while ago at 46½c. are now held firm at 50c. Canadian syrups are in light supply and holders are independant. The molasses market has had quite a turn during the week owing to the fact that a Boston firm had representatives on the market and picked up a round lot involving 1,500 puncheons at a fraction over 34c. Our stocks were just about sufficient, and this sale will no doubt make them a little short so that firm prices are looked for as high as 40c. being spoken of.

TEA.

The tea market has been quite active, and quite a brisk movement of Japans at from 15 to 20c. has been effected during the week. Stocking up is being done in earnest in this as in other lines, while the prospect of higher figures ere long is an added incentive. Stocks here are now in very few hands, and instructions to agents here are to stipulate for an advance of 1 to 1½c.

SPICES.

There has been a good demand for various lines of spices during the week, cloves especially moving very freely at 13 to 14c. some good round lots being taken at these figures. Black pepper has also been in good demand at 11¾ to 12c, and nutmeg at 60 to 70c.

RICE.

The rice market shows no change. The mills are not making any new contracts at old prices owing to the difficulty in securing supplies. New contracts would have to be at a full ½c. advance, but a fair destributive movement is noted at old figures, $2.70 for common, $4.10 to $4.25 for Japan, and $5.50 for Patna.

CANNED GOODS.

This market has experienced no change since our last, and with the exception of a fair jobbing movement we have nothing to note. Report from the Maritime Provinces report an exceptionally large catch of sardines, in the Bay of Funday, but none are offering here yet. Mackrel are offering at $4.50 to $5.

FRUIT.

The volume of actual movement may have been smaller during the week, but there has been a very large business for forward delivery in staple lines of dried fruit mainly raisins. All the stock that was on the market ten days ago has been cleared off and as the Sardinian did not have any consignment attention has been drawn to the direct steamers, and lots to arrive have been actively competed for, and several lots have been turned over several times already on the basis of 6c. On spot what little fruit there is would not be parted with except at 7½c. to 8c., and consequently is practically off the market. In other lines there was no change and very little business reported except some transactions to arrive at 5⅞c. to 6c. There is practically no stock offering on spot. In green fruit there is nothing to note except the usual business in basket stuff, a good movement of grapes being noted at 2½c. to 5c. per lb.

APPLES.

Early varieties of apples continue to drag along, and the large offerings here are subject to a very slow movement so that the market is still in a congested state. Prices rule unchanged with a considerable variance according to quality at $1.50 to $3.00. In winter varieties there is nothing new to add, and since the orders that we quoted a week or so ago there has been nothing new. Advices from the country state that purchasing continues, but spot prices are difficult to fix as yet. However if the cost in the country is any criterion they will have to open here somewhere between $4 and $5 to make any money, but all figures at the present time are pure conjecture.

DRIED APPLES.

There is a marked scarcity of dried apples here and elsewhere at leading centres at the present time, while some dealers report enquiries with none offering. The idea is 8c. per lb.

EGGS.

The egg market during the week has ruled rather easier under larger receipts, and a somewhat quiet demand. The movement in consequence has been rather restricted, and prices rule lower at 15½ to 16½c. per dozen.

HOPS.

The position at the moment is more or less problematical, and as we stated last week, perhaps it would be as well for country holders to accept good bids made now than to hold on in the expectation of much better. The first arrival of new crop 1890's open to local bids has been received on spot, comprising a dozen bales, which will be followed by more next week, but there does not seem to be any great anxiety on the part of buyers to secure supplies. However, the stock is held for firm figures, growers stipulating for the best figures in every instance. Advices from New York are of the same tenor as a week ago, only that the situation is more complicated. The stringency of the money market and other temporary causes are being used by dealers to force more advantageous terms, while in Europe everything is seized upon which will enable purchasers to obtain new crop goods at a lower level. As regards values here, they are nominal in the absence of business, but it would take 25c. at least to move any of the stock on spot, but we do not hear of any bids.

BUTTER.

The market remains about the same and the jobbing enquirey noted continues, while we hear that purchasing has been done in the country, in isolated cases, at outside figures. For creamery 21c. is asked, and it is obtainable for selected lots, while eastern townships dairy is moving in the same manner at 18c. Business, however, outside of occasional buying in the country, is restricted to the jobbing movement, but the feeling is seady. We quote :—

Late made creamery	20 to 21
Summer makes	17 to 18
Finest townships	17 to 18
Western dairy	14 to 14½

CHEESE.

There is nothing new to add regarding the cheese market and the dull feeling noted towards the close of the week continues under the indifference shown by the English buyers, who was willing to talk business at about 9½c., but when figures went over it put on the brakes. This describes the market at present, and it is a dull one with prices more or less nominal : in fact there is nothing on which to base figures. In the country the situation is unchanged, but there must be considerable cheese in factorymen's hands at the moment. From the Townships advices are that the bulk of the August make is untouched as the factorymen have been holding out for 9¼c. and over for the whole month, which figure they made only in occasional instances. They are apparently getting anxious, however, for their make is not the kind to sit on and enquiries as to bids are numerous. On the whole the market continues indefinite and unsettled. We quote : Late made Augusts, 9½ to 9⅝c.; Early Augusts, 8⅞ to 9c.; Finest Julys, 8⅜ to 8⅝ ; Mediums, 8c.; Cable, 4c.

DAIRY SHIPMENTS.

The shipments of cheese for the week were, 43,191 boxes of which 18,803 were through shipments from Ontario. The butter shipments for the week comprised 1,724 boxes, all of which were on local accounts. For the corresponding period last year the shipments were 1,674 butter and 28,731 cheese.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

The flour market continues quiet and unchanged and during the week there has been no particular movement to note except in a small jobbing way. There is some scarcity of fresh ground Ontario flours, but first arrivals are on the market this week and straight rollers can be had at $4.90 to $5.00, while patent spring wheat brands are firm at $6.00 for strong bakers and $6.30 for patent spring.

In grain there has been nothing of importance, in fact the market is utterly without feature. The only change has been in oats which under a somewhat better movement and lighter supply have been marked up slightly to 41 to 42c. for Lower Canada and 42 to 43c. for Upper Canada.

The stock of flour in store here shows a decrease of 1,371 barrels compared with a week ago, and 15,830 barrels compared with the same date last year. The stock of oatmeal is 92 barrels less than it was a week ago, and 725 less than at the corresponding date last year.

The stocks of grain in store show an increase of 58,011 bushels of wheat, 1006 bushels corn, 24,772 bushels of peas, and a decrease of 7,443 bushels of oats, 6,033 bushels of barley, and 284 bushels of rye compared with a week ago, and a decrease of 197,572 bushels of wheat, 13,256 bushels of corn, 18,095 bushels of peas, 12,860 bushels of oats, 4,427 bushels of barley and 11,769 bushels of rye compared with the corresponding date last year.

PROVISIONS.

Provisions show no change, and beyond a small jobbing business in pork and lard there is nothing of importance to note. We quote: —Canadian short cut, per brl, $17.50 to $18; mess pork, western, per brl, $16.50 to $17; short cut, western, per brl, $17 to $17.50; hams, city cured, per lb, 12c to 12½c; hams, canvassed. per lb, 12½c to 13c; lard, western, pails, per lb, 9c to 9¼c; lard, Canadian, in pails, 8¼c to 8½c; lard, C. O. P., 10½c; bacon, per lb, 9c to 10c; lard, com., refined, per lb, 7½c to 7¾c.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday s yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

THE BUTTER AND MARGARINE TRADES.

Butter, more than anything else in the provision trade, is essentially a fluctuating artical. When the business developed so largely and so many men went into it there was scarcely a dealer in Montreal, where the trade principally centered, who did not suffer. There have already this year been some tremendous losses in the butter trade both here and in America. The chief reason is that butter is so perishable that if a man overbuys and is left with it on his hands it goes bad before he knows where he is. The American butter trade commenced about the time of the Crimean war, when the scarcity of provisions prompted our Yankee friends to make the endeavour, which has proved so very successful, of establishing a provision market in this country. They found that they could not only get rid of their product, but they could also secure good prices for it. The chief supply of butter to this country at the present time comes from France and Denmark, although large quantities also come from Holland, Norway, Sweden, and Russia, and more recently from Australia and New Zealand.—Liverpool Courier.

No wonder grocers are vexed at the multiplicity of questions asked them by customers whose purchases are not commensurate with the expectations their interrogatories excite. Evidently the Globe man knew this when he penned these lines :—"Have you any eggs?" the girl asked, as she entered the grocery. "Yes," answered the grocer. "Are they nice?" "Yes." "And fresh?" "Yes, nice and fresh." "How long ago were they laid?" "About a few days ago." "What size are they; are they large?" "Oh, medium." "Are they hen's eggs?" "Certainly." "And they're not limed eggs?" "No." "Because I don't want any poor eggs." "Oh, they're all right." "Where did they come from—are they Cape Cod eggs?" "Yes." "How much are they a dozen?" "Twenty-five cents." "And they're nice and fresh, you say?" "Yes." "Give me one." But even in this case the grocer can't afford to show temper. Here is a case where Horace Greeley's statement that "a man may as well say d—n as to feel d—n" doesn't apply. Oh! no! Take the egg, wrap it up carefully, deposit it in the customer's hands with all the grace of a Chesterfield and with a "Thank you, marm" that would have done credit even to Sir Sidney Smith.—New England Grocer.

SPECIAL TO OUR READERS.

As the design of THE CANADIAN GROCER is to benefit mutually all interested in the business, we would request all parties ordering goods or making purchases of any description from houses advertising with us to mention in their letter that such advertisement was noticed in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

DOMINION WHOLESALE GROCERS' GUILD.

The annual meeting of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild was held on the 10th and 11th inst. in the city of Quebec. Although the seventh of that association's yearly conventions, it was the first of them to meet in the ancient capital. It was an important meeting, a sift of its proceedings showing the following material improvements to have been inaugurated by it: a contraction of the time of credit; a restriction of the price of graded sugars to that determined by the open market; the establishing of a rule making the price for immediate shipment that holding on the day the order is received, and the price of a future delivery that holding on the day of shipment; the adoption of the New York system of preparing freights on graded sugars; the eliminating from canners' contracts of the clause contemplating a short pack, etc.; a provision for the suspension or expulsion of defaulting members; a regulation to bring the methods of travellers into accord with the principles of the Guild; an order for the compilation of a list of articles which are sold subject to limited prices. It was a meeting also made notable by the courteous care on the part of resident members of the Guild, that the visitors should have a pleasant time of it, and by the most felicitous previous and current arrangements that result was happily realized. It was the most successful meeting the Guild ever had.

The following is the muster-roll of the delegates, who gathered in the Board of Trade rooms on the 10th inst:

MONTREAL— Geo. Childs, Chas. P. Hebert, D. T. Tees, H. Laporte, A. D. Turner L. I. Boivin, Geo. Hadrill.

TORONTO — W. Ince, Hugh Blain, J. Sloan.

HAMILTON—J. J. Stuart, Geo. E. Bristol, T. H. D. Macpherson.

LONDON—N. Masuret, J. Cleghorn.

BRANTFORD—Geo. Watt.

BROCKVILLE—T. Gilmour.

QUEBEC—R. Turner, T. LeDroit, C. Pitt, R. J. Bazin, N. Tuscotte, C. A. Langlois, Thos. Davidson (John Ross & Co.).

LEVIS—G. Carrier.

The Secretary, Mr. Edgar A. Wills, was also present.

THE 10TH.

The delegates assembled at 10.30, were briefly addressed by the President, received and passed the minutes of last meeting, and continued in session till one o'clock. In the afternoon they met again at 3 o'clock, and sat till 6.30.

The following business was transacted:

TERMS OF CREDIT.

Moved by Mr. Blain, seconded by Mr. Hebert, and resolved: That the four months' goods be changed to three months, and sixty days' goods be changed to one month, and that twelve per cent. per annum be allowed for cash payment of unexpired time, and that these changes shall apply only to territory west of Three Rivers and Sherbrooke.—Carried unanimously.

SUGARS BY SAMPLE.

Moved by Mr. Blain, seconded by Mr. Sloan, and resolved: That no member of the Guild shall be allowed to offer sugars by samples until after they have been purchased from the refiner; a practice injurious to the legitimate wholesale grocer.—Carried.

PREPAYMENT OF FREIGHTS.

Moved by Mr. T. H. D. Macpherson, seconded by Mr. Geo. Watt, and resolved: That the practice of prepaying freights or allowing differences in freights on all general goods except combination goods be discontinued.—Carried.

CONTRACTS FOR CANNED GOODS ACCORDING TO PACK.

After some remarks by Mr. Bristol it was moved by Mr. G. E. Bristol, seconded by Mr. D. T. Tees, and resolved: That the clause in contracts fixing delivery of any goods subject to short pack or any other considerations which are in favor of the canner or manufacturer should be abolished, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Canned Goods Association.

RE GUILD REGULATIONS.

Moved by Mr. H. Blain, seconded by Mr. C. P. Hebert, and resolved: That any member of the Guild having violated the rules of the Association governing prices or terms be suspended or expelled from the Association, and in either case shall be deprived of all privileges of the Association during the term of such suspension or expulsion. Carried.

NOTICE OF MOTION RE TRAVELLERS.

Moved by R. A. Turner, seconded by T. H. D. Macpherson, and resolved: That the Dominion Guild prepare for distribution a list of all articles which are sold under combination prices. Carried.

Moved by Mr. N. Masuret, seconded by Mr. Geo. Watt, and resolved: That the next annual meeting of the Guild shall be held in September, 1891, in the City of London. Carried.

In the evening the committees appointed during the day met at the St. Louis Hotel where they were engaged till a late hour with the questions referred to them.

THE 11TH.

YELLOW SUGARS.

Report presented by the chairman, Mr. Chas. P. Hebert.

QUEBEC, Sept. 11th, 1890.

To the President and Members of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, in annual meeting assembled.

GENTLEMEN:—Your Committee to whom was relegated the consideration of the motion made by Messrs. Blain & Stuart and the amendment thereto, by Messrs. Hebert and Richard Turner, having reference to the fixing of a minimum price for the sale of the lowest grade of yellow sugar, begs to report, that, after long and careful consideration, they have arrived at the following unanimous conclusion, and your committee beg to advise that the sugar agreement be amended by the addition of the following :

All yellow sugars shall be sold at ⅜ cent advance on refiners' prices at all places west of and including Three Rivers, Richmond and Sherbrooke.

The same terms and conditions for the sale of yellow sugars to apply as on graded sugars. A minimum price to be fixed based on the lowest grade, weekly, or oftener if deemed necessary by the Guild committee in Montreal.

CHAS. P. HEBERT, Chairman.

Moved by C. P. Hebert, seconded by H. Blain, and resolved : That the above report be accepted and its recommendations adopted.—Carried.

QUEBEC, Sept. 11th, 1890.

To the President and Members of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, in annual meeting assembled.

GENTLEMEN :—Your committee to whom was referred the draft of sugar agreement proposed by the Montreal Association ; the recommendation of the Montreal Association that the Dominion Guild adopt the New York plan of prepaying or allowing freight on branded sugars to all points ; notice of motion given at last annual meeting for the sale of graded sugars, at open current prices; and the recommendation of the Montreal Association that on shipments of sugar from Montreal to points west of (but not including) Kingston and east of Toronto, five days extra time may be allowed ; begs to report as follows :—That in the opinion of your committee the advantages that would accrue from the five days extra time would hardly compensate for the complications which the proposed change would involve ; that your committee has carefully considered the notice of motion and would recommend its adoption amended as follows : That all graded sugars for immediate shipment shall be sold at open current prices, the invoice price to be that ruling on the day on which the order is received by the house ; that sales made for future delivery shall be invoiced at the price ruling on the day of shipment, and no part of said sale shall be dated later than first delivery thereof ; that your committee, after examination of the New York system of prepaying or allowing freights on graded sugars has decided to recommend its adoption by the Dominion Guild ; that the draft sugar agreement is approved with the amendments herein recommended, and such others as (being under consideration by the meeting) may be adopted by it.

The whole respectfully submitted,

GEO. CHILDS,
Chairman.

Moved by Mr. Childs, seconded by Mr. Blain, That the above report be accepted and its recommendations adopted. Carried.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Mr. W. Ince, Toronto, was re-elected president by acclamation.

Mr. Geo. Childs, Montreal, declined the nomination to the vice-presidency, and Mr. C. P. Hebert of the same city was elected unanimously.

THANKS.

Mr. Blain moved, and Mr. Tees seconded the motion, that the thanks of the Guild be tendered to the Quebec Wholesale Grocers' Guild for the cordial reception and considerate attention shown the visiting delegates. —Carried unanimously.

The vote was acknowledged in fitting terms by Mr. R. Turner, the president of the Quebec Guild.

Mr. McPherson, seconded by Mr. A. D. Turner, moved a vote of thanks to the Quebec Board of Trade for its kindness in putting its rooms at the service of the Guild. —Carried.

Mr. R. Turner, who is also president of the Quebec Board of Trade, answered for the pleasure it afforded that body to open its doors to the delegates.

It was moved by Mr. Blain, seconded by Mr. Cleghorn, that the Guild signify its thanks to Mr. Geo. Childs, its retiring vice-president, for his valuable and efficient services to the wholesale grocery trade of the Dominion during the past seven years.

The vote was carried with acclamations. Mr. Childs' reply was a very happily worded short speech.

A vote of thanks was proposed and unanimously tendered to Mr. Edgar A. Wills, the esteemed secretary of the Guild. Mr. Wills made a suitable reply.

THE PILGRIMAGE.

For the time-honored social rite, the eating of a dinner together, the Quebec Guild substituted a far more enjoyable diversion, without giving up the prandial advantages of the old way. They invited the delegates to a trip on the afternoon of the 11th to St. Anne de Beaupré. That invitation was enthusiastically accepted. A fine boat, a good band, delightful weather and lovely scenery gave a setting to the excellent spirits of the party that, with those, will make the "pilgrimage" one of the pleasant indelible recollections of all who took part in it. A recherché luncheon was served on the boat. Besides the delegates and their entertainers of the Quebec Guild, there was a considerable contingent of the leading retail grocers of Quebec, and their ladies with them. The whole party visited the shrine of Ste. Anne's, famous now as the resort of so large an annual exodus of pilgrims from all parts of the lower St. Lawrence basin. The beautiful gardens of the fathers were also seen and admired. After having a thoroughly good time at Ste. Anne's, the excursionists embarked at 5 o'clock for Quebec, and had a charming return trip. On the way up, the gentlemen of the party assembled in the cabin and graced the occasion with a little seasonable oratory. Mr. Turner, the President of the Quebec Guild, was moved to the chair, and Mr. Le Droit to the vice-chair. The usual loyal toasts were drunk with the usual enthusiasm The toast to the Dominion Parliament was responded to by Hon. C. A. P. Pelletier, Senator for Charlevoix and Mr. F. Langelier, M.P., who each made a good patriotic speech. For the provincial legislature Mr. Chas. Fitzpatriek, M.P.P., for Quebec county, replied in one of the finest utterances of the evening. Mr. Fremont, Mayor of Quebec, also made a good speech.

The health of the Dominion Guild was coupled with the names of Messrs. Ince and Hebert, who made well-received acknowledgments. A point brought out in all the speeches, and of which ample illustration was afforded by the occasion, was the usefulness of the Guild as an affiliator in personal friendliness and social intercourse of the members of the wholesale grocery trade of the country, who seven years ago exercised more of mutual repulsion than of attraction, and from whose ranks it would have been impossible to make a draft for so harmonious a gathering as the present one.

The party got in at 8 o'clock in the evening, at the very best hour to get an outside view of Quebec in the glory of its lamps. That sight was a very notable feature in the pleasures of the trip. Nowhere on this continent is there any spectacle that so approximates to that extravagant figure of gorgeousness, "a mountain of diamonds," as does the old city illuminated, beheld amid sufficient darkness from a point a few miles down the river.

TO AND FRO.

The Toronto and Hamilton men as usual, with the assistance of London and Brantford friends, had an exceptionally good time on the journey to Quebec and home again. Contributors to that good time all were, but the tedium of the road was kept pretty well out of the experience of the party by the spirits of Messrs. Sloan of Toronto and Watt of Brantford, to whom everybody was accordingly more or less indebted. The Hamilton men too worked as a team, and Mr. Masuret was far from at his worst.

THE TORONTO WHOLESALE GROCERS' GUILD.

The Toronto Wholesale Grocers' Guild met on Friday night. It sat from 8 to 11 p. m. Seventeen members were present. The president occupied the chair. The report of the delegates to the annual meeting of the Dominion Guild was read and adopted. The proposed woodenware agreement, prepared by the the manufacturers, was submitted and approved with little amendment. It now awaits the acceptance by the manufacturers of the amendments that were made. The starch agreement, also proposed by the manufacturers, was approved, and is now circulating for the signatures of members.

SUGAR BEET CULTURE.

A meeting of farmers was held at Cobourg the other day to consider the question of growing sugar beets in order to supply a factory that will be erected in that vicinity provided sufficient encouragement be given. James Russell occupied the chair and reported the offer made by the company to erect buildings for the manufacture of sugar, said buildings to have a capacity for using from 125 to 150 tons of beets per day during the season, the beets to be delivered at the factory for from $4 to $5 per ton, according to quality. The subject was fully discussed and offers were received to supply from five to twenty acres each if satisfactory arrangements can be made. The chairman was requested to correspond with the promoters of the scheme and request them to attend a meeting to be called in the near future. A committee was appointed to canvas that section of country and ascertain how many acres can be guaranteed for the use of the factory.

THE MIS-NAMED MESS PORK.

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER,

YARMOUTH, N. S., Sept. 4, 1890.

DEAR SIR,—Enclosed please find P. O. order for $2 to renew subscription for year ending August, 1891. We are highly pleased with your paper, and find much useful information in it. Your articles on tariff questions and mercantile associations are very interesting, although we cannot agree with you on some points, particularly on pork duties. The tariff distinctly states that pork from sides of heavy hogs, hams and shoulders cut off, sixteen pieces to the bbl. of 200 lbs., must pay one-and-a-half cents per lb. duty, and we passed an entry for this class of pork very recently at these rates. But if we understand your article on "Evaded Pork Tariff," in the issue of Aug. 29th, we are guilty of fraud, which we cannot acknowledge. As the larger portion of hog products consumed in the western counties of Nova Scotia is imported from the United States, the present tariff bears heavily on our fisher and lumber men, as well as the laboring classes generally. Trusting you can withdraw your broad accusations of fraud, and wishing you every success,

We are, yours respectfully,

GODFREY BROS.

[We have taken the liberty of printing the above letter, as its contents are of general interest. No one would accuse Godfrey Bros. of fraud. They do not say whether the pork they imported was clear or had the bone in. If clear it should have paid 3c. per lb. However, it is not dealers such as the Godfrey Bros. that we accuse of passing short clear pork as mess pork, but the lumbermen and large wholesale dealers. It is a fact that certain lumbermen have imported short clear bacon or mess pork, to all intents and purposes for their lumber trade, but have sold it to the retail trade. The recent ruling of the Acting Minister of Customs, however, would seem to permit them to do this.—ED. GROCER.]

EXHIBITION ECHOES.

The latest specialties for grocers and general merchants to handle at a good profit are those of T. A. Snider, of the Preserve Company, Cincinnati, Ohio. These are tomato catsup, chili sauce, and tomato soup. Their exhibit, and the crowded aisle where they exhibited at the Exhibition, are sufficient proof to show those merchants who chanced to see it, that their goods must have a good sale from this out. Samples of these goods were given to the visitors. In every case words of praise were heard, many saying they would not go to the bother of doing down tomatoes when they could be had so cheap and of such quality. The soup will bear special mention. A three pound tin suffices for five or eight persons, the tin only requiring to be put in a little boiling water, and it is ready for use. This, probably, was the greatest attraction, although the tomato catsup and chili sauce stood the test of thousands who partook of it. The soup is put up in cases of two dozen each. Tomato catsup is in pints and half-pints, in cases of two dozen each. Chili sauce is in pints and half-pints. The pints one dozen in a case, and the half-pints two dozen. Mr. Kirk L. Perry is the agent for Ontario, being well known to the grocery trade. His place of business at 29 Colborne st., Toronto, will be sure to stop many an enquiry.from the merchants as to prices and orders for goods.

TO EXTRICATE OURSELVES.

—A most observing and able writer—"Observer" in Retail Grocers' Advocate—New England Grocer.

We are pleased at the comment of our distinguished and abler contemporary. Thanks, "Observer's" notes have been widely copied in almost all the trade journals of this country. Occasionally we find some of them wrongly credited. This has happened in the last edition of the New England Grocer. The article "When a Retailer is a Failure," credited to THE CANADIAN GROCER, was an original "Observer Note" published in the Advocate. We know it is no fault of friend Johnson, who always gives honor to whom honor is due.—Retail Grocers' Advocate.

And we beg our esteemed contemporary to believe that it was no fault of its friend THE CANADIAN GROCER, who will always be pleased to quote in moderation, but never to appropriate, what is specially pertinent or felicitous in the columns of its trade exchanges. We had never laid claim to the article mistakenly attributed to us by the New England Grocer; therefore we have a right to be acquitted, along with Brother Johnson, of any fault in this matter. As the matter is left in the foregoing paragraph from the Advocate, it would seem that the original responsibility for the whole trouble lay at our door, as if we had reprinted "Observer's" article without crediting it, and thus misled the New England Grocer into thinking it ours. But we did not so wrong the Advocate. The article "When a Retailer is a Failure" was never printed in our paper. Our name was coupled with it plainly by a confusion, which befell in the office of New England Grocer. We can join with the latter paper in its tribute to "Observer," but we must humbly protest that the exoneration vouchsafed to Brother Johnson should have included us.

EGG DEALERS MEET.

A meeting of the Egg Dealers' Association was held in Toronto last week, when a number of the principal dealers from various parts of the province were present. Mr. D. D. Wilson, Seaforth, who had made an experimental shipment of a car of eggs to England, reported that he had lost money on the experiment. The English were prejudiced against Canadian eggs. They felt that having come from such a far away place they must necessarily be stale. He showed them that the eggs were as good as the best French eggs on their market (which bring the highest prices), and were larger in size. Even then he had hard work to sell his car in broken lots in London, Liverpool, Dundee, Edinburgh and Glasgow.

FOR THE ATTENTION OF SHIPPERS.

Mr. John Earls, Grand Trunk district general freight agent, has sent out the following important notice especially for barley shippers:

I am desired to inform you that the McKinley administration Act is now in operation which provides in brief that all merchandise imported into the United States for consumption is held to be the property of the person to whom the same is consigned, but the holder of any B. L. signed and endorsed by the consignor may be considered the owner. For shipments of the value of $50 and over a consular invoice will be necessary; in addition to the invoice of value for the purpose of making entry of merchandise at frontier points a certified copy of the B. L. will be necessary, and the same should be endorsed in favor of the customs agent or broker, who will pass the entry at the frontier port. The duplicate B. L. must be endorsed "duplicate or negotiable."

Mr. J. R. Sherwin general merchant, Gore's Landing, gave us a pleasant call the other afternoon.

Mr. John Cameron, merchant, Durham, was among the visitors that came on the tide of the Exhibition to this office.

Mr. B. Smith, grocer, London, dropped in to see us during his sojourn to the Fair. He says trade is very good in his city.

The grocers of Hamilton think of forming themselves into a retail grocers' association for mutual protection and advantage.

Mr. J. J. Nairn, of the Aylmer Canning Co.., has left for Ohio, where they have made a large contract for peaches. He goes to arrange for shipping them to the factory in Aylmer.

Mr. G. Hector Clemes, representing the CANADIAN GROCER AND GENERAL STOREKEEPER, is again in town on one of his periodical visits. His line of travel embraces Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific.—Port Arthur Sentinel.

Parties claiming to be well posted on conditions in Demerara estimate that this year's crop of sugar will fall 30,000 tons below that of last year. This falling off is ascribed to the same cause as the Trinidad falling off—namely, the very heavy rains.

Mr. F. Krugg, Tavistoek, says they have had excellent crops in his district this year, and the outlook for business is good. He is in a good locality. The farmers are all well to do, and consequently he does a trade of which any city store might be proud.

A. F. Rose, a Petrolea grocer, started out with a load of goods to deliver, and, before getting very far, complained of feeling sick. He got off the waggon, and just as he entered the door of his store he dropped, and upon examination he was found to be dead.

The Brandon Times says :—" Mr. W. Young, lately clerk for Mr. Whitelaw, and a gentleman from London, Ont., intend opening out in the grocery business in the stand at present occupied by Mr. A. C. Fraser. They expect to be ready for business by Oct. 1st.

Turner, MacKeand & Coy's. popular traveller, Mr. Cecil R. Dixon, is in the city visiting his folks. Mr. Dixon has been west for thirteen years, and thinks Toronto as lively as an American city. The wholesale grocers that he represents at Winnipeg may well be proud of him.

Mr. W. Messer, of Bluevale, and Mr. J. H. Thomson, of Henfryn, outside friends, while at the Exhibition dropped into our office to renew their subscriptions to THE GROCER. They are delighted with THE GROCER, and read it with more interest than any other paper they subscribe for.

On Monday we were pleased to receive a call from Mr. Hugh C. McLean, of Toronto, Canada, and who is connected with THE CANADIAN GROCER. He states that several years of poor crops have made trade in the Dominion very dull, and that with better crops this year, the prospect of the situation is improving.—American Grocer.

Mr. James F. Smyth, the well-known traveller for E. Adams & Co., wholesale grocers, London, Ont., is leaving that city for Windsor, where he is taking a partnership in the house of Smith & Duck. At a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Western Ontario Travellers' Association an address was presented to him, together with a handsome silver water pitcher suitably inscribed.

McMahon, Broadfield & Co., for many years among the foremost business houses of Hamilton, Ont., are about to remove to this city. The warehouse into which they will move their large stock of china and glassware, is situated on the north side of Front street, two doors east of Bay. Mr. Broadfield is about to start for England, France, Italy and other great china countries, to fill their place with the best assortment the world affords.

Mr Hugh C. McLean, Secretary and Treasurer of J. B. McLean & Co., limited, publishers of THE CANADIAN GROCER and several other trade papers, was in town on Wednesday and gave us an opportunity to make his acquaintance, which we eagerly grasped. We had a very pleasant chat during his visit to the sanctum, and parted with him under the impression that the business end of our excellent Canadian exchange is in the hands of a first class man.—Merchants' Review.

A few miles from New Westminster, B. C. right in the heart of the fruit growing country, D. J. Munn & Co. have started in addition to their salmon canning industry, to can plums, cherries, currants, (black and red), strawberries, pears, and apples, etc. This new concern, has large capacities with all modern equipments, which will enable them to put up nothing but the best class of goods. The fine label on outside of can is Mr. Munn's own design, and is one to attract the attention of the public.

The Cleveland Baking Powder Co., New York, has published for free distribution, a very convenient and compendious manual of culinary recipes. We can imagine a young wife entirely inexperienced in the art of cooking, being able to pick up a liberal gastronomic education with no other assistance than this handsome pamphlet as a text-book. With the retail dealer's name printed on the outside surface of one of the covers, the Cleveland Baking Powder Co's. Cook-Book should be a very acceptable gift to customers.

The people on the Nova Scotia side of the bay of Fundy are getting a bonanza from mackerel, which continue to set in there. The cruiser Dream is watching the coast, to the great delight of the local fishermen, the mackerel being within the limit. The fish are small but fat, and everything in the shape of a boat or a seine is in use by the inhabitants, who for the time being are all fishermen. Two men bought an old seine for $500, and took $1,000 worth of fish the first day. They claim to have secured $10,000 worth altogether. Most of the fishing is done with hook and line.

BARREL PORK DUTY.

As some misunderstanding appears to prevail as to the effect of the recent decision in reference to the pork duties, the official ruling may be given. Item No. 4 of the tariff reads :

Barrelled pork in brine made from the sides of heavy hogs, after the hams and shoulders are cut off, and containing not more than sixteen pieces to the barrel of 200 pounds weight, 1½ cents per pound.

The Minister of Justice, to whom the question was referred, decided: "That only 1½ cents per pound can be levied on the pork if it fulfils the conditions of that item, and that the fact of the pork being otherwise treated (as for instance by the removal of the bone), makes no difference as regards the rate of duty."

PETTIFOGGING JOURNALISTS

With no waste of strength in fancy flourishes or feints, the Trade Bulletin of Montreal proceeds in the following style to tomahawk a specimen of the genus named in the title given above. The firm of Lightbound, Ralston & Co., not content with following their legitimate business as wholesale grocers, like the rest of their confreres in this city, must fain launch into speculative journalism for a side show, and devote the columns of their price-list to abusing the rest of the trade and hold them up to ridicule. As a specimen of the manner in which they sought to belittle the wholesale grocery trade of this city because 16 firms belonging to the Montreal Grocers' Guild expelled Messrs. W. Donahue & Co. from their corporation for cutting prices, we reproduce the following from Lightbound, Ralston & Co's price-list of a late issue :—

We have no hesitation in saying that there are not sixteen wholesale grocers in the Dominion still less in Montreal, qualified to rank as the equals in honesty, integrity and honor with the senior of the firm of "Wm. Donahue & Co."

It is remarkably strange that these "pettifogging journalists" in their price-list should have insulted the wholesale grocery trade of Montreal by flaunting in their face that "white flower of a blameless commercial life worn by Mr. William Donahue," with the intention of making the rest of the trade outside Lightbound, Ralston & Co., and Wm. Donahue & Co., feel how unworthy they were to be compared with the righteousness of this dual coalition of unadulterated commercial saints. There can be no doubt that the laudatory editorials on the exceptionally "blameless commercial" career of William Donahue & Co., which appeared in the columns of Lightbound, Ralston & Co's price-list, helped to extend the lease of existence of one of the most rotten concerns that ever flourished on wind. Nor were Lightbound, Ralston & Co. content with issuing a price-list for their own benefit, but they must needs go further and spread out into a trade paper, laying themselves open to the charge of "whooping up" this, or "hammering down" that article, as necessity required. What would the price-lists of Lightbound, Ralston & Co., say if the proprietor of the Trade Bulletin were engaged directly or indirectly in the grocery business, or any other trade occupation which required unbiassed market reports? Why it would be the first to denounce him for interfering with things that did not belong to him, and writing reports to suit his own interests. These "petti-fogging journalists" besides advertising the "blameless commercial life" of William Donahue & Co., compared with whose "honesty, integrity and honor" they stated the rest of the trade (barring Lightbound, Ralston & Co.) were not "qualified to rank," are also cutting into general advertising, and thus contributing to the demoralization of this branch of the profession.

DRUM TAPS.

Leaves from the Diary of a Commercial Traveller.

BY WM. H. MAHER.

CHAPTER II.

Between Saturday night, when I had packed my samples, and Monday morning, when I was to start on my first trip, my spirits ran up and down with such regularity that I was not quite sure if it were not a symptom of chills and fever. I dreaded failure, and hitherto I had been tolerably successful in working my way along.

What my courage might have been had Monday morning opened clear and pleasant, I cannot say, but when I found a cold March rain pouring down on the already muddy earth, my hopes fell below the power of any thermometer to record. But I was in for it; it was too late to turn back with credit; I must go ahead and do my best. I have made a good many trips on the road since that day, and if they were successful ones it was because I always left the store with the promise to myself to do my best; resolving is not doing, but it is the first step toward accomplishing results.

When I reached the store my fellow clerks had their jokes over my prospective good luck.

"There are only three hundred dozen of Ames' shovels on hand," said the stock man, solemnly; "if you find you are going to clean them out the first day send us word by telegraph, so we can get in a new stock."

"We haven't many packing-boxes on hand," said the porter; "but I suppose it don't matter, you only sell full packages."

"If you get a dispatch from me saying 'we're sick,' come home at once," said the entry clerk; "it will mean that you have cleaned out our entire stock."

"Take a short-hand writer with you to take down your orders," said one of the traveling men; "you'll be too busy to sell and write both."

But the senior came out of the office just then, and the clerks went to work "Good-by," said he, heartily and cheerily; "don't get discouraged, and don't worry; do your best, and we will be satisfied, orders or no orders."

My samples, the same being in a sole-leather trunk and a large valise, were on the dray, and I followed them to the depot. I bought my ticket, had my samples checked after an argument with the baggageman, who wanted to charge me for extra weight, but concluded they were all right when I handed him a cigar, and then I shook hands with the drayman, and felt as if I was alone in the world.

As I took my seat in the car I tried to imagine how the first town was to look, what kind of men the merchants were, and what they were going to say to me, but I found myself lost in the endeavor. When the train drew out into the country the cloudy day looked doubly dreary. It was that unpleasantest of months, March, and the country through which we were passing was level timber land, which was a vast pond. Looking out of the window as well as one could through the wet glass I saw we were approaching a settlement. The engine shrieked, the brakemen turned their ratchets, then opened the doors and shouted "Paris!" That isn't the name of the town, but it will do as well.

Paris! Why, that was the name of my station! Great Cæsar! What was the use of getting out here! But out I got; and as the train moved away I was homesick for the first time in my life. But—I was to make the best of things; here was the place to begin.

"Are these your traps?" This from a man who was probably depot master, said "depot" consisting of a platform only; no roof.

"Yes, sir; is anyone here from the hotel?"

"No."

"Is there a hotel here?"

"There's Williamses; he keeps a sort of hotel, but it's a durn poor hotel."

"Is there any other?"

"No, not without you go out to the kilns, about a mile over yon."

I started over to Williams' house. "Williams wasn't at home," but his wife was. She came to the door to meet me. How was I to get my samples over? They were in danger of being spoiled.

"Guess you'd better take the wheel-barrer," she said, "if they're too heavy to bring on your back."

It wasn't exactly what I had bargained for, but there was no help for it, so I wheeled them over, and put them in the Williams house parlor. By this time it was nearly 12 o'clock, and I concluded it would be well to wait until after dinner before starting out to see the town. From the hotel window there were three business blocks in view; two of them bore signs, "Groceries and Saloon," and the other, "New York Store." Smiling at the ambition of the latter name, I sat down to wait for dinner.

When the bell was rung about half a dozen dirty men came from different directions, and after they had time to wash themselves in the one hand-basin, and wipe themselves on the one small towel, the landlady announced dinner. I was not hungry. The novelty of my situation kept my appetite appeased; but if the dinner had been at all tolerable, I should have eaten something. As it was, I looked around in vain for a morsel fit to eat. There was fried fat pork, the pork now swimming in the fat; potatoes floating in fat; corn bread, no butter, and black coffee without milk. Each of my companions helped himself from the common dishes with his own fork, and they ate with a relish, if noise was any sign of satisfaction. I tried to drink some of the black coffee, and then I went back to the "office."

Putting on hat and overcoat, I prepared for action. In one pocket I placed my price-book, put my order-book in another, sharpened my new pencil, arranged my cards where I could get at them readily, and started out. The distance from the hotel to the nearest "grocery" was not half long enough. I walked slowly in spite of the rain, but for all that I reached the door too soon. There was nothing to do but to go in; so I opened the door and in I went.

(Although I was years on the road I never outgrew this feeling of dread about going into a strange store. When I reached the door I shrank back with reluctance, disliking to face the curious eyes that would be turned upon me, and dreading the reception I might meet from the men. One would think this would be quickly outgrown, but it is not.)

The room was not a very ambitious one; on your right as you entered was a counter, and back of the counter a few shelves. On the shelves was a queer mixture of merchandise—a little tobacco, a few boxes of cigars, some toys, a few groceries, a little hardware, and a small stock of candy. The opposite wall was bare. The proprietor was not in sight, but I heard voices back of a screen that shut out the far end of the store. I waited a moment to take notes, and then I went behind the screen. It was as I had supposed: here was the saloon; the proprietor was behind the bar and in conversation with a man who sat smoking near the stove. That he was German my ears had already taught me, but if they had failed me I would have known it now.

"Good afternoon, sir," said I, in my most affable manner. For an answer I received the curtest kind of a nod.

I had been running my eyes about the premises trying to find his name on a box or barrel, and I now saw a keg near the bar, so I walked over to that. Yes, here was his name on the keg—"F. Rhinecamp." I went to work boldly.

"Mr. Rhinecamp, my name is Jenks. I am from Herman & Co., wholesale hardware dealers [I gave him a card]; perhaps you know the house?"

Ever since I had entered the door he had done nothing but stare at me, as also had his customer. When I put the card down before him he reached out his hand for it, but did not look at it; he continued to look at me. I took this for a sign that I was to go on.

"I see you keep a few things in our line,' I continued, "and if there is anything you are now out of or running short in, I would be glad to send it to you."

He did not avail himself of this opening, so I lengthened the speech:

"I see you have a little cutlery; I think I could do you good in that line. Our house makes a specialty of cutlery; imports direct from England and Germany, and we can compete with the New York houses. I can sell you a good two-bladed knife, one such as farmers buy, for $7 a dozen, and you can easily retail them for a dollar a piece. We have a large line to select from; I have here in town with me about three hundred different styles of pocket-knives, and can show you everything, from a toy knife to hang on a watchchain, up to a spring-back dirk. Then I have samples of spoons, table cutlery, razors, horse brushes, curry combs and lots of other things. I see you do something in woodenware; we are headquarters for wash-boards, mop-sticks, clothes-pins and such things; we can sell you a good clothes-line very cheap; in fact, we have a thousand and one things that would work in well with your stock. We intend to treat our customers fairly and do what is right, and no one shall undersell us. We have never done anything with you, but would be glad of a small order just to try us. If you find we do the fair thing you can buy of us again when I come around; if we don't, why, I'll treat, and we will part friends. This is my first trip; I am anxious to do a little with every merchant, and I hope you will give me a small order."

I stopped to give him a chance to say something, but he did not avail himself of the opportunity. He took up my card and continued to look at it. After waiting a while, "How is it," said I, "is there anything in my line that you need?"

He spoke in German to his customer, and the customer came up to the counter and looked at my card, then at me, then he took his pipe out of his mouth to say:

"Mishter Rhinecamp, he not de English spoken."

GROCERIES.

Trade has relapsed into the moderate activity that is characteristic of a spent excitement, the interest in sugar since the market for that commodity asserted itself having fallen to the average temperature. Another cause which was operative in bringing about the late spell of unusual activity, the dawn of better times, has settled down to its every day effectiveness outside, but is sufficient to keep up business to a satisfactory average. The canned goods market has not yet got into the circumstances of demand which cast its shape for the year, but there is considerable interest felt in it, and a good deal of future delivery business done, many believing in the moderateness of present prices compared with what they expect. Dried fruit is receiving some attention since the arrival of the new crop of raisins and currants. Teas are about the leading line in buying favor at present. Money appears to be scarce, as it is expected to be in this month of transaction.

CANNED GOODS.

The tomato situation is not entirely to be materially changed before the weather gets through with it. The packing season which was expected to be so brief on account of the scarcity of stock is apt to have received an appreciable extension from the maturing influences that were at work last week, and which have not been idle this week. The line of price of raw material has had to dip from last week's lights to get to the highest reached this week. But there has been frost this week which may frustrate the promise of the warm weather, that is likely to evolve from the formative circumstances now at work is an average sized pack, with fair prices simply. One firm of jobbers, however, has refused to take any more orders at present, until it has filled the orders already in hand. Peas and corn are unchanged and in very good demand. Peaches will be scarce Present prices are on good strong pinions, which will almost certainly keep them up. Twos are $2.60 to $2.65, and threes are $3.50 to $3.75. They have made little appearance in jobbers' stocks yet. Pears and plums, although more abundant than peaches and other fruits are apt to go up in sympathy with these. Salmon is steady from $1.30 to $1.65. An Ottawa despatch says: The Fisheries Department has received statistics of the salmon pack on the Fraser River, B. C., this season. The total catch is 246,050 cases, or over eleven and three-quarter million pounds, valued at $1,417,248. When the pack on the Naas and Skeena rivers and on the coast is added, it is thought the total number of cases will reach 400,000.

A local firm of jobbers is now engaged in making up the following shipments of assorted goods: Three cars for Winnipeg, four cars for Victoria, and six cars for various other points. All these orders are for immediate attention.

Messrs. Sloan & Crowther received on Monday a car-load of a choice brand of tomatoes, labelled "Lyn Valley." They were put up by the Simcoe Canning Co., and are the finest stock yet handled by Sloan & Crowther.

The same firm has at last received the long-waited-for shipment af Clover Leaf lobsters. The samples examined show beautifully firm line of goods, in no whit below the standard previously upheld by this brand. Sloan & Crowther are selling at $2.65 to $2.75 in round lots.

The first lot of Clover Leaf salmon in flat tins that was ever offered on this market was received a few days ago by Messrs. Eby, Blain & Co., who control the sale of that brand in this city. The finest cut of the fish is all that is put up in these flat tins. The price is $1.75.

COFFEES.

Coffees have gained rather than maintained firmness. There is very little Rio now sold under 24c. The operations of speculative buyers are supposed to be the cause of the present stiffness. Other lines are scarce and in light demand.

The American Grocer says: Prices on the 1st of September, 1890, compare with the same date in 1889 as follows:

	1890. Cargoes.	1889. Cargoes.
Rio, Fair	20½	18½
Rio, extreme grades	19 to 21½	16⅞ to 19½
Santos, fair to good	20½ to 20¾	18⅝ to 18¾
Maracaibo, good Cucuta,	20¾ to 21	18½ to 18¾
Padang, Interior	24½	21½ to 21⅝

The supply this season will be more generous and we may reasonably look for lower prices when new crop coffee is pushed to market. The deliveries in Europe for consumption for the first seven months of 1890 were 236,076 tons, against 224,809 tons for same time in 1889; 220,023 tons in 1888. Thus it appears that high prices have restricted consumption for years, preventing the normal growth in the use of the article.

DRIED FRUIT.

The first shipments of Valencia raisins were small and have been for the most part taken up. The second will arrive shortly and after it comes there will be ample stock for the supplying of all retail needs. Prices are firm at 7¾ to 8½c. with the bulk of the trade at 8c. The new currants have also begun to take their place in stock. Provincials in barrels and half barrels are 6 to 6½c. All the wholesale houses are now stocked. Vostizzas are not yet in the hands of many holders, but will be plentiful by the time of next report. They are 9 to 10c. in cases and half cases. The new crop figs are expected next week.

NUTS.

The demand has improved, the season of agricultural fall fairs having a stimulating effect. Prices are firm but unchanged.

The Grocery World says:—It looks like a corner in cocoanuts. Prices are still rising, and one handler of fruit controls nearly all the San Blas nuts and another the Baracoas. Outside of these the stock in the country amounts to little or nothing. The manufacturers of the dessicated product are contemplating a rise and unless something interferes, we may look for gilt-edged prices on cocoanuts this fall.

RICE AND SPICES.

There has been little buying of rice. Prices are firm and are expected to increase on account of shortage in crop, and on account of the potato famine which is threatened in Ireland, which if it befals, will throw increased consumption upon rice. The trade in spices goes on with the activity that is now seasonable.

SUGAR.

A decline in the sugar trade has been very perceptible since the close of last week. The fear of further advance has passed away from the minds of retailers, as also has the stress of the demand passed away from current trade. There will soon be a pause in the canning and preserving of plums, peaches and pears, and it is probable all the sugar needed for these fruits is now in retail hands. This makes a pause in the sugar trade which will be likely to remain unbroken till the start of the demand which the anticipated close of navigation revives. In the interim there will be a tranquil movement of trade. Low-grade yellows are scarce, one house holding nothing below 6⅛c. There is nothing to be had anywhere below 5⅜c. Granulated is 7⅛ to 7¼c yet.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The call for syrup is not at all strong. Prices are unchanged. Molasses, on the other hand, are in very good request, while prices are advancing in correspondence with a movement in the Boston market. To that port there has been attracted several shipments from Barbados and Porto Rico by the prices which Boston men are now paying. The latter apprehend that the President of their country will proclaim the duty of 4c. per gallon, which the Aldrich amendment permits him to do, against Porto Rico molasses if Spain does not modify its Cuban trade tariff. Porto Rico half barrels are now 40 to 42c. Trinidad purchases are 34 to 36c., and barrels are 38 to 40c.

TEAS.

Low grades are waxing scarcer, and the demand for them is also waxing. Low grade greens are not to be had; low grade Japans can be got, but only by paying well for them. Tea that sold last year at 15 to 18c. cannot be got now under 20c. Blacks are quite plentiful and cheap, and are falling in for a part of the trade that has to be foregone in greens and to some extent in Japans. Even the concession of prices will not ensure the receipt of Japans. Wholesalers make their contracts to supply customers, but often fail to get stock when prices are satisfactory. The enquiry for Indians continues good. The rallying power of the market noticeable last week has since been more fully dispensed, and in London the public sales have gone off with increased spirit at almost daily advancing rates. The quantity offered has been large, comprising a better selection of teas. The finer grades above 1s. fetched a rise of a ½d. to 1d. per pound. Pekoe Souchongs and qualities below 1s. met with lively competition, and in many cases were sold ¼d. to ½d. dearer, thus establishing a material enhancement from the late lowest point. In Ceylons the upward movement continues, and is more especially visible in Pekoes at from 10d. to 1s.

PETROLEUM.

The prices of refined quoted are stiffer and better. Raw petroleum has advanced another half cent, and may be expected to react on the prices of refined before long.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

The state of trade is very much that of last week. It is normal, and prices have not changed.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Choice dairy tubs are very scarce and in stronger demand. The stock of medium butter is well kept up by receipts from country stores. Prime dairy tubs is worth 14 to 16c. Good medium tub is 10 to 13. Large rolls, yet rather scare, are 14c. Pound rolls are 19c., and the quality of the butter received in this form is good. Creamery tubs are 18 to 20c. Creamery rolls are 22 to 23c.

Cheese is unchanged at 9½ to 9¾c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—For the small balance yet unsold, of last year's growth the price remains at $1.80 to $2. For the new crop growers are already asking $1.85 for new, but buyers refuse to participate in this attempt to establish prices at the outset.

DRIED APPLES—Are worth 8c. There is a fair amount of trade now.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Have not begun to get into trade yet, but the basis of the opening season will be, it is supposed, about 11c.

EGGS—Are 17 to 18c., with the latter figure the most common price.

HAY—New timothy is $9 to $9.50 on track. Street receipts are numerous.

HIDES—A carload of cured, choice weights, exchanged hands on Wednesday at 8c. Green is unchanged at 7c. for No. 1, and 6c. for No. 2, cows.

HONEY—Is firmer. Clear is 12½c. for the finest, 11c. for medium, and 7 to 8c. for the low grades.

HOPS—A very few of the '88 crop is yet merchantable at 12c. A very sharp rise took place since last issue in the price of '89 stock, and selling at 20 to 25c. The market has also a very good supply of the present year's yield, which is going at 30 to 35c. The latter are too high, however, for any immediate business, and buyers withhold.

OATS—Are worth 40c. on track.

ONIONS—Bring $2.25 to $2.50 per barrel. A very well supplied market is now open.

POTATOES—In car loads are 60c. The most numerous arrivals are in farmers' waggons, which deliver about two car loads every day at 70 to 75c. Out of store lots are 75c.

POULTRY—Chickens are 50 to 60c., and ducks are 60 to 75c.

SKINS—Sheep are still 80c. A rare skin brings 85c.

STRAW—Oat is $5.

TALLOW—Rough is 2c. Rendered is 5½c.

WOOL—Brings 21 to 23c.

FISH.

Fish as a whole are scarcer this week, owing to stormy weather. The demand is very good, considering the high prices. White fish is scarce. British Columbia salmon is more plentiful, and are of a fair size. Lake herring are scarcer, but those received are of a fine quality. Pickerel is also scarce, and there is a fair demand for a moderate quantity. There is not enough black bass received to supply the demand. The following are the prices: Trout, 7c.; white fish, 7 to 8c.; British Columbia salmon, 15c.; lake herring, $2.50 to $3; pickerel, 5 to 7c.; black bass, 9c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Business maintains the hang-back attitude which has so long been observed in this market. The orange stock is made up of Sorrento and Jamaica fruit, the former selling at $8.50 and the latter at $7.50. Maiori lemons, fancy 300's, are $7.50 to $8.50. Bananas, now in light request, are 75c. to $1.50.

PROVISIONS.

The activity in this department of trade shows no sign of flagging. In smoked meats and long clear bacon a very good business continues to be done. Smoked hams are becoming scarce. Hogs are coming in quite freely for the time of year.

BACON—Long clear is 8 to 8¾c. Backs

DRY GOODS.

A very satisfactory trade was done by the wholesale dry goods men, with whom the good spell opened in millinery week continues. Prices are unchanged. Payments are fairly good.

SALT.

The salt market has been quite active this week. Prices still remain the same. The Toronto Salt Works report the sales transacted this month to be much larger than they were the same month last year. They report the following sales for the week: 2 cars bbl. salt at $1.40; 2 cars sacks at 70c. Smaller lots sell at $1.50 to $1.55 for bbls.; 80 to 85c. for sacks, and 50 to 55c. for ¼ sacks.

MONTREAL

MONTREAL MARKETS.

SEPT. 25, 1890.

GROCERIES.

This market in a general way has been rather quiet since our last, but simply owing to the fact that supplies are down to a very low level, and until they are replenished trade will naturally be light. The principal features of the week has been activity in dried foreign fruit, and a large turnover of raw sugar. This in fact has been the only trading of importance, the details of which are appended, but the market generally reveals a confident, cheerful feeling.

FRUIT.

As intimated in our report of a week ago business was rather quiet in dried foreign fruit, for the reason that there was very little on spot, but towards the latter portion of last week business opened out again and there was a brisk business in raisins to arrive ex Oregon at 7 to 7¼c., several round lots changing hands, the aggregate footing up quite a respectable total. There is very little fruit on spot except a few selected Valencias, which are held firm at a fraction over 7½c. Some Elemes are offering at 6½ to 7½c. according to quality, the outside for selected lots, which are freely firm at the figure. There are no layers on the market, but the Oregon's consignment comprises a few lots, in which, however, no business has been done, therefore we are unable to quote. Sultanas as previously noted are a very light stock here, and are likely to remain so for some time to come in view of the fact that the market has been cornered on the other side. Outside of raisins there is little doing in dried fruit. There are no currants here, and no business has been done in the lots which are expected by the first direct steamers except the transactions noted last week on a basis of 5⅞ to 6c., which means about 6 to 6¼c. here. The first direct arrivals of new figs are on the Oregon, which carries quite a consignment of fruit, and business has been done in Malaga at 15c., and we quote the figure as a fair price. In foreign green fruit there is nothing particular to note. There are very few lemons on the market beyond a few lots that have been brought on from New York, which are offering at $5.50 to $6, and the only oranges on the market are Jamaicas, which are quoted at $5.50 to $6 laid down.

SUGAR.

The activity and strength of the sugar market noted last week continues, and raw sugars especially have been subjected to a brisk movement. In fact, all the raw on spot outside of one lot in first hands and that held by the refiners as passed out of first hands, the firm who held the bulk of the stock having cleared off their entire stock on Friday last on a basis of 5¼ for muscavado, and 6⅛ for bright centrifugals. In consequence of this feeling is firm and what stock there is is held for outside rates. Refiners are firm in their orders also and report a good business.

SPICES

The spice market continues firm and stocks are very light on spot as they generally are in everything else in the grocery line. In fact Coffee, Pimento, Cloves and Ginger are all pretty well cleared out of first hands at the moment, and business consequently is rather quiet pending fresh supplies.

MOLASSES.

Since our last, this market has been subjected to active buying operation, which has moderately strengthened the already firm feeling, and now it is unlikely that any stock could be secured on spot at any price. Reference has been made to the appearance of American buyers on this market. Well they have followed up their first purchases with sweeping ones all over Canada, and now practically own the bulk of the stock which is practically off the market, being delivered for distribution at American centres where an extremely light supply led to the purchasing here. Consequently it is extremely difficult to quote a price with our market so bare, but it is undoubted that it would take a very fancy figure to move any stock that there is. An advance of 4 to 5c. per gallon and in some cases more than that are freely spoken of.

TEA AND COFFEE.

There has been a fairly active market during the week, but the market is pretty bare of stock under a picking up demand that has been experienced of late on American account, so that business is in a certain sense restricted by light stock. Prices generally are very firm for Japans, from 1,500 to 2,500 packages leaving here on New York account during the week at 16 to 20c. Blacks are firm and are cabled higher from the other side. Coffee is quiet and firm with a small business under light stocks. We quote five and ten bag lots very firm at the following prices: Rio, 20 to 22c.; Santos, 22 to 23c.; Jamaica, 23 to 25c.; Maracaibo, 23½ to 25½c.; Gautelama, 22 to 24c.; Plantation Ceylon, 24 to 26c.; Java, 28 to 30c.; Mocha, 30 to 31c.; Costa Rica, 25 to 27c.

CANNED GOODS.

Canned goods have been rather quiet, and there is no feature of special interest. The future of the tomato pack is still problematical, and with more wet weather it must of necessity be light. As time progresses expectation of a small pack of fruit seems likely to prove correct, while there is nothing to state in relation to fish.

HOPS.

There has been no new develpement in hops during the past week, and no business of account has transpired so that spot prices of new crops are still problematical. However, there is no doubt that the middle men would like to buy at 25c., and allowing a fair margin over this an idea of a spot price may be arrived at. Since the arrivals noted last week, a few additional lots of a dozen bales have been received.

EGGS.

This market has shown a firmer tendency since our report of a week ago, and although the supply continues fair prices have stiffened a half cent under an improved demand, and now quotations stand 17 to 17½c.

BUTTER.

Apart from the ordinary jobbing trade in a local way, there is no feature to the butter market which continues quiet, while country holders are asking stiff prices for the late made varieties of both creamery and dairy. These are above export ideas so that shippers are off the market. We quote the following as fair values:—Late made creamery 20 to 21c; Summer makes 17 to 18c; Finest Townships Dairy 18 to 19c; Western dairy 14 to 14½c.

CHEESE.

There has been nothing strkingly new regarding the cheese market since our last, except it be the fact that September cheese is now on the market. The position is practically unchanged. There has been a steady quiet business in a shipping way where nice August could be picked up around 9¾c, but over that cable limits would not permit operations in a legitimate way. Consequently, as holders have all along been firm, the market has been on the whole quiet but firm. The conditions are good if not interfered with, and August cheese is well sold up the eastern section while the "holdback" has afforded an opportunity for a good clearance of the earlier makes in England. However we don't think it wise to force matters to much on fall goods, for previous seasons have shown that cheese much over 10c. is a luxury, which the English buyer will not have, and at 10c. through or thereabouts there is every reason to believe in a good healthy demand for the fall makes. We quote: Fine September, 10 to 10⅛; late made August's, 9⅝ to 9¾c.; early August, 9 to 9⅜c.; finest July's, 8¾ to 9c.; medium grades, 8c.; Cable, 45c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The feature of this market is the large supply of grapes in which a pretty active business is being done on at 2½ to 5c. per lb. according to quality. Peaches are scarce and are offering at $2.00 a basket. Spanish onions on which we noted a firm feeling some time ago have eased of slightly with the increased supply and are selling at $3.50 to $4.50 per case, and $1.00 to $1.10 per crate.

PROVISIONS.

Provisions were dull and unchanged, and there was no variation at all during the week the only business doing being a small one in pork and lard. We quote: Canadian short cut pork, $17.50 to $18 per barrel; mess pork, western, per brl $16.50 to $17; short cut, western, per brl $17.00 to $17.50; hams, city cured, per lb 12 to 12½c.; hams, canvassed, per lb 12 1-2 to 13c.; lard, western, pails, per lb 9 to 9¼c.; lard, Canadian, in pails 8¼ to 8 1-2c.; lard, C. O. P., 10 1-2c.; bacon, per pound, 9 to 10c.; lard, com. refined, per pound, 7½ to 7 3-4c.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

There has been no business in flour outside of a small jobbing movement during the week and prices generally are steady, and the statistical position is good as will be seen from the stocks in store which show an increase of 1,254 barrels compared with a week ago, and a decrease of 14,141 barrels compared with a year ago.

The grain market has remained quiet, and beyond some little change in oats and peas there has been no alteration to mention. Business generally has rated quiet. The stocks in store compared with those of a week ago show a decrease of 13,443 bushels of wheat, 17,207 bushels of oats, 1,971 bushels of barley, and an increase of 5,141 bushels of corn, 22,629 bushels of peas, and 1,507 bushels of rye. Compared with a year ago there is a decrease of 142,693 bushels of wheat, 6,774 bushels of corn, 8,717 bushels of oats, 5,299 bushels of barley, 22,992 bushels of rye, and an increase of 21,865 bushels of peas.

HINT TO TRAVELLING SALESMEN.

The other day on a certain railway a man got into one of the cars, says an exchange, and presently began talking to a fellow passenger. After a time he asked the gentleman whether he had heard the story about how a man traveled without a ticket The gentleman said he had not; so the man asked him to lend him his ticket that he might show him how it was done, and began fiddling about with it, but pretended that story had suddenly slipped out of his head, but that he would be sure to remember it soon.

After a time the train got near New York, and as the man still could not remember the story he returned the gentleman his ticket (after tearing a bit off) and started for the door. This struck the gentleman as being very curious, and so he watched the man. When he was reached by the conductor and asked for his ticket he said he had given it up; but the conductor denied it, and after a deal of altercation the man pulled some silver out of his pocket and was about to pay his fare when he suddenly said—producing a small piece of ticket—that he could prove that he had given up his ticket because he remembered playing with it on the train, and tearing off a small piece, and that if the conductor looked he would find a ticket with a piece torn off. On looking the conductor found a ticket with a piece torn off, and of course accepted the man's statement.

THE GROCER AND DOMESTIC LIFE.

The Table Talk, "Epicurus" says—"Should a grocer of 'ye olden times' return to this world and inspect a modern grocery establishment he would no doubt be astonished at the marvelous changes which have been made in this trade.

"He might miss the old 'combination' order, so peculiar to the corner grocery, and the sawdust on the floor, and the soiled fly-paper on the ceiling, and the open fish barrel in the room, and oil barrel in the corner, and the straw paper on the counter. And he might also regard as extravagant the handsome fixtures, the elaborate arrangements, the crops of salesmen, porters and drivers, and the extensive variety and large stock of modern articles.

"But the grocery trade is simply keeping pace with the progress which is being made in all other lines; and every advanced step for facilitating trade, for adding to the comfort and conveniences of the buyer, and for increasing the variety and palatableness of the table, and for decreasing the labor in the kitchen, is in the right direction and should receive hearty commendation.

"One of the problems which deserves careful study is 'How can the drudgeries of domestic life be decreased, and the comforts and pleasures be increased?' In this more enlightened age, we spurn the inhuman idea that woman's sphere is to slave from early morn till late at night with houshold duties—without a moment for recreation or for intellectual development. It is true that there are still a few, who, having no higher ambition than the hoarding of money, adhere to this false idea, and it is also true that the present inequalities in social conditions make many a noble mother sacrifice all her personal comfort and interest in the hard battle for bread and shelter for those she loves; but this is not in accord with the humanizing spirit of to day, which opposes the enslavement of any human being, and his deprivation of social and domestic pleasures, and his moral and intellectual development.

"The practical relation which the consideration of this problem has to groceries is this: Many families either cannot afford, or do not desire, to keep servants, and the result is that if all the food be prepared in the old-fashioned way, either the table must suffer for lack of variety and palatableness, or else the kitchen duties necessary for the preparation of three meals a day must consume a large part of the time of the house-wife and be attended with much labor. Viewed from an economic point of view, many articles prepared at home in small quantities must necessarily cost more than if made in large quantities, with labor-saving machinery, and under skillful management, and it will be only a question of time when this fact will be more generally appreciated and the economic principle applied to the manufacture and consumption of many more articles. If dealers will adopt ways and means to keep consumers posted on all the new articles which responsible manufacturers constantly bringing forward, they will relieve housekeepers of much anxiety and labor and add largely to the comforts of business besides enhancing profits,"

The Toronto Salt Works of 128 Adelaide east, Toronto, was awarded two silver medals at the Industrial Exhibition. One for their "Acme" table salt (which salt is just coming into general use as a table salt, its great perfection being that it does not get damp and will not harden.) The other medal was for their "Star Brand" of table salt, specially made for all dairy purposes and used largely by some of the best creamery men.

ON THE BRIDGE OF DEBTS.

The "credit system," as it is ordinarily known nowadays, appears to belong to an advanced state of society, and be impracticable under certain conditions of life, but it is in use, nevertheless, in some very primitive communities. In the valley of Possey, in the Austrian Tyrol, where the Alpine inhabitants lead a simple life, practically all business and work is conducted on credit, subject to annual settlement. On a certain day in winter the inhabitants of the valley meet at the bridge of St. Leonard's, a place which is convenient to all, and the day is spent in balancing accounts.

The first business in order at these meetings is the payment of debts. Every one pays what he owes; some depend upon what they collect to meet debts owed to others, but the inhabitants of Possey are thrifty and honest, and there is usually money enough to go around.

The bridge of St. Leonard's, in other words, is the clearing house of the valley of Possey.

After the debts are paid, contracts are entered into for the next year. Labor engaged itself and the farmers crops are often bargained for in advance.

If any debtor fails to appear at the bridge and meet his dues on the "squaring-up" day he is practically cut off from further dealings with the other inhabitants of the valley. No more credit is allowed him, and he is generally fain to re-establish himself in the good will of his fellows by paying his debts as soon as he possibly can. To be able to hold up one's head on the bridge is the test of solvency and honor.

There is a tradition in the Tyrol that once, a long time ago, after a year of scarcity and disaster, the inhabitants of the valley of Possey met at St. Leonard's bridge. Each one owed some one else. Consequently each depended upon being paid by his neighbor who owed him, in order to be able to pay his neighbor whom he owed.

But as no one appeared to have any money no one's debt could be paid. The people stood about in despair, until presently a well-to-do-miller, who was known to have money, arrived.

"Good!" said Hans Melchior, the tailor, "Here is Wilhelm Gutpfennig. He will start the ball rolling. Whom do you owe, Wilhelm?"

"No one!"

"So? Well, will you lend me forty gold thalers until noon?"

The miller thought the matter over a moment.

"Yes," he said. "I believe you are honest, Hans Melchior. I will lend you the money."

He advanced forty thalers to Hans, who used it to pay his debt to Pleter the weaver, and Pleter the weaver, passed it on to discharge his obligation to another citizen, and so it went from hand to hand discharging the very moderate debts of the Possey inhabitants until it came to the last man, happened to owe Hans Melchior just forty thalers. He paid it of course, and with it Melchior at once settled his debt to Gutpfennig the miller.

Now since the miller had paid himself out of the grists as he went along, and was owed by nobody, his forty gold thalers had paid all the debts in Possey, and every one else had come to the bridge in the morning moneyless, every one went home in the afternoon solvent and happy!—N. E. Grocer.

THE PROFITS IN ADVERTISING.

There are prosperous young business firms in Cincinnati which admit that they have made all their money by the liberal use of printers' ink. There is one firm—the largest of its kind in the city, and not ten years old—that laid out more than one-half of its entire capital in advertising the first year of its existence. The returns were surprising.—Cincinnati Post.

One thing in particular should be impressed upon clerks—the necessity of careful attention to small customers.

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday s yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

"Honest men will scratch around and pay their debts in some way, while those who do not want to pay would not if times were ever so good and money ever so plentiful," remarked a Brantford grocer last week. This suggests the question, how much of this dishonesty is the groceryman responsible for in his system of credit? He is obliged to take some chances, but if a new or old customer asks a month's credit on the strength of his labor, does the trader not encourage dishonesty in the consumer, when, at the end of the month, he allows one-third or one-fourth of the amount to lap on to the next month's account? Some traders will even go so far as to encourage customers to buy so far in excess of current income, and at the end of the next period a little larger amount is left over and so on, until the account is so large that if the customer gave his entire month's wages it would not square the account. Now which of the two is the more responsible for this state of the account? Most assuredly the grocer is. He is supposed to be a shrewd business man. His transactions may amount to thousands of dollars every month, while this customer who has been encouraged beyond his financial ability is in the "hole" and there is no possibility of getting out of it. Perhaps sickness comes on, perhaps a Lee or a Powderly orders him to quit work, then what are the chances for paying dead-horse bills. In seven cases out of ten it is the merchant's own "seeding" and he hasn't even "tares" to console him. Of course this class of debtors cannot be termed dishonest; they are simply unfortunates, and the world is full of them, but the sooner the merchant stops encouraging them the better. There may be a difference, but no distinction between the poor master appointed by authority and the self-constituted grocer poor master, and the grocer, who for the sake of trade, takes chances in this way with a few customers, is liable to bring his own wife and children, if he has any, down. So the situation is reversed and when too late he will see the difference between a practicable and an impracticable business method."

"TRAVELLER."

GIVING PRIZES.

The CANADIAN GROCER says the giving of prizes with goods "does not appeal to the trading motives, but it does appeal to the gambling instinct. It would not be a good educator of honesty in the body of custom, and would probably beget a good deal of retaliatory roguery. If a man had nibbled long at the prize-bait and after long gambling had got none of it, he would not unnaturally feel justified in running a bill for the sole purpose of cheating the grocer who had lured him on. The prize-system is at fault in that it does not yield equal value to all for the same outlay, and is therefore productive of many evils. It lowers the tone of business, it lowers the tone of public honesty and public thrift, and its consequences are apt to be visited upon the dealer by the dishonesty of those who did not draw good prizes."

Who shall say that this is not good logic? Who will assert that the giving of prizes—the inauguration of lofty schemes of greater or less magnitude—is not deleterious to legitimate trade? Yes, we know it is practised at church fairs, but that doesn't make it expedient or right.—New England Grocer.

SPECIAL TO OUR READERS.

As the design of THE CANADIAN GROCER is to benefit mutually all interested in the business, we would request all parties ordering goods or making purchases of any description from houses advertising with us to mention in their letter that such advertisement was noticed in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

VISIT THE CITY.

We believe that general merchants make too little of a custom that is now not so necessary of observance as it used to be, but that could now perhaps be cultivated with more profit than ever before. It is that of visiting the particular city which is their source of supply. These visits were once almost indispensable, but their necessity and their inconvenience brought in the era of the commercial traveller, and through his agency the wholesaler went to the retailer, when the requirement that the retailer should go to the wholesaler began to act as a clog on the wheels of trade. But the commercial traveller intervenes not to separate but to join the wholesaler and the retailer. Within the range of his proper service he promotes intimacy between the two spheres of trade, but his proper service does not comprehend all the relations between wholesaler and retailer. He is the vicar of the former to sell goods, and his actions are subject to certain rules such as the employer can impose on the employed. The grocery traveller is as good a man to buy from as the principal of his firm is. There are no bargain advantages which that traveller's mediation shuts out from the retailer. But it is not so with all travellers who call on the general storekeeper. The dry-goods traveller, for example, represents a wholesale trade in which the members are not consolidated to keep prices uniform and for other objects, as concert in the time limitations for credit, etc. Consequently the traveller of one house will not always make the same offers as the traveller for another house, or the house will give perhaps better bargains than the traveller will. Again, the multiplicity of the lines carried in a dry goods wholesale stock, gives a better chance to the wholesaler to concede a special advantage to the visiting retailer, while the traveller might not be at liberty to do so. But also, many staples in the dry goods trade are affected by shifting fashion, and one season usually has a heritage of surplus for the next season. This the retailer might make money on if he were on the spot. Many job lots might be bought by visitors, who would thus be able to protect themselves in some measure against the faults of a disorganized wholesale trade. So long as any trade keeps in such a condition that its retail distributors are supplied at unequal prices or under unequal conditions of time or initial capital, so long will all traders have to be on the alert to secure in each individual case the best of those preferences. Travellers, carrying staples only, are bound to keep their business confined to normal circumstances, in which the play of freedom to give good bargains must be greatly circumscribed in comparison with the liberty with the untrammeled choice of the members of the firm or their manager. There are other lines kept by the general trader in which the benefit of a visit to the source of wholesale supply will be found profitable. Let the right time of year be chosen, the time of transition from the new to the old stock. We are sorry that this is one of the advantages of trade in any department of merchandise, for it implies a cutthroat attitude on the part of the wholesalers in that line towards each other, an attitude that is bad for the interests of trade. But so long as it lasts, the only approach towards mitigation of the evils attendant upon it is through the pushing endeavor on the part of every one to reap the temporary advantage of it.

COMPOUND LARD.

The manufacture of compound lard is now carried on upon a large scale in this country and especially in this province. A few months ago there were no refineries at work in the production of that commodity in Canada. An attempt to start them a year ago would have been swept away before the tide of United States importation. Now, however, sheltered by the breakwater which the amended tariff affords to trade in so many hog-products, the industry flourishes. The place in popular consumption which had been left vacant by the exclusion of the United States compound was large, and operations to fill it were begun at once and with vigor by Canadian refiners. They at present have the market very well stocked, and the public can get the article at prices considerably below, of course, what they can get pure lard for. They buy it largely, and the price of the pure article is accordingly depressed. Under the influence which the rivalry of adulterated lard exerts upon the market, the price of pure is kept about as low as it was kept by the competition of American lard and lard compounds. Thus the increased tariff, which was supposed to be adopted for the good of those engaged in the production of pure lard, has really resulted in no appreciable be efit to them. It has served as a rampart for the operations of an industry which is as inimical to the profits on pure lard as was large importation of cheap lard. It may be said that even is a gain. Of course it is. If Canadians will consume lard compound it is better that Canadians should have the making of it. Besides it will do consumers no harm. There is nothing physiologically injurious in the components of the mixture.

Cotton seed oil, tallow and oleo stearine will hurt nobody. The compound which they go to form along with lard will certainly not give the satisfaction to fastidious cooks or quasi epicures that the pure hog product will. It is well known that for plain articles even the best compound is unsuitable. Biscuit makers must use the pure article, as the goods they make with the compound soon become rancid. Bakers of cakes may use it, as they may use rank butter, because such cake has usually an abundance of spices in its make-up, and in their aromatic effect the unpleasant flavor of the lard compound is lost.

But whatever the comparative intrinsic values of lard and lard compound, whatever the comparative price paid and demand sustained, each should stand on its own merits. If lard compound is wanted more than lard is wanted, then it would seem it is in popular estimation a better article. Then why should it be called lard? Why should its makers not be content to brand it lard compound? We think it is because they believe that a very strong conservative partiality exists in favor of the unsophisticated article. It is known that if lard compound and lard were at the same price everybody would prefer lard. Which article is essentially the better is shown in which name is in the ascendant. Makers of the compound in some cases do mark their stock "compound," but in many cases they do not. Those who do not should be compelled to do so. They have no right to infringe upon a name which is the warrant for a better article than that which they have to sell. The Adulteration Act expressly provides protection to the producer of pure wares. It should be invoked in the behalf of the pure lard interest. The line would then be drawn sharply between the class of consumers who want the compound and the class of consumers who want the pure article. The pure lard interest would be greatly benefited by such an enforcement of the law as would distinctly trace such a line.

THE GOOD WORK STILL GOES ON.

The Hamilton retail grocers have formed an association for the mutual benefit of members. At the first meeting several subjects of importance were discussed, the one which received the most attention, and which has been discussed freely in these columns, being the giving of Xmas presents. It was the unanimous opinion that this must be stopped. Another question discussed was the practice of wholesale dealers selling direct to the consumers, and it was resolved to oppose this to the utmost. These officers were chosen: President, H. Peebles; vice-presidents, John Ronan, I. Hazell; treasurer, C. Bremner. An executive committee of five members was also appointed.

Mr. Alexander Turner, of James Turner & Co., Hamilton, was in the city on Tuesday.

THE McKINLEY BILL GOES INTO EFFECT OCT. 6TH.

As we go to press word has come that the Conference Bill on the tariff has been passed and goes into effect Oct. 6th.

Space prevents our saying but a few words regarding a bill that its supporters intended should make the Canadian people cry "mercy." It has had the opposite effect.

Years ago the United States repealed the Reciprocity Treaty of 1854. It was a much more serious question in 1866 for Canada. Still the effect was good. We did not take long to adjust ourselves to the change, and the process was a most beneficial operation. Compared with what we were in 1866, we are now a self-reliant people. Look at it. The outside figure at which Mr. Wiman and his friends place the value of the articles affected by the McKinley tariff is sixteen million dollars. Say that to the extent of half that amount we lose the United States market for farm products, what does it amount to? At 25c. a day for each person in Canada we need a million and a quarter dollars worth of products. What is lost in the way of a market is just a week's eating for Canada.

The farmers occupying the wide acreage of the country number between 500,000 and 600,000. The loss will be $1.50 per farmer. With these facts before us we fail to see what all the row is about.

DISPLAY OF GROCERY STAPLES.

"To make a pleasing exhibit and bring desirable goods before the eyes of customers, says the Interstate Grocer, a line of small tables or counters placed between the wall shelving and bins and the sale counter are very useful. These small counters should be from six to eight feet long, 30 inches high, 24 inches wide, with a plain and solid 1¾ inch top, corners rounded off, with a second shelf about eight inches from the floor. Place them 20 inches from the wall shelving, leaving a space between them and the sale counter of about 28 inches. These small counters or tables should be placed about two feet apart at the ends, to permit easy access to the shelves and bins. In spacing, the distances must be of course regulated by the diameter and circumference of yourself and salesmen, and it will be necessary to "size them up" and space to accommodate. If preferred, open bins may be adjusted below the top, not lower than ten inches, in order to leave sufficient space for goods on the lower or second shelf.

Goods displayed on these tables are always in sight of customers and have not the iron clad, ever enduring and never changing appearance of shelf goods, the columns in whose ranks are daily filled from the rear ranks to preserve an unbroken front, and a better opportunity is afforded for change and variety.

During the holidays these tables or counters afford a splendid space for the display of raisins, currants, prunes and foreign and domestic dried fruits, etc., in their many varieties and grades. The bins are convenient for the display of those fruits which are in bulk or loose and ready for sale, and it is only necessary to turn round to weigh them up on the counter scale for your orders.

A cask of new currants stripped of the staves placed on one of these counters surrounded with a display composed of a box of choice, bright Malaga raisins, a couple of boxes of large, juicy Valencia raisins, a box of clear, soft Sultana raisins, and a box or so of rich, fruity California raisins, with a box of bright, shining new citron for a center piece will make a display which lady customers especially will find almost irresistible. They will buy.

On the lower shelf, when you have not room to display them on the upper, place your evaporated apples and such grades of dried fruits which sell rapidly. If you have plenty of room on the top of these counters for the display of such goods, only canned or bottled goods should go on the lower shelves; do not crowd, however; leave room between and make frequent changes.

All the varieties of French, California, Turkish and Bohemian prunes may be shown on one of these counters, and the orders filled out of the boxes. Most purchasers prefer to have their goods weighed out of the very same boxes they are shown. In locating the boxes of fruit you, of course elevate one end so as to face the contents toward your customer. Now, in weighing out of the boxes do not begin at the upper end but at the lower, the loose fruit will accumulate in the space left and can conveniently be scooped out, otherwise it will roll down over the smooth surface to the floor and be wasted.

An elegantly appearing display of plain and fancy crackers can be made on these counters. In but few cases will the customer have them on the list, but, when placed before them in an attractive style, an order for a few pounds or packages can easily be obtained. With the numerous kinds and styles of crackers, and the bright and showy packages now used, it will not be difficult to make a very attractive display.

Where liquors are sold, bottled wines, brandies, whiskies or the different malt goods display well on these counters. Do not arrange them in pyramids, but stand them up in ranks like soldiers. It will require about eight bottles to fill a row across these counters; put two rows of a kind together, than leave a space of two inches and place two rows of another kind, and so on until the entire space is used. Mark the retail price on each row.

These counters or tables can be used where the store is sufficiently wide and the regular sales counter is built only on one side—in front of the blank wall to great advantage, the only objection being that boxes so displayed must be protected from picking or sampling by glass or by wire screens.

THE PRODUCTION OF BEET SUGAR.

A full report has just been isued by the Division of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture upon the culture of the sugar-beet and the manufacture of beet-sugar. The subject is treated historically, from the earliest experiments in France down through the time of the Napoleonic Empire to the present time. The production of the seed and the method of cultivation are treated at length, and finally, the meteorological conditions favorable to production in different parts of the United States. The essential problem in this country is declared to be the selection of the proper regions for developing beets with sufficient saccharine properties. The report says :

"The various processes for the extraction of the sugar from the best methods of clarifying the juice and of evaporating it and for separating the sugar from the molasses, are thoroughly well understood and are no longer legitimate subjects for public experiment. The great problem in this country is the agricultural one. The selection of suitable soil, the finding of the proper climatic conditions, and instruction to the method of planting, cultivating and harvesting the beets, are all matters of vital importance. Without a careful study of these subjects, and without the proper knowledge thereof, it will be a hopeless task to introduce successfully the beet-sugar industry into this country."

It has been found, as the result of careful experiment, that the coast valleys of California, and probably large areas near the coast in Oregon and Washington, certain parts of the Dakotas and Nebraska, localities in Minnesota, Iowa, Winconsin and Michigan, parts of Northern Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and New York present favorable conditions for sugar beet culture ; but in the localities thus broadly intimated there are certain restricted areas most suitable to the sugar-beet, and it is only in the restricted areas that success can be attained. Sugar-beets have been also raised in other localities in the United States, notably in New England, New Jersey, Delaware and Kansas, and while there may be areas in the New England States where beets can be successfully grown, the States last named stand in the second rank of beet-sugar producing localities.

The report details the fact that many attempts have been made during the past 25 years to introduce the beet-sugar industry into the United States. Factories have been located in the New England States, notably in Maine and Massachusetts, also in Delaware, in Illinois and in California. With two exceptions all of these ventures have brought with them financial disaster. The factories in New England, Delaware and Illinois and some of those started in California, have been abandoned. One factory in California has been very successfully operated for a number of years, the one at Alvarado. Another one, at Watsonville, has been in successful operation for two years. From the success of these two, it is reasonable to infer that others must also succeed when the proper conditions are supplied. A warning is given, however, by the report against reckless experiment where the climatic conditions are not known to be favorable and without adequate preparation. For the proper erection and completion of the beet-sugar factory not less than twelve months should be allowed, and even in this time it can only be properly accomplished under experienced technical control.—Washington Correspondent of N. Y. Commercial Bulletin.

TRUSTFULNESS.

A disinclination to put confidence in persons with whom one comes in contact, and a proneness to suspect their motives, says the Merchant's Review are traits of character not likely to make a man popular in social circles, but in business they may save their possessor many disappointments and possibly a good deal of money. The open-hearted, ingenous individual, in whose generous bosom there is no room for suspicions of others, generally cuts a poor figure in business, becoming the prey of the unscrupulous and crafty, and generally landing pretty close to the poor house. Many otherwise shrewd and prudent men of business are more or less weak in this respect, and against the dictates of their Judgment repose a confidence in persons which ultimately is rudely shattered with unpleasant consequences for the too confiding victim. To this weakness, or nobility, of character, in whichever light it may be regarded, is due the larger portion of the annual losses from bad debts and from the dishonesty of partners or employes. Credit which is an excellent servant when treated properly, has become the bugaboo of a good many retail merchants simply because of the neglect of the simplest dictates of prudence and common-sense when it is being granted.

Too much trust is placed in the veracity of men whose reputation is either doubtful or past praying for, but when the time for a settlement arrives and the debt is discovered to be a dead loss, the credit system gets the blame, whereas the fault is clearly the creditor's, and under any system of doing business similar imprudence could not but lead to unpleasant results. In the matter of the hiring and the treatment of clerks, the unsuspicious and trusting merchant is at a great disadvantage compared with his more sagacious competitor who counts his friends by the number of dollars in his pocket, and hesitates to trust anyone until he has been thoroughly tested and found to be worthy of implicit confidence. Merchants who put an undue amount of confidence in newly-hired assistants sometimes are suddenly cured by the discovery that their money and goods are being stolen, but it is probable that there are a good many cases of pilfering by clerks that are never discovered, although the employers may be aware that a screw is loose somewhere but fail to locate it.

Of all easy, unsuspecting mortals, however, the business man of considerable experience who takes to himself a partner with doubtful or insufficient credentials, is most foolish as well as liable to suffer the most severely. Many a lucrative business has been thrown away and its owner ruined by a failure to exercise common prudence in selecting the proper person for partnership, when it has been advisable to increase the scope of the business. Whether the cause be the incapacity or dishonesty of the new partner, does not matter, so long as the result is the same.

Every now and then such cases are made public. Various reasons may be assigned for the failures, but the experienced observer needs no further information beyond the bare fact that at such a date the victim took a partner. It is the same in other respects and in all branches of business. The man who is suspicious and disinclined to put faith even in his own brother, will always have a better prospect of success than the man of unsuspecting disposition, who, no matter how pleasant a character either to contemplate in the abstract or to associate with in close intimacy, invariably "gets left."

A column of THE CANADIAN GROCER will from this issue be devoted to the Empire Tobacco Co., and they assure the readers of the paper that the matter will be changed often and made very interesting to the Trade.

About 11.30 Saturday night fire was discovered in Moore & May's general store Port Stanley. The stock was very badly damaged both by water and by smoke. The origin of the fire is a mystery. Mr. May had locked up at ten minutes past 10, and everything was all right then. Loss probably covered by insurance. The building is not very much damaged, and is covered by insurance.

The general stock of Sanderson & Hobbs, of Mount Elgin, was sold at auction a few days ago to Strath & Co., of Windsor, for 71 cents on the dollar.

The other night burglars entered the grocery store of John Thompson, at Enterprise, and, finding his cash box, broke it open and secured $750 in cash.

The grocery stock of W. J. Gibson Gananoque, was considerably damaged by fire on Friday night. The loss is said to be covered by insurance.

"W. C. Dillon, Forest, has sold his liquor business to W. H. Hoover, of Arkona, who will take possession in a few days. Mr. Dillon will go to London, where he is said to have obtained a position with Carling & Co."

The town council of West Toronto Junction has established the following license tariff within its borders:—Auctioneers per annum, $25; hawkers and pedlars, one horse, $50; hawkers and pedlars, on foot, $25; transient traders, $75; milk vendors, $1; butchers retail, $1; bagatelle tables, $25.

There was a largely attended meeting of the Hamilton wholesale and retail liquor dealers on the 18th inst, in the Board of Trade rooms. The object of the meeting was to prevent the adulteration of liquor by retailers, and to guard against the cutting of prices. The liquor dealers are anxions that the saloon-keepers should be charged a higher price for their supplies. If this is done the price of drinks will probably be increased, and this, as a prominent grocer put it, will be a decided temperance movement as it will put a stop to excessive drinking. Another meeting is to be held shortly in Toronto.

On the 25th ulta an interesting event occured at the residence of Mr. Thomas Brady, the well-known commercial traveller, Brockville being the marriage of his daughter to Mr. Ford A. Mansell, son of Mr. David Mansell, counties treasurer. The ceremony was performed by the Ven. Archdeacon Bedford-Jones, rector of St, Peters in the presence of a small party of relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties. The happy young couple left by the afternoon train for Jackson, Michigan, where they will reside, Mr. Mansell occupying the responsible position of manager in the largest mercantile establishment in that city.

The business quarter of Odessa was sadly reduced by a fire which swept through it on the 25th ult. It started in T. W. Milsap's general store, which building, along with the contiguous dwelling of the proprietor, was burnt to the ground. It extended to Bond's general store, totally destroying that. Other buildings devoted to trade were consumed, the total destruction swelling the loss up to about $12,000. Mr. Milsap's property was insured in the Agricultural Company of Watertown, N. Y., but for how much we have not learnt. Mr. Bond had $800 on his building and $1,000 on his stock, both we believe in the City Mutual, London, Ont.

A neat compactly bound little pamphlet of 125 pages has lately been issued by the National Confectioners' Association of the United States. It is the official record of the proceedings of that body in its seventh annual convention, held this year at Niagara Falls on the 8th and 9th of July. Many questions important to the trade represented in the assembly and important to dealers in the stock made by these were intelligently discussed and the solution of them was materially advanced. The careful and tasteful mode of registering the progress made, which has been adopted in the form of the publication of proceeding, must act as a block to the wheel between annual meetings, and so check retrograde tendencies.

An interesting occurrence occurred at the warehouse of Edward Adams & Co., wholesale grocers, London, Ont., the other evening. Mr. Jas. F. Smyth, who has for the past sixteen years been a traveller for the firm, having severed his connection to embark in business for himself as partner in the house of Smith & Duck, Windsor, his fellow-employes took the opportunity to present him with an address and silver tea service as a slight token of the regard and esteem in which Mr. Smyth is held by them. The recipient, though quite taken by surprise, made a feeling reply to the address presented to him, reciprocating the expressions of regret and affection contained therein. After many interchanges of good wishes and hopes for the success of Mr. Smyth in his new career, the pleasant gathering broke up by singing "Auld Lang Syne."

A Montreal despatch says. Some time ago Joseph Kane, a boy not yet fourteen, and three companions were found drunk by the police in the west end of the city and brought before the recorder. Thanks to the S. P. W. C., the boys were let off and enough evidence obtained to make out a case against the grocer at whose store the boys obtained the whiskey that made them drunk. The grocer, it is claimed knew that the boy Kane was the principal witness and on Monday last, while his mother was out, enticed him to his place and kept him there, denying the fact to the mother when she asked about him. He bought the boy a ticket to New York, and had his clerk accompany him to the train that evening, with instructions not to return to Montreal for three years. Through the efforts of the society the boy has been brought back from New York, and a warrant has been asked for on behalf of the society for the arrest of the grocer on a charge of kidnapping, which is punishable with seven years in the penitentary. The grocer has admitted having given the boy $5 at the latters own request to go to New York. The boy however, tells a different story, and says the grocer painted the most gorgeous picture of the life he would lead there. While looking for work, however, shortly after the lad's arrival in the big American city he was taken in charge by the police and finally handed over to the New York Anti-Cruelity Society, with which the Montreal society had communicated regarding the case.

According to reports from the Department Fisheries the Canadian mackerel catch of this year has been a great improvement on that of last season. The shore fishermen have been doing exceedingly well, and while the Canadian boats report improved catches the New England fleet has had considerably worse luck than last year. The total receipts of fresh mackerel at Boston from January 1, to September 19, as brought in by United States vessels, was 2,659 barrels, against 6,282, in the corresponding period last year. On the other hand, of fresh mackerel landed at Boston from Canada the total was 9,759, barrels, as against 5,552 in the same period last year. It is gratifying to learn that the increased catch of mackerel is by our own fishermen in boats within the three-mile limit, and means substantial returns to a large section of the fishing population of the Maraitime Provinces.

HOW DO YOU ADVERTISE?

Sometimes an advertiser complains that he never got any good out of his advertisement. Every editor or advertising canvasser hears this now and again. The disappointed grumbler always blames the paper. But did it ever occur to you, gentle sir, that it was the fault of your advertisement and not of the paper? How did you word it? "John Generality, Dealer in general Merchandise, Philadelphia, Pa." Now, what is there in that to particularly strike a reader? He sees thousands of such advertisements every day he walks the streets. He already buys of many such people, to whom he is bound by ties of tradition and friendship. Why should he buy of you? You are a stranger and untried. You neither excite his curiosity, appeal to his good judgment, nor tickle his pocket book. No wonder silence is your only return. Let us make a suggestion before you prepare your next change of copy or enter the paper. We do this in our own interest as well as yours. We both want you advertisement and want you to get good returns from it. You undoubtedly will if you go at it right. What have you to sell? Everything? Don't advertise it. Run over your stock. Select one article. Is it better than your neighbors's, cheaper than your neighbor's; something they are out of, or that is seasonable and in large demand? Determine which feature is best calculated to accomplish your end. Then word your announcement briefly and attractively, and send it to us. If you have patience and keep at it, we will guarantee, that you hear from it. An advertisement so worded and set will be read by every reader of the paper, and if there is anything in it worth considering, will lead to inquiry and sales.—Grocery World.

HOW TO SECURE AND HOLD TRADE.

London Grocer's Chronicle :—A good plan for getting and keeping trade has been by careful buying, small profits and cash trade, to offer the public genuine articles at a moderate rate of profit, thus competing with those stores where long credit is given, and consequent bad debts have to be borne, and high prices are charged for what are frequently inferior goods. The system is one which certainly commends itself to the prudent and thoughtful man. It is supported by the success which has attended its adoption, and very many of our readers will recall the names of men who stand high in the retail grocery trade who attained their position by acting upon the lines we have indicated. In our experience the men who have done business on these lines have shown the greater staying power, because their businesses have been built up on principles that in all departments of commerce are admittedly the best suited to the requirements of modern times. We know there are differences of opinion about these systems by some who claim to have been very successful holding by each of the first three mentioned. We are not so dogmatic as to say the last system, which we commend, is the only true one, but we do say that it seems to be the soundest now in vogue. Bonuses to customers, whether in "presents" or in cash, may be an attractive bait to a certain section of the public—that section which loves to be gulled, and which, one philosopher tells us, constitutes one-half of the world. But the other half are, we believe, the best to do business with, and there can be no doubt that they want, and will have, the best article for the least money consistent with a moderate profit, and they will go where they can get it. Our verdict, therefore, is against bonuses, and in favor of cash, small profits, quick turnover and first-class value.—Ex.

DRUM TAPS.

Leaves from the Diary of a Commercial Traveller.

BY WM. H. MAHER.

CHAPTER III.

So Mr. Rhinecamp "did not understand English," and all my eloquence was wasted. Well, even that was better than to have had him say, "I don't want anything," and I began to think about the next move. Clearly there was nothing for me to do but to utilize the customer for an interpreter, though I would have given considerable if I had been able to talk German.

"Will you please tell Mr. Rhinecamp that I am in the hardware business?" I asked the "mutual friend."

"Yaw."

And they exchanged a few sentences, the only word distinguishable to me being the word "hartsvare." Then Mr. Rhinecamp nodded to me and I nodded back.

"Ask him if he wants anything in my line—table knives, pocket knives, spoons, or anything of that kind."

The end of their exchange was a "nein," which I did not need to have translated.

"Does he want any woodenware, clothespins, wash-boards, mop-sticks, or anything in that line?"

"Nein," was the result again.

"Where does he buy his goods?"

Another confab in German, and then to me:

"He say, he not know. Mishter Rhinecamp was not in de shtore mooch; de shtore belong to his brooder Fritz, and Fritz go away for a few days. So Mister Rhinecamp not know mooch apout the peesness."

No, I should think he didn't. And here I had been wasting my time and talk for nothing. If I had said what was on my tongue, I would have told the interpreter he was an ass for not telling me this in the first place, but I concluded sugar-coated pills would go farther, so I said I would be obliged to Mr. Rhinecamp if he would hand my card to his brother, and if he wanted any hardware we would do the fair thing by him. Then with a "good day" I left them.

I still had my fortune before me; where would I try next? The first store that I come to, said I to myself, and that was a large dry goods and grocery store. I say "large;" it was large for a country town, though it would have made but a poor show in the city.

There were two or three men behind the counters waiting on customers, and I made my way to the stove without doing more than giving them a bow. As soon as one was at leisure I stepped up to him and inquired for the proprietor. He pointed him out to me, saying his name was Atkins, and then I fell back to wait until Mr. Atkins was less busy.

He seemed to know I was anxious to see him, and the knowledge made him slower in getting away from his customers. I have seen this same trait in men many and many a time since then. From their manner I could swear that they were taking special pains to delay meeting me, as if they enjoyed my suspense and torture. At last I was to enter the field in earnest, and while I wanted to get at work, still I dreaded breaking the ice.

In time the customers were gone, and I walked toward him; I wanted to do my talking where the others would not hear; thinking that, if he snubbed me, it would be less humiliating.

He gave me a cool nod in answer to my very respectful bow, and looked me all over very critically, I thought. "Mr. Atkins," said I, handing him my card, "I represent the hardware house of Heman & Co., and I called in to see if there was anything in that line you were in need of."

"I don't believe I need anything to-day," said he, glancing at the card.

I couldn't take that for an answer, so I struck out again.

"You have a fine stock of dry goods and groceries, sir; I suppose you find it necessary to keep a little hardware."

"Oh, yes, we keep a little."

"Have you ever been in our house, sir?"

"Not that I remember."

"I suppose your hardware trade does not amount to enough to make it wise for you to keep a very large stock, but you must keep an assortment of farming tools?"

"Yes, we keep a few."

"Have you usually bought in our city?"

"No, I buy East altogether."

"Yes, I should suppose you would buy such things as dry goods and groceries East—they are bulky, and the freight is quite an item; but in our line, shelf hardware and farming tools, the freight is scarcely enough to mention. With most farming tools, for instance, the manufacturers pay the freight, so that they cost us the same in our store that they do the largest houses in New York in their stores."

I wanted to make this point, but I saw he was not much interested in it, and I concluded I would get him to talk about himself. As I read him he was a man of considerable conceit, and it was my business to discover this and then act accordingly. If I have been successful as a salesman, it has been because I have been quick to discover the weak spot in my customers. "Have you been long in business here, Mr. Atkins?"

"About four years."

"Have you done a satisfactory trade since you began?"

"Oh, yes; we've managed to live." He said this with an air as if he meant to add "and made lots of money."

"Still," said I, "I should have thought you would come down to the city instead of starting here. See the blockheads that make money there, while a good business man like you chooses to stay here in the country." This was a feeler; I wanted to see if he would swallow a little flattery. I went in on the general principle that no business man is quite satisfied with his business; if he is in the country, he wants to be in the city; if a city retailer, he wants to be a wholesaler; if a wholesale merchant, he wants to be an importer, and so on. I touched Mr. Atkins on a living spot.

"Then you think I ought to have gone to the city, eh?"

"Yes, I should have supposed you would, and I venture to predict that you will some day; the country is a good place to make money in, but when you have made it, then the city is the place to live."

"Well, I guess you are right; and if I have good luck a few years longer you'll see me down your way. I've been figuring on it for some time, but no one here guesses it."

"Are you much acquainted down our way?" I asked.

"No, scarcely any."

"That's a mistake," said I. "You ought to get acquainted with the business houses, and it will be just that much pleasanter for you when you come there to live."

"Oh, I can get acquainted easy enough."

"Yes; but see how much nicer it will be to move there, and have men meet you and know you, than to have to build up an entire acquaintance. Now, if I were you, I would trade a little, just enough to keep your name on the books and give you an excuse to run in and sit down in each of the wholesale houses."

"I can't buy as cheap there as I do East."

"I don't know how it may be in other goods, but I can sell you hardware as cheap as any Eastern house dare do it. I don't want to bore you by talking about my house, Mr. Atkins, but I want to say this: I am going to travel over this route regularly; I am going to build up a trade on it, and I expect to do it by selling goods right and treating everyone well. It doesn't matter to you whether you buy of me or of Russell & Erwin, New York, providing you buy right; but it matters to me whether I sell you or not. This is my first trip; if you can possibly scrape up a little order for me, you will be doing me a favor I shall not soon forget; and if you find I don't do what is fair and right, don't ever buy a dollar's worth of me again. I'm a pretty good fellow, and I know if you will try me, you and I will do lots of business together hereafter."

This was coming right down to business. I said this as earnestly as it was in me to say it, and I talked right to him, not at the ceiling nor at the floor, but right into his eyes. Would it do any good? A man sometimes sticks to "no" just because he has once said it; I was afraid he was going to say no, and I still had an argument to bring in, so I did not wait for him to answer.

"You have been young and worked your way up," I continued, "and you can understand just how a fellow feels who is going over the same ground. This is my first trip; if I do at all well I shall have the route right along, and I will have advanced a step; if I don't succeed in making it pay, I will go back to the desk and probably stick there. I don't ask you to favor me at the expense of a cent to yourself; on the contrary, I think I will make it for your interest. The house allows me to cut close where I think it is necessary, and you shall have my bottom prices."

"But I don't know of anything I need just now."

That was a cheery remark to hear, though it may not look so on paper. His voice told me that I had made an impression on him, and if he was willing to buy, provided there was anything he wanted, I felt myself able to convince him that he needed something.

"Have you done anything about your shovels and spades for spring?"

"No, it's early yet."

"I can arrange the time all right."

"Well, let's see some of your prices."

(Victory, victory, victory! When a man asks for your prices, you have him; he has said to himself that he is going to buy.)

We went into the back room where his farming tools were, and he picked up a shovel.

"What can you sell me such a shovel as that for?"

It was a Philadelphia shovel, and bought the year before; in the meantime the price had gone down, so when I quoted my price, it made an impression on him, it was so much below what his goods were marked.

"Are your shovels equal to this?"

"They are the same goods."

"How about spades?"

"Spades cost the same as shovels on all goods but Ames'."

"You said you would make the time right; what did you mean?"

"I meant this: the shovel trade will not open for a couple of weeks yet, and to offset that, if you will give me your order, I will give you sixty days on the bill; that is thirty days better than New York is doing."

He went into the store, talked with one of his clerks, came back and put his hand on my shoulder. "I'm going to give you a small order on the strength of what you say, and if you do what is fair you shall have my hardware trade."

I thanked him, but I was too happy just then to speak plainly. In my first engagement I had won.

. TORONTO, October 2, 1890.

GROCERIES.

A very fair week's trade is reported by the wholesalers. In no line was there exceptional activity, but in the gross a reasonably good average was maintained. The demand for sugar was not an important element in the business that was done. In canned goods, in dried fruits, above all in tea, there has been no decline from the level of trade kept up last week. Payments are far from satisfactory.

CANNED GOODS.

Last week's report got into the hands of our readers without being read in the proof, and several errors obscure the meaning. In the first line "entirely" should be "unlikely." In the third sentence "lights" was printed for "heights." The fourth sentence should have stopped at "weather," and the next word after "weather" should have been "What." Omissions in punctuation marks here and there also throw a haze over the sense. Old tomatoes are selling at $1.10 to $1.20. For new tomatoes one jobber refused $1.10 for 500 cases for future delivery. Uncertainty still hangs over the market for this year's pack. The crop is abundant, but whether the pack will be large or not depends upon whether the fine weather will last long enough to ripen it. The demand for vegetables is very good, and for fruits rather quiet. There is a better feeling in the salmon market, latest reports from the coast favoring the probability that there will be an early advance. An offer for a lot at considerably higher prices than those current last week is said to have been refused by a British Columbia canner. For the present, however, quotations are unchanged.

COFFEES.

Prices retain the firmness noted week by week since midsummer, but no additional advance has been made since our last issue. The stock at all Atlantic ports is said to be light, less than 180,000 bags.

DRIED FRUIT.

The stock of new Valencia raisins is yet limited, and prices consequently are high, standing this week at 8 to 8¼c. Next week will see plenty of Valencias here, and prices are expected to come down. New Sultanas are in and for sale at 13 to 15c. Currants are in liberal supply. Old Patras are 6 to 6¼c. in barrels. New Filiatras in barrels are 6¼ to 6½c., half-barrels 6½ to 6⅝c. Old Filiatras are 5¾ to 6c. in barrels, and 5⅞ to 6c. in half-barrels. Half-cases of Vostizzas are 9½ to 10c. There is a stock of 5-crown Excelsior currants in cases to be had at 9½ to 10c. The samples of new crop currants appear not to come up to the quality of the 1889 crop, of which there is a residum of good value yet on this market. New Eleme figs have been received since last report. In 14 ounce boxes they are 12 1-2c., in 10 lb. boxes they are 14c., and in 20 lb. boxes 15c. Natural figs, recently arrived, are 8c. in 28 lb. boxes. Figs are likely to be dear as the crop is short. Dates are 5¾ to 6c., having advanced a quarter of a cent. New dates will not be in for a month or six weeks.

NUTS.

No notable increase in trade is observable. A quiet demand is all that is felt in the local market. Outside influences maintain prices.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is in fair demand at unchanged prices, but these are firm. In Bengal, floods are reported to have seriously damaged the crop. Spices are receiving a moderate amount of attention. There is no special in the market.

SUGAR.

Sales have been light this week, showing a considerable falling off in the demand as it stood a fortnight ago Prices keep up, granulated being yet quotable at the prices that have been standing in our list for some weeks. Yellow runs from 5¼ to 6½c. Low grades are scarce.

Gillett & Hamlen, New York, write as follows: Raws declined 1-16c. Refined unchanged. Receipts 14,701 tons. Meltings 22,628 tons. Stocks decreased 7,927 tons, and 30,903 tons since September 1. Consumption through the four ports is 95,053 tons larger than last year. Refiners' stocks are 40,495 tons less than last year, and are now 38,247 tons. The continued melting of refiners' stock, without replenishing, keeps the market extremely dull from week to week, in spite of a condition of supply and demand favorable to higher prices. Large purchases must soon be made if the consumption goes on at present rates, and indications points to requirements of 100,000 tons more from Europe this year. The decline abroad, owing to more favorable beet sugar prospects, caused some holders here to weaken, resulting in a small decline for the week. The consumption of refined during this month is unexpectedly large in view of the fact of almost entire failure of the fruit crops. The tariff agitation has, no doubt, kept stocks of refined very small in the country, and the postponement of free sugar until next March may be increasing these stocks. Total stock in all the principal countries, by latest uneven dates, is 489,758 tons, against 412,008 tons at same time last year.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The demand for syrups is but fairly active. Molasses increases in firmness and has made an advance since last week. Trinidad and Porto Rico puncheons are 36 to 38c. The sharp advance was due to the continued strength of the demand from the United States. Before the late buying spell of importers in that country the stock in New York had sunk to 1,100 puncheons. The need for supplies as well as the anticipation of the 4c. duty, which the Aldrich amendment has left optional with the President of the United States to impose next week, drove the Boston and New York importers on the market at this particular time. The local demand for molasses is very good.

TEAS.

Low grades continue to get further out of reach. There is no longer any Young Hyson under 20c. Japans are as firm and as scarce as ever, while inquiry is nuabated. Blacks are receiving a portion of the attention which naturally drifts towards low-priced greens and Japans. The stock of blacks is rather full and prices are easy. There has been good local enquiry for Indian teas. In London the market remains in a strong and healthy position, and the value of the article points still further upwards. A larger quantity than has appeared in any single week since the commencement of the season, has been offered by auction since our last report, amounting to no less than 22,000 packages of all descriptions, and importers have been pretty free sellers; but as a greater portion of the supply has consisted of finer qualities of Pekoes, possessing both strength and flavor, than were to be found in the earlier arrivals, the demand has increased, and where the competition has been extra keen very stiff and higher prices have been paid.

will also bring grand returns this season, under their system of re-packing into fancy packages.

The most active enquiry has been for grades under 1s., both Pekoe and Pekoe Souchong having attracted a good deal of attention, and sold readily at an advance of ¼ to ½d. Although the principal enquiry has been for these descriptions, it has by no means been confined to them, as the demand for the better grades has improved considerably, the finer qualities especially, which have been more largely offered, having fetched very high prices. The latest advices from Calcutta report a strong market, and common grades dearer.

PETROLEUM.

The prices current a week ago and requoted in this issue are very firm. Business has improved very perceptibly.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

The regular trade has been transacted at steady prices, in which no alteration has been made.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

There is a very small percentage of the butter received that can be classified as prime, and a not much larger percentage in the remainder that can be graded as medium. The quantity of butter is as large as ever, and the quality no better than ever. Pound rolls are worth 18 to 20c., and very good butter comes upon the market in this form. Large dairy rolls are 14 to 16c., and are not plentiful. Dairy tub of the best quality is 13 to 15c., and medium is 11 to 13c. Creamery tub is 20 to 22c., and creamery roll is 23 to 24c.

Cheese is firm at 9¼ to 9¾c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—The market is not yet settled, old still going at $1.80 to $2, and the growers of the new crop being still high in their demand, $1.75 to $1.85 being the price asked.

DRIED APPLES—Are 7 to 8c., and but few of them to be had.

EVAPORATED APPLES—For small lot of new an offer of 12½c. was refused on Tuesday. Holders are asking up to 13c. and retarding business. No stock is yet on the market, but samples are submitted and lots are offered for future delivery.

EGGS—Are very firm at 18 to 19c. Their scarcity is more marked as the date approaches for the enforcement of the McKinley Act. After that measure comes into operation the price of eggs is expected to decline.

HAY—Is in plentiful supply at $9 to $9.50 on track.

HIDES — Cured are unchanged at 8c. Green are 7c. for No. 1, and 6c. for No. 2, cows.

HONEY—There is no change. The best extracted is 12½c., medium is 11c., and low grades are 7 to 8c.

HOPS—Are hard to get. Only a few bales of the new crop bought for immediate use. The price is 30 to 35c., and this the growers firmly keep up. A buyer offered 32½c., for a lot wanted for immediate consumption, but the stock could not be got. Last year's crop is also firm at 20c. and upwards.

OATS—Are selling at 40 to 42c. on track.

ONIONS—Are now in pretty free receipt and bring $2.25 to $2·50 per barrel.

POTATOES—Car lots are 60 to 65c. Farmers' receipts are 65 to 70c. Store lots are 70 to 75c. The supply is liberal.

POULTRY—Chickens are 50 to 65c., ducks are 60 to 75c. per pair, and turkeys are 9c. per lb.

SKINS—Sheep are 85c., and the market is equal to a larger supply.

STRAW—Oat is advanced and firm at $6 to $6.50.

TALLOW—Rough is 2c., and rendered is 5½c.

WOOL—Prices are easing as the American market begins to show signs of overstocking, consequent of the activity of the demand in that market which the prospective increase in duty awakened. Fleeces are now 20c. Clothing wool is 22c.

FISH.

There has been a very fair shipment this week, especially trout, as the catch in October is always ahead of any during the season. White fish are very scarce, only a few are to be had. Lake herring are being received in small shipments at present, and are still selling at last week's prices. Shipments of British Columbia salmon have been received, every day, this week, and are in very fair demand. Yellow pickerel are in fair request at 5c. There are a few black bass to be had at last week's quotations. The first shipment of pike has been received this week, and bids fair to be in good demand throughout the season. The prices are: Trout, 6½ to 7c.; white fish, 8c.; British Columbia salmon, 15c.; lake herring, $2.50 to $3; pickerel, 5c.; black bass, 9c.; pike, 4 to 5c.

MARKETS—Continued.

GREEN FRUIT.

There is a very quiet trade now done by the green fruit jobbers. There is little demand and prices are high. The season, as well as the demand, has something to do with the stiffness of prices. The scarcity of stock, particularly of lemons, is another cause. Jamaica oranges are $7 to $7.50. Fancy lemons are $8.50 to $9 For stock that is not so fine prices run from $7 to $8. The banana trade is slow and is about over. Prices are 75c. to $1.75.

PROVISIONS.

Business continues good. In all lines there is a good life sustaining demand, and prices are consequently firm. Smoked meats are particularly good stock just now, and hams are getting scarce. Long clear is in good request. Hogs are coming in more freely.

BACON—Long clear is 8 to 8¾c. Backs are 10½ to 11c. Bellies are 10½ to 11c. Rolls are 9½ to 10c.

DRESSED HOGS—Are worth $6.25 to $6.50.

HAMS—Are firm at 13c. for smoked, and 11c. for sweet pickled.

LARD—Is 9¼ to 10c.

MESS PORK—Is $15.50 to $16.50.

DRY GOODS.

Trade has fallen below the level of the business done for three weeks anticedent to this one. There has been no dulness, however. Money has not been set in circulation yet, and buying runs in sorting orders chiefly. Also, payments are not up to the mark. Prices are unchanged.

SALT.

Both large and small lots of salt are in very good request. Dairy salt sales transacted this week are very good at this time of the year. Prices will be noticed to be the same as last week. The Toronto Salt Works transacted the following sales for the week. Two cars bbl. salt at $1.40; 2 cars sacks at 70c.; 2 cars dairy at $1.20. Smaller quantities sell at $1.50 to $1.55 for bbls.; 80 to 85c. for sacks, and 50 to 55c. for ¼ sacks.

MONTREAL

MONTREAL MARKETS.

OCT. 3, 1890.

GROCERIES.

With the exception of pronounced and remarkable activity in one line which is due to a special cause, the grocery market has been rather quiet here during the week. This exception was wines and spirits and as will be seen by the appended there was quite a turnover of them.

WINES AND LIQUORS.

There has been a regular boom in fine brandies, wines, etc., caused by heavy buying on American account of goods in bond which are being sent across the line rapidly for the purpose of evading the increased duties that the McKinley bill will call for. The activity has been more particularilly confined to the stock of Hennesseys, Martels, and other fine brandies in bond, but champagne and everything else of fine quality has also come in for attention. In fact there is no stock in bond at all, to speak of at the moment, and there is likely to be a scarcity here until the direct steamer arrives. All the leading importers have cleared off their stocks, while the smaller dealers who have a connection along the border have been doing an active business in 500 case lots, and it is estimated at the very least, that the transaction during the week will aggregate in the vicinity of $40,000 to $50,000 worth of fine stock. This activity has been the main feature of the market during the week, as in other lines attached to groceries, there has been no very particular feature.

FRUIT.

There has been nothing of very special mention in foreign dried fruit during the week. The Parisian and Oregon's lots of Valencias have attracted some attention, and there has been business in them at 7c., but there are still sellers to arrive by the direct steamer, at 6 to 6½c., according to quality. Another advance in Sultana raisins in London, has placed them bevond the reach of the Canadian trade this fall; as the jump from 38 to 60s. in London precludes the idea. Elemes are also very likely to be very scarce and high. The old stock of these two lines has been all cleared out of first hands beyond a few odd lots that may be offering here and there. Recent advices quote an advance of 1s. in currants at Patras, and prices to arrive in consequence are ⅛c. higher, the quotation being a firm one at 5⅞ to 6c.

SUGAR.

Since the turnover of raw stock which occurred last week this market has adopted a quieter and if anything easier feeling, but there is no change in prices which continue unchanged. Refiners report a quiet business at 5¼ to 6c. for yellows and 6¾ to 6⅞c. for granulated.

SPICES.

There has been no change in this branch of the grocery trade during the week, and business on the whole is rather quiet. Stocks are light, while prices are pretty firmly held as a general thing.

APPLES.

The large stocks of summer varieties which were pressing on the market a couple of weeks ago have all been cleared off by this time, and now early fall and late summer lines are offering. These comprise principally St. Lawrence, which meet with a pretty ready sale at $3 to $3.50 per barrel. In winter stock holders are disinclined to quote prices at the moment, and since the business we noted last week advanced $3.50, there has been nothing doing except the sale of a very large line of stock in the west by a Montreal house to a western company. The terms were kept private, but were somewhere around the figure mentioned above. The dicker was closed on Friday last,and involved it is claimed some 15,000 barrels of good keeping varieties. We do not hear of any further news from Great Britain, while it is evident from the general tone of holders that stock in the west are pretty well controlled now. In fact, as we stated last week, the market is in four or five hands to all intents and purposes, and Montreal houses are right on deck where there are any pickings to be had. In view of this difference regarding quotations it is difficult to quote, but as we stated last week straight offers of $3.75 to $4 are being made for best.

TEA AND COFFEE.

There has been no particular feature to the tea market since our report of a week ago, but the feeling is distinctly firm. Although business is rather quieter than it has been, and Japans worth 16 to 20c. are scarce, and dust is firm at 9c. or thereabouts. Advices regarding Black show a stiffening tendency and are very scarce generally. The coffee market continues firm, but we have no business of importance to mention.

RICE.

No business of importance has transpired in the rice market, beyond a fair distributive movement. We quote common $2.70 ; Japan $4.10 to $4.25 ; and Patna $5.50.

CANNED GOODS.

Canned goods move in a small way, and prices as a general thing are steady. It is expected that the pack of tomatoes in this district will be 50 per cent. less than last year, or about 20,000 cases. Prices are quotable at $1 7½ to $1 10. Corn is expected to be a large pack, and the asking figures are $1 to $1 05.

HOPS.

The market presents the same features, and there is no business to note with consumers. Jobbers are picking up stock here and there throughout the country, mostly on a basis of 25c. at the cars, but it is not every grower that will part with his stock at these figures, indeed some of them stipulate for considerably over this. Brewers are not in the market yet, and still claim to have supplies ahead for a considerable period.

EGGS.

There has been nothing particular to note about the egg market during the week. Receipts have been fair, but the demand has been steady and prices have ruled around 16½ to 17½c. according to quality.

BUTTER.

The position of the butter market is essentially unchanged. There is a good jobbing enquiry for late made selections of dairy and creamery, but the high ideas entertained by country holders precludes the idea of anything like a general business. We quote: Late made creamery, 20 to 21c.; summer makes, 17 to 18c.; finest Townships dairy, 18 to 20c.; Western dairy 14 to 14½c.; medium dairy, 10 to 12c.

CHEESE.

Country holders have not altered their position or English buyers their bids, so that business is still confined to an irregular picking up trade of lots that could be turned over around 50 per cent., which is the highest that the Englishman will go so far. On this basis there has been quite a little business in the aggregate on spot, that is to say, around 10 to 10⅛c., and the market here is pretty well cleared up outside of what lines the big shippers have in store, except a few "tail ends" which are knocking about and don't amount to anything. In the townships the August make is all sold up, but the same cannot be said of Ontario sections, as factorymen have not been urging sales, so that there must be quite a lot of August yet to account for. We quote nominally as follows: Fine September's, 10 to 10½c.; late made August's, 9⅝ to 9¾c.; early August's, 9 to 9⅜c.; finest July's, 8¾ to 9c.; medium grades, 8c.; cable, 45s.

PROVISIONS.

There has been a fair jobbing movement during the week. Lard is very strong and local refiners are now asking $1.00 per pail for 500 pail lots, while some refiners refuse to sell at this figure. We quote:—Canadian short cut, per brl, $17.50 to $18; mess pork, western, per brl, $16.50 to $17; short cut, western, per brl, $17 to $17.50; hams, city cured, per lb, 12c to 12½c; hams, canvassed, per lb, 12½c to 13c; lard, western, pails, per lb, 9c to 9¼c; lard, Canadian, in pails, 8¼c to 8½c; lard, C.O.P., 10½c; bacon, per lb, 9c to 10c; lard, com., refined, per lb, 7¾ to 8c.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

There has been only a small jobbing business in flour during the week while in grain there have been no important features. The stock of flour in store shows a decrease of 1,026,bbls. compared with a week ago, and 15,210,-bbls. compared with the same date last year. There is an increase of 169 bbls. in the stock of oatmeal compared with a week ago and a decrease of 541 bbls. compared with that of the same date last year. The stock of grain in store, compared with those of a week ago, show an increase of 10,021 bushels of wheat, 7,217 bushels of corn, 682 bushels of rye, and a decrease of 5,502 bushels of peas, 10,437 bushels of oats. Compared with the same date last year there is a decrease of 153,691 bushels of wheat, 6,508 bushels of barley and an increase of 1,907 bushels of corn, 14,231 bushels of peas and 2,164 bushels of oats.

NEW ENGLAND GROCERS' IN MONTREAL.

An interesting event to the trade, this week, in Montreal, was the visit of the Grocers' Association of New England, who spent a couple of days in the city on the occasion of their regular annual excursion. They were right royally entertained during their stay in the city, who had a review of the fire brigade in their honor, as well as their confreres of the trade here. Mr. Alex. Fraser, President of the Grocers' Association, and a committee of that body showed them the principal sights, and on the day of the review they were entertained to luncheon by Messrs. Chaput, Fils & Cie, wholesale grocers.

THE MISTAKES OF ADVERTISERS.

I sat in my pew the other night and heard the dominie give out the words of the great King Solomon: "The mistakes of my life have been many, and in the bitterness of my heart I cried out: 'Fool, fool, fool?" It occured to me at the time that if his audience had been made up of certain advertisers we all know, they could very appropriately rise in their places and greet that sentiment with cheers.

It is really a matter of amazement to me that men, who are hard-headed, commonsense beings on every other subject, should dismiss their wits when they approach the advertising field. It is painful to quote individual cases, and when I do so it is done with the utmost charity and for the good of the cause at large. It is peculiarly distressing to observe a man so handling a factor in his business that, instead of being a help, it becomes a hinderance, and it is with the hope of being a little assistance in just such a case that I take the liberty of criticising the work of others, though not unmindful that I have still much to learn myself, and expect to die with my education incomplete.

Not long ago the Scotch Oats Essence Co., of New York, sought to place a remedy in the market for the cure of nervous disorders, indigestion, etc., etc. One of their advertisements asked the question:

Why is the circumflex of the circumlocution equal to the apex?

And the answer was:

Because an elephant can't climb a tree.

I forgot to say that this was prefixed by the cut of a forty-one ton elephant climbing a rose bush. The question and answer were followed with a little ordinary reading matter leading up to the efficacy of Scotch Oats Essence as a tonic and cure for stomach troubles; and the whole thing was about the most absurd affair that had appeared in New York papers for some time, which is saying a good deal. The climax to this sort of work was reached a few weeks later, when a vulgar burlesque appeared on that popular song, "Empty is the Cradle—Baby's Gone," wherein was shown an empty cradle, a weeping mother and an angel bearing a bottle of Scotch Oats Essence. I am not discussing the merits or demerits of this song. It was tremendously popular at the time, and many a heart was touched by its simplicity and pathos. Nothing could have been more brutal than such a perversion, and the prejudice this created made it impossible to do further business. Various sums are stated as the total loss involved. Sufficient is known, however, to prove that not a cent was saved from the wreck. So we may all breathe freer.

I cite this case in refutation of the theory that all a man need do in advertising is to attract attention. This work, undoubtedly, attracted attention, but in a wrong spirit. The "good will" was lacking, and without the good will it was impossible to do business. You can't sell goods to people who dislike you. It was poor advertising, yet there are several cases almost parallel now running in the leading mediums. I do not like to specify them, but let each man think for himself. If you recall an advertisement that went in against your judgement, that doesn't read just right, take it out. It is making or breaking you.

The nature of one's business must be the sole factor in determining the style of advertising. A strictly first-class business cannot be handled in the same manner that a commoner grade of goods calls for. You can't call on the big men in New York, for instance, and slap them on the back, and ask them out to take a drink. Yet a drummer can do that with the small dealers, and it "goes down" all right. It is the difference in the trade for which you are catering, and must be recognized in advertising the same as in canvassing.

Is Honest Goods and just the Thing on Which to Make or Extend a Business.

COOK'S FRIEND BAKING POWDER.

The Best Grocers Make a Point of Keeping it always in Stock.

WHAT THE DEALER RISKS.

When a man purchases goods at your store and asks credit, says the Western Merchant, you either give it to him or you do not, according to the circumstances under which you may be doing business at the time.

If you are doing a credit business, and advance credit to him upon request, have you stopped to consider what are the risks you assume? We presume not. But to the extent to which you extend credit to a man you place your business interests in his power, without much redress. He offers you no security, save faith in his honor, which may be entirely untried. He engages to meet his obligations on no special day. He gives you no schedule of his affairs, as you are obliged to do when you seek credit. He simply presents a bold request for accommodation for goods. In other words, he uses your business as a means to live ahead of his income.

You assume, in the first place, that the man is honest. A comfortable assumption, but one often grievously disappointed. Then you assume that his affairs are prosperous, of which you can only make a valueless hazard. If he is honest and his affairs are in good condition, you must add the assumption that he will meet with no unexpected reverses, and that he and his family will remain living in good health. If this impossible condition could be continued, the misguided man who gets trusted might, in ages to come, succeed in getting enough together to pay his debts, but as it cannot be hoped for in this world of transition, he will—unless he reforms—die with unsettled obligations, which will be a source of trouble to his creditors and executors. The poor, defunct creditor—who, whatever his credentials, will probably not be able to secure credit in the next world—usually leaves no property to pay his debts with, and bequeaths only a heritage of misery and suffering for his wife and penniless children.

Such is the unhappy fate of the impecunious debtor. And what of the creditor? Unless he is a man of unusual discernment in reading character, and with a very strong mind which permits him to refuse credit with suavity and decision, he will succeed in carrying on his business, perhaps, but only by yielding up the profits on his cash business—which should be added to his capital stock of investment fund—to make good the losses on his credit business. Is it worth while to do business with these men who get trusted, only to be obliged to pay for the privilege in the end? We think not.

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday's yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

DO NOT GET ABOVE YOUR BUSINESS.

One reason why so many young storekeepers fail is that they are unwilling at the start to attend to the drudgery that is necessary in conducting it. They shirk whenever they can, duties which they could perform without difficulty, leaving their work to be done by subordinates who do not do it with care, but in an indifferent manner. The storekeeper who is not ashamed to roll up his sleeves and set a good example to his clerks is the one who stands a good show of meeting with success. We like to see a storekeeper who does not feel above his business; who does not consider it beneath him to personally attend to the numerous details which are likely to come up before him at any moment. There are men who, rather than take off their coat and roll a barrel into a wagon and perhaps personally deliver it to a customer, will wait for some clerk or subordinate to come and do it for them, or perhaps lose the sale of the goods for the sake of satisfying their foolish sense of false pride.

There is a good story told of the daughter of a man who recently died and left her the heir to several millions of property. Not long after a reporter called to interview her and found her washing the back steps of the spacious mansion in which she resided. She blushed slightly and laughed heartily, and when he asked her if it was not a little uncommon for a young lady of her position to wash steps, she replied, if a good many girls would do just as she did they would be a great deal better off in health, and it wouldn't hurt them either.

Now, there is a good moral in this, not only for storekeepers, but their clerks and employes. There is nothing disgraceful in honest labor, no matter if it does soil the hands a little. It is a great deal more respectable than to be living off the industry of other people, or waiting for some one else to do work which one can just as well do himself. The most foolish thing a man can get into his head is to feel above his business. When this idea possesses him it is better for him and better for the business he is engaged in to close out and engage in something else at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. J. C. Davison, the Eastern representative of the Chapman & Smith Company, Chicago, baking powder, called on us on Monday.

Representatives of THE CANADIAN GROCER have often been asked by country merchants, who built the Prize Grocer Waggon in Toronto, the answer is to be found in the advertisement of Messrs. Ewart & Johnston, in another column of this paper. This firm do not advertise their waggons as cheaper than can be had elsewhere, but they guarantee good workmanship and first-class seasoned material. They are hand-made and built for service, and when that is taken into consideration they are the cheapest. Messrs. Ewart & Johnston will be in their large new shops by Oct. 1st., where their facilities for filling orders will be greatly improved.

An Australian paper has burst out into Welsh poetry. Unfortunately, says the Manchester Grocers' Review, it comes rather too late for this year's Eisteddfod. Perhaps it will do for 1891. Here it is :—

SPECIAL TO OUR READERS.

As the design of THE CANADIAN GROCER is to benefit mutually all interested in the business, we would request all parties ordering goods or making purchases of any description from houses advertising with us to mention in their letter that such advertisement was noticed in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

THE TRAVELLER'S MOULDING INFLUENCE.

There is but one existing agency which has in itself the possibility to become a power equal to and co-ordinate with the trade press. It is that great arm of commercial service, the travelling department. In it lies the germ, already somewhat developed, of a usefulness not foreseen in the mission to which the traveller was called. The traveller came to facilitate business between wholesaler and retailer. He came when the field of trade had become enlarged, and the shares in it had grown more numerous. When the retailer had more wholesale sources of supply to choose from, when he need not return to any house for re-stocking, the circumstances which invoked the traveller were at work. The mountain was becoming less likely to go to Mahomet, and so Mahomet went to the mountain. In the traveller the wholesale establishment became portable and ubiquitous, instead of stationary and indivisible. Now it is, virtually, wherever one of its travellers is. The original Mahomet has multiplied himself. The primary function of the traveller was to make trade, and he made it. Through his mediation there has been an increase of wants that the voluntary movement of retail trade, with no pre-sure from the source of supply, would not have produced for perhaps a score of years yet. He who increases the wants of a people is an influential minister of trade. Commercial travellers have done nearly as much to increase the wants of the people, as the increase in internal production has done.

But there is another modern condition of trade in which the impress of the travellers' handiwork may be traced. It is the assimilation of trade methods. Travellers are contributing their quota to this effect, which is now in course of attainment. It is in this work that the salesmen of the road may be considered the allies of the trade press. Like the latter medium the travelling fraternity is a diffuser of ideas and a circulator of late intelligence to and from the seat of distribution. Ideals may differ with different men. Among a hundred men there may be fifty or even a hundred distinct conceptions of beauty, music, tint, etc., and even such clearly apprehended things as justice, patriotism, etc., etc., may be questions of argument with some men. But after all, there is but one test of perfection or worth of any kind, and that is truth. To harmonize the different conceptions of business rectitude, policy, or method, there must be investigation constantly at work upon these conceptions to extract from them what is essential to a general ideal. The men who have the best chance of doing the observing which is necessary for this induction are undoubtedly our travelling salesmen. What each studious traveller observes, rejects, and selects, if multiplied by the number which represents how many travellers there are, would leave a vast residuum of practical business wisdom in the minds of those who sell from samples. They see stores, their faults and excellences, they observe methods, their errors and advantages, they know men, their shortcomings and strong points ; above all, they are much and intimately acquainted with the complex subject from which observations have to be taken to get at the particular applications of truth that we call business principles. Their opportunities should soon make our travelling salesmen an itinerant faculty, a circulating college of business teachers.

But not all travellers are observers. Some, good observers though poor conductors, learn a great deal about business but never teach anything. It is the few who really aid to make our retailers better business men, the few who give the advantages of their own observation to their customers. If there were more who did, there would be less eccentricity in trade to-day, for undoubtedly the travellers' power to affect trade in this respect is enormous. Too much are some travellers prone to make use of their wide knowledge of the imprudent tendencies most common among business men, for their own very temporary advantage. An incautious retailer may be led to overstock, and it is seldom there is any one so capable of warning him as is the traveller. In the case of this fault the traveller is very frequently a tempter towards the path of error, instead of a counsellor in the way of wisdom.

LEAN PORK.

The demand for lean pork grows larger yearly. It is not simply because our population is increasing, but because we are moving farther and farther from the industrial conditions that made fat pork a necessary food staple with us. We have now a backwoods to which the sway of these conditions is chiefly limited. In the days when fat pork was a general desideratum, we were more or less amid the circumstances of backwoods life, or that lie within the long shadows of a backwoods past. We had then the same physiological need for fat pork. The operations of tree felling, lumbering, wood cutting, rail splitting, etc., had to be carried on in the winter, both because cold weather was more favorable to the putting forth of the strength needed in these pursuits, and because in the milder seasons there was not the time for such work. To maintain the bodily energy necessary for such toil, and to support the combustion necessary to keep men warm in such cold weather, there was no food that suited so well as fat pork. Hence the reason of our farmers running so much towards the production of fat hogs. Their fatness became almost the sole test of their value. Accordingly, the leading aim of hog-culture was the production of a breed that would fatten easily. This quality was fast becoming the title of any strain to survival. Slow-fatting hogs were becoming extinct.

The special need for fat pork, although continuing to be large did not continue to be general, and the fact that it was almost the only pork to be had was beginning to check pork consumption in any but the lumber regions. This was mended, however, by the United States hog raisers, who exported to this country an immense quantity of fat pork, the cheap prices of which drove our farmers into the production of pork on a much smaller scale. Our own packers went into the preparation of finer pork, and thus gave a bent to native production, which is now running more towards lean hogs. This has re-popularized pork, in fact re-adapted it to the changed industrial conditions, which were gradually taking our city and open country populations away from the consumption of pork, because pork continued to be very fat.

Farmers are still rather behind the move ment. They are not all up to the modern taste with their products. Those who are not are either conservative in their feeding methods and still aim at unwieldy hogs, or they have not yet the right types to make fine pork. All the influences that can be brought to bear in behalf of lean pork should be invoked to get more of it. The more it increases, the more the consumption of it will increase. Our agricultural fairs are a source from which reforming influences should be radiated. They should put a premium on fine pork. They are still too much under the spell of the past, when nothing would go so far to make a hog a prize-winner as its oppressive fatness. The economic change which has superseded the general demand for fat pork should be a source of a larger lean pork production than it is.

TAG THE TRANSIENT TRADERS.

Predatory traders will soon have outlived the privilege they have long enjoyed, of opening stores wherever they will, exempt from taxation. Hamilton is not alone in its determination to levy a license-fee upon these vagrants in tax-paying communities. In our statement that Hamilton was the first municipality to enact a by-law for the protection of resident against temporary traders, we were mistaken. The Newmarket Era corrects us, with the information that the council of that town long ago had set up a by-law requiring transient traders to pay a license fee. We are glad to learn this, and thank our contemporary for the correction. If Hamilton was not the first, certainly West Toronto Junction is, up to the present, the last to adopt such legislation. The council of that town at a recent meeting passed the report of one of its committees, which recommended that transient traders pay $75 per annum. We hope the example of these three places will be extensively imitated.

There is no doubt about it, law cannot do everything. After it has done all that it is desirable it should do, there is still a wide margin of conduct that is not under its sway at all. But neither is there any doubt about it that this conduct should be regulated, and for the systematic regulation of it there is nothing better than organization. Voluntary organization restrains the individual in a sphere wherein it is not expedient the civil law should have force. But in some respects law has fallen short, and trade association, to make up for the lack, has had to encroach upon the domain that civil law alone can properly keep in order. In this question of protecting internal trade against interloping outsiders, while municipal authority seems to have been competent to enact law for the purpose, yet it did it not. Protection, however, had to be supplied from some source, and trade organization had to be invoked. Yet it was not made the most of, and if it had been, it would not have been an adequate bulwark against the particular mode of assault that is under consideration. Law was needed, and it is a reassuring sign to see that it is now coming to the rescue. We hope that the time is at hand when it will not anywhere avail these would-be fugitives from taxation to fold their tent and silently steal away. Tag the transient trader, ye town and city councils. And, ye retailers, be coy with the promise of your suffrage, until you hear the amiable candidate who shakes your hand for your vote and influence, say that he will support a by-law to tax the outsider who comes in with a squatter's intent to lay hold of your vested rights. Aspirants to the muicipal council that will rule your town or city ancther year, are now at work making their hay while the sun shines. You can now do a little coquetting with them for your vote on the conditions indicated. That is one of the ways an association can show its strength, by acting as a mass for the interests of local trade. Such a mass tells on the policy, virtually determines it, which will be followed by the new council with reference to trade.

The other morning at 3 o'clock fire broke out in the general store of Lowe & Co., Fargo, and in a short time the entire store and contents vanished in smoke.

PLEASURE IN BUSINESS.

A happy life is more likely to come as the effect of reflecting on life's pleasures than on its troubles. It pays better to count over the things to rejoice about than to enumerate those the contemplation of which is calculated to create weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth. It was with this thought in mind, possibly, that Sir John Lubbock wrote his little book on "The Pleasures of Life." Doubtless the same philosophy was held by the apostle, Paul, when he spoke of things 'honest,' 'just,' 'pure,' 'lovely,' and of "good report," of "virtue," and praise," with the injunction to "think these things." The mind becomes like the things that fill it. Thinking on good things will make a man better. Thinking on one's possible pleasures will make him happier. Suppose we apply these axiomatic principles to the grocery business.

The trade journals, and possibly the grocer himself, are often much concerned about the troubles of the business. If they would both more frequently make inventory of the satisfying things in the trade, they might not have cause to regret it.

It is a pleasure to plan the store, and all its appurtenances, with the purpose of making them most suitable to transacting the business with economy and convenience. The mind is of such nature that it takes pleasure in things that work well. There is consequently a great deal of pleasure to be got out of inventing proper stores, and perfecting store furniture, that, by their economy of power and ease in accomplishing their purpose, come near to satisfying the human desire for perfection. From the nature of the case, this is a sort of pleasure that can never be exhausted, since perfection never is, but always to be, reached. Every week may bring to a thinking dealer the pleasure of a new conception looking toward greater improvement in his material machinery for carrying on the business.

The goods in some groceries make the interior of the stores much more beautiful than the same assortment of goods in other places of business. Who can doubt that the owners of the former—the more attractive interiors—have given vastly more pleasure by the work of arranging displays of their goods than provided by persons who have made the ugly, or, at least, not beautiful, disposition of the same kinds of wares? And if any one urges that it is the business of grocers to sell goods and not to gratify his esthetic nature by seeing how nice he can make the store look with them, is not the reply ready, that making the store look nice is one of the best things he can study to do, even if he thinks only of selling the goods, and cares nothing for the pleasure he can get out of making the tasty arrangement of them? That one man sells some goods with no esthetic tools attending his handling of them is true. The other man will sell as many, or probably more, and have the esthetic gratification besides. Here is a source of pleasure connected with groceries which might be cultivated a good deal more than it is; and if grocers who have the habit of fretting about business would worry less, and give themselves more to the pleasure that can be got out of their own business in the development and gratification of their faculty of taste, the result would probably be no worse than if they spared no time from strictly business cares, and it might possibly be better. The thought is worth at least a moment's consideration. The brain needs a change at times to do its best work, and a change to esthetics may serve to give it the rest it requires.

There ought to be pleasure in the thought that the business is eminently useful and honorable. The grocer is really in a sort of partnership with the producer. To grow or make articles of human need is siill to leave them far from contact with the consumer—the man who needs them. So far as concerns the goods in which the grocer deals, he really puts the finishing touch to production by producing the goods ready for the hand of the consumer. He can think that he is needed by the world. He may stand in his store and congratulate himself that his calling injures no man.

He must take pleasure in the fact that he is not doing work which is of doubtful service to the world, even if it is not positively hurtful.

This article is long enough, but it doesn't exhaust the subject. There is the topic of the pleasure the dealer may get in exercising a proper influence on his clerk; the pleasure he may get an impression himself on his patrons as a just man, and some regardful of their interests as well as his own; the pleasure he may get out of the gradual posting of himself in all lines of the business; the making of a merchant of himself in the full sense of the word; the pleasure he may receive from watching the steady growth of his trade, brought about by the broadening and spreading out of his reputation as an honest and an able merchant. If business was thought of more than it is in the lines here indicated, would less dollars be made out of it, and wouldn't more enjoyment be harvested?—Brooklin Grocers Gazette.

THE MONTREAL RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Annual Meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Ascociation was held in the Mechanics' Hall, last Thursday evening, Mr. A. D. Fraser in the chair. There was a large attendance, and the utmost interest was manifested in the proceedings. The business of the evening was the election of officers, which, after balloting, resulted as follows :—

President—Mr. Ed. Elliott.

Vice-President—Mr. S. Demers.

Honorary secretary—Mr. S. D. Vallieres.

Treasurer—Mr. James E. Manning (by acclamation.)

Committee—Messrs. A. D. Fraser. B. Connaughton, J. O'Shaughnessy, A. Desjardins, John Scanlan.

On motion of Mr. A. D. Fraser, seconded by Mr. J. D. Vallieres, it was resolved that the sum of $50 be placed at the disposal of Chief Benoit for the benefit of the Fire brigade.

It was also resolved on motion of Mr. A. D. Fraser, seconded by Ald. Gauthier, that the sum of $100 be divided between the Montreal General hospital and Notre Dame hospital, $50 each.

Votes of thanks were passed to the retiring officers and the meeting adjourned.

IS THERE GOING TO BE A FIGHT?

THE GROCER was informed by a leading member of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, that he had it on good authority, that a large sum of money would be placed at the disposal of the Association to be used in an effort to break up the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild. Names and figures are withheld for the present. The monthly meeting, of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, will be held next Monday evening, when in all probability the matter will be brought up. There should be a large attendance.

BARM YEAST.

The appearance in the market of the celebrated "Barm" Yeast is one of the events of the day. This excellent article has much to be said in its favor. While it will be hailed with gratitude by the housekeepers in the city, yet it is in the country that the Yeast will prove a most valuable acquisition. To those in the city we would recommend it for the extreme purity of its ingredients and the delicious home-made, nutty flavor of the bread. To those in the country it is recommended for its keeping qualities, in addition to the foregoing advantages. It may not be generally known that bread made from the "Barm" Yeast retains its moisture and flavor for a much longer time than any other, a great boon to the thousands who complain of their bread drying up after being a day or two old. The "Barm" Yeast will remain good and retain its leavening powers for over a year, thus enabling housekeepers always to have yeast in the house without the necesssity of sending for it every time they need to bake. The "Barm" Yeast Manufacturing Company have their factory in Toronto, at 35 Wellington St, E., and are capable of turning out over a thousand boxes per week, and from the great demand already for their Yeast, the Factory is soon likely to be tested to its utmost capacity.

No young man can possibly have mistaken his calling who finds in it what the world wants done.

THE ENGLISH EGG TRADE.

Mr. D. D. Wilson, Seaforth, President of the Egg Dealers' Association, writes to THE GROCER : When in England I had a shipment of eggs sent to London of about 10,500 dozen. They arrived in very good condition, and were sold under my own personal supervision. At the same time that this shipment was made, a shipment of the same quantity was forwarded to New York and was sold there in the usual way. The net results of these shipments did not give me much encouragement to continue the transportation of eggs to England, as the New York shipment netted me about four cents per dozen more than the London shipment. As I have mentioned, the eggs arrived in London in good condition, so good that I could not expect to make any improvement in that respect, and being aware that an ocean voyage of ten or twelve days and several additional days by rail does not usually improve the quality of eggs we will always have this additional risk of depreciation of quality to consider in making shipments to England.

RICHARD TEW & CO.

Messrs. Richard Tew & Co. are now busy shipping stock to the many points from which their large autumn flight of orders have begun to arrive. They have a most diverse assortment of excellent wares, at prices to make trade profitable. Some of their glassware lines may be enumerated: The Werner German glass, table glassware, pitchers, flower-baskets, vases, the Adar glassware, etc., the sale of which is controlled by Richard Tew & Co. in this country; opal-tinted wares of all sizes, prices, forms, and colors; German china articles, as fruit plates, cake-baskets, cabarets, fancy cups and saucers ; breakfast, dinner and tea sets in china, granite and in other fine and substantial wares. The firm has also a magnificent stock of lamps, comprising piano lamps of many styles, hall lamps, library lamps. The crystal wedding lamp is a new one, assorted in barrels. An advantage of dealing with this firm is that in their import orders for maple leaf pattern granite, they can get an assortment of printed ware put up in each individual order of their customers. Import orders through any other source will not be assorted. Richard Tew & Co's. sample rooms are now very attractive.

Manitoba butter-makers, in view of the fact that the McKinley bill imposes a duty of six cents per pound on Canadian butter, are asking the government to impose a corresponding duty on American goods, especially California make, and to investigate alleged adulteration of "California rolls."

The editor sat on a hard-bottomed chair, trying to think of a thought, and he plunged all his fingers about through his hair, but not one topic they brought. He had written on temperance, tariff, and trade, and the prospects of making a crop, and joked about ice cream and weak lemonade, till his readers had told him to stop. And weary of thinking, sleep came to his eyes, and he pillowed his head on the desk, when the thoughts which awake had refused to arise, came in troops that were strong and grotesque. And as the ideas airily float, he selects the bright one of the tribe ; and this is the gem, which while dreaming he wrote :—"Now is the time to subscribe."—Mattoon Star.

Frank Rees, who boards at 12 Bond street, and who is employed as shipper at Richard Tew & Co.'s., 16 Front street east, Toronto, was taking some goods down in the hoist on Wednesday afternoon, when the machinery gave way, and he fell three flights, landing on the ground floor. The unfortunate man sustained a compound fracture of the leg, fracture of the skull, and besides received internal injuries. He was taken to the hospital, and at last accounts he was sinking fast, and it was not expected he would live.

Frank J. Dougall, a prominent citizen and merchant of Windsor, died at his residence on Bruce avenue, of heart disease. For the past several days Mr. Dougall had been feeling unwell, and his heart bothered him considerably. Finally he was taken to his bed, and each day the action of the heart became weaker. His physician, Dr. Remi Casgrain, saw that the case was hopeless, but did not think the end was so near. Very few in Windsor knew of Mr. Dougall's illness, and when the news of his death became known there was universal sorrow. The deceased was a son of the late James Dougall, one of the pioneers of Windsor, and who was one of the prominent figures in the patriot war. For years he has been engaged in the grocery business, living in a magnificent residence on Bruce avenue. He was a prominent member of All Saints' Church, and was always ready to help anything that tended to the advancement of the town. He leaves a widow and six children, one of them being Mrs. Davies, of Detroit.

EGGS FOR ENGLAND.

Seeing that there is no probability of shipping eggs from Canada to the United States much longer, a kind hearted Englishman has appeared in this city, backed by one of the London banks, for the purpose of opening up an export trade in eggs between Canada and Great Britain. We find the opinion is prevalent that the exportation of eggs from Canada to England is an untried experiment, but this is erroneous, as some ten years ago a German or French packer arrived in this city, who understood how to pack for the English market, and he was the means of throwing the egg trade of this city into quite a flutter of excitement, owing to perfect wonders he was going to perform. He sent forward a few shipments, which although not very large were quite extensive enough to clean him out in about a couple of months or less. Since that time several other trial shipments have been sent across the Atlantic, but unfortunately they led to no satisfactory results. Still we do not wish to throw cold water on the endeavors of our English friend who feels like introducing Canadian eggs into the markets on the other side. It is understood that he has been authorized to draw on a certain London bank 30s. per case of 100 dozen, which means about 7½c. per dozen. We wish him every success, and hope that he will be enabled to accomplish what others have signally failed to carry out.—The Trade Bulletin.

GROWTH IN DANISH DAIRY INDUSTRIES.

From the last annual report of the Danish Agricultural Department, as quoted in the report of the British Consul at Copenhagen recently issued by the Foreign Office, it appears that since the mechanical cream separators were introduced into Danish dairies, about ten years ago, the effect in increasing production has been enormous. From 1883 to 1885 the exports of butter rose from 19,000,000 lb. to 26,000,000 lb., and then, ascending by what may with truth be termed "leaps and bounds," it attained its present figure, estimated to be not much under 60,000,000 lb. annually. Instead of exporting grain, the country now imports large quantities of corn and other food stuffs. The adoption of the separator has had a great deal to do with these changes, for not only can 10 per cent. more butter be extracted from a given quantity of milk than was possible under the old system, but greater quantities of milk can now be dealt with, and worked up at once into an article of export. Recent attempts to introduce a machine which will simultaneously turn out butter and skimmed milk have so far been unsuccessful. The number of associated dairies continues to increase, while many of the old ones are being enlarged and improved. Taking the country over, they are said to have given satisfactory results. With regard to feeding cows, it appears to be generally admitted that one pound of colza-cake is a necessary ingredient, and to its employment is attributed the position which Danish winter butter has been able to maintain in the English market. Some difficulty is experienced in obtaining competent dairy hands. On many of the large farms only one thoroughly efficient and highly-paid milkmaid is kept, who has under her ordinary farm hands who are paid 3¼d. for each milking, with the early meal thrown in. It is now regarded as a matter of essential importance that cows be groomed and curry-combed every day, and not occasionally only. Much of the excellence of the milk depends on the care of the dairy women, and it was feared that when associated dairies were first started that the farmers' daughters would take little interest in such matters, but this does not appear to have been the case.—Manchester Grocers' Review.

LONDON GROCERS' ORGANIZE.

A meeting of the retail grocers of London, Ont., was held on Friday night for the purpose of forming a protective association. There was a large attendance. The objects of the association are the collection of debts and the prevention of imposition being practised upon the members by those who are not in the habit of paying for their groceries. The President is Mr. A. McCormick; the Vice-President is Mr. W. H. Ferguson; Treasurer, Mr. Robt. Sharpe, and Secretary, Mr. J. B. Smyth.

DRUM TAPS.

Leaves from the Diary of a Commercial Traveller.

BY WM. H. MAHER.

CHAPTER IV.

I took out my order-book for my first order, entering the name, E. Z. Atkins, Paris, at the top of the first page, and then the time, sixty days. "Well," said I, "what will it be first?"

"Shovels and spades," was answered; so we began there. Pretty much all I knew of them was written in my book; whose manufacture they were, what they cost, and what they ought to sell for, providing I could get it. The programme seemed to be like this: Mr. Atkins would take down a shovel, look at the label, and then ask, "Have you Rowland's shovels?" and I, with my book before me, answered, "Yes, sir."

"What do you want for them?"

"Six dollars."

Then he consulted his cost mark, and asked again, "Is that the best you can do?"

"That's the bottom."

"Well, send me half a dozen."

Next we came to spades. "What do you say you get for spades?" is asked.

"Same as shovels."

"Well, you may send me half a dozen of them."

When I had that item down I turned for the next. "Well, I can't think of anything else this time; if these goods come out all right I'll try you again."

Bless me! I was surprised. I had expected a big order, and here I was put off with two items amounting to $6. I couldn't give up just yet. "How about manure forks?" I asked.

"I don't know; yes, we ought to have half a dozen."

"I have no doubt," said I, "there are a great many odds and ends you would think of if you were to look over your stock. Let me mention articles as they are on my book and you may recall something you are out of."

So I "began at the beginning," and the beginning was such articles as began with A.

"How about axes? Do you need any?"

"Well, there! I had forgotten axes. Yes. Whose do you keep, and what are they worth?"

I answered both questions satisfactorily; and added a box to the order. Then I went on: Augers, awls, bits, butts, bolts, brushes, braces, etc., along through the book. I picked up a great many items from him, and, as I wrote each one down, he was certain that was the last thing he wanted. I humored him in this by dropping business for a moment, but returning to it again as soon as I possibly could.

Mr. Atkins was a tolerably shrewd buyer, and I made it part of my business to impress him with my knowledge of the fact; then he had a number of stories at his call, and though I had heard most of them years before, still I followed his narration with the deepest interest, and laughed at his jokes as if they were the best I had ever heard. When we were really through, I had an order from him that covered three pages in my book, and footed up between $90 and $100. As to what my feelings were it is unnecessary to describe them; every one who reads this will at once know that I was supremely happy.

No one who has not "been there" can understand the intense strain upon a man in a two hours' experience such as this. Every nerve and faculty is on the alert, to lead the buyer to do what you want him to do, to keep up his interest, and to convince him often against his will. No attorney pleading before a jury has a greater strain than has the earnest drummer selling goods.

From there I sallied out to try my luck at the nearest "grocery and saloon;" an old rusty shovel hanging in the door giving me hopes of finding a demand there for some hardware. It was a small room; counter and shelves on one side, boxes, barrels and bags piled up on the other side.

The first thing on the counter was a small showcase, and a passing glance into this showed me some cutlery. Around the stove were gathered half a dozen men, most of them smoking, but all of them stopped talking to look at me.

As no one was to be seen behind the counter I concluded the proprietor was among the crowd at the stove, but I did not care to introduce myself to him there. As no movement was made I sauntered to the showcase and began to examine the contents. I heard a chair scrape the floor, and then a man walking toward me. I had learned the proprietor's name from Mr Atkins. As a middle-aged man came in front of me I handed him a card I had ready, at the same time asking if he was Mr. Bender.

He nodded assent, and then looked at my card. I attempted to break the ice by talking about the weather, and he met me half way. When this had gone far enough I prepared for work.

"I see you do a little in hardware, Mr. Bender; have you made any engagements for your spring stock?"

No, he hadn't; it was too early, and times looked so bad he did not expect to buy much.

That was all right; what I wanted to know was whether he had bought or not, and now I knew he had not. The next thing in order was to get him to buy of me.

"Our house," said I, "is anxious to get better acquainted with just such dealers as you; dealers who handle a small stock of hardware, but who want to buy it right, and will stick to a house that does the right thing with them. We want your trade, and in order to get it, propose to make it to your interest in two ways: by selling you goods right, and in helping you select your stock so that you will not have to carry over all the profit in goods from one season to another. Our experience with country trade must be worth something; we know about how many goods it is safe for a dealer in a small town to buy, and if we have his whole trade, it is for our interest to see that he does not overstock himself. The house has sent me out to make just such arrangements as this. I shall come around about every sixty days, and intend to do the fair thing, both for the house's interest and my own. It's money in my pocket to sell you and keep your trade, and consequently it is for my interest to see that you buy goods low enough to compete with your neighbors, and do not buy too many."

I did not say all this in one breath; I brought it in as best I could, but Mr. Bender did not seem to be very much overcome by it, and gave no sign.

"You will need a few farming tools?" I asked.

"Yes, I suppose so, by and by."

"I hope you can find it to your interest to buy of us."

"Maybe I will; I never was in your house, but when I am in the city again I'll call in and see you."

"Thank you; if you will do that we will be obliged. We carry a good line of goods, and especially in cutlery. Did you ever see any of our patent butcher knives?"

No, he had not.

I took out of my vest pocket a little knife, a charm, about three-quarters of an inch long, and made to open and shut like a full-sized knife, costing about 75 cents per dozen.

"That beats me!" said he; "see here, boys," and he held the knife toward them. They were only too glad to come up and see what it was I was talking about, but the little toy-knife amused them. We joked about it, and a vast amount of wit was expended over the article, and then it was handed back to me. I promptly passed it over to Mr. Bender. "I shall give you this to defend yourself with," said I.

He was delighted; a child could not have been more so, and insisted on treating me to a cigar. After I had fastened the knife to his watch chain at his request, I then brought up business again.

"As this is my first call on you, Mr. Bender, I hope you won't send me away without a little order. I don't wan't a big order; I know it isn't time for you to lay in a full spring stock, but if there is anything you are out of, why, let me send you some of that. Your cutlery is low, and you know the time to sell it is now, when the men loaf about the store; and I see your stock of files is pretty well run down; if you can do anything for me, I will not forget it very soon."

The little knife had put us on a friendly footing; I saw that he would like to order on my account, but that he did not want the goods. "As to the time," said I, "that shall be satisfactory to you. You see [showing him my book] I sold a good bill to Mr. Atkins, and I gave him sixty days on it; I will do the same by you."

Still he did not like to order. "Have you any one here you could leave in charge of the store a few minutes?"

Yes, there was Jake Frink.

"Then I want you to come and look at my samples. It won't take more than half an hour, and won't cost you a cent."

He did not really care to go, but I rather forced him along, and soon we were before my cards of pocket-knives in the Williams House. They made a grand show; ten cards of knives and thirty knives on a card. Bender praised them, and while he praised them I took out my order book. When he seemed struck with any particular pattern I tried to get him to say that I might send him some of it, but he was not to be caught. I had given him the good points and price of every knife on the card, and still had not got an order; I was beginning to be afraid that he would escape me. After he was through looking at the samples I made another strike.

"There isn't a really good stock of knives in this place," said I; "the trouble with the merchants is they buy too few styles and too many of a kind; my advice is, a small stock but a large assortment. Don't buy more than a half dozen of any one kind, but buy a good many kinds. I wish you would try an assortment, Mr. Bender."

"What could you give me a nice assortment for?"

I figured a minute. "I can give you twelve half-dozens for $30."

"Which are the twelve?"

I picked them out.

"Well," said he, "you may send them along."

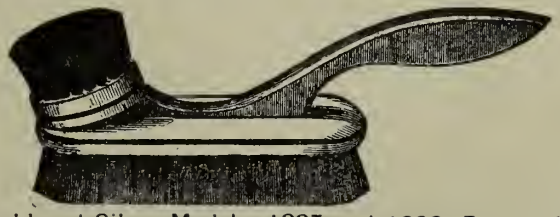
THE MARKETS

TORONTO, October 9, 1890.

GROCERIES.



There has been no perceptible change from the even tenor which our report showed to be the leading trait in the character of last week's trade. The two weeks compare very equally as to bulk of business done, but this week the drift of the trade is not so general as it was the week before. Business this week has been stronger in dried fruits and the delivery of canned goods than in any other department. The trade in sugar has been a quiet one, and the demand for tea has abated considerably. Payments have been only partially satisfactory.

CANNED GOODS.

Up to the present the extent of the tomato pack has been an open question, with the weight of probability, in our opinion, strongly on the side of a prospective shortage. The test of an active demand is now settling the question, and is confirming the view of the matter we formerly expressed. The stock is undoubtedly short. Many of the packers are asking a release from the obligation to supply all they contracted to supply, some being 1,000 cases short in each of several orders, others being still further behind their engagement. They plead cloudy, cold weather, and frost. One firm of packers is trying to buy stock from the jobbers to eke out the complement of orders it can but partly fill. Jobbers who had no confidence in the firmness of the market are now paying good prices to other jobbers who had. Two large holders have refused $1.10 for round lots of tomatoes. The inquiry for this line of goods is now strong, so many having refrained from ordering before on account of the uncertainty of the market. The position of all canned goods is improved. One jobbing house has instructed its travellers to leave the canned goods trade alone till all present orders are filled. Corn and peas, like tomatoes, are very firm. Salmon is reported, by private advice, to have gone up 5c. per case on the coast, but the report lacks verification. Maple Leaf salmon has been sold very low on this market, a couple of cars having been placed to arrive at $1.25 to $1.35. It is doubtful if further orders could be filled at that figure.

COFFEES.

The increased value of Rios is the only change in the coffee market. In all other lines the old firmness is maintained, without advance. The National Grocer says :—Coffee will be more plentiful than was generally anticipated if the receipts which have recently been coming forward at both Rio and Santos are any criterion of what we may expect for the rest of the season. The receipts at Santos for the last two weeks have been no less than 191,000 bags against 107,000 bags for the corresponding period of last year, which indicates an increase of almost one hundred per cent. It is also asserted that the receipts at Rio will show a considerable increase, is not such an increase as those of Santos. Already these large receipts are having a decided influence upon the market, and the firm offers that have been received from Rio indicate that there is a decided weakness in that quarter.

DRIED FRUIT.

The later arrivals of Valencias have brought prices down to 7½c., and at that price trade has taken up a large share of the stock so far received. The next receipts will be by direct shipment from Deina, and prices will take another descent. At about the middle of the month the first of these shipments will reach our market. Sultanas yet run at 13 to 16c., but if the stock had to be bought by importers now, the lower figure would be out of the question, owing to advance of nearly 3c. at the source of supply. Stocks of new currants are now ample for the requirements of the demand. New Vostizzas in cases are 9 to 9½c. There are a few old Vostizzas in cases at 6¼c. In a week or two all the deliveries of currants will have been made by the exporters. A very fair demand for figs in ten and twenty pound boxes is also operative.

NUTS.

The trade in nuts is quiet. Ivica almonds are a little easier, selling now at 13½ to 14c. There are no Brazil nuts, Grenable or Bardeaux walnuts in stock. Roasted peanuts are up three or four cents, and are now quotable at 17 to 18c. Green peanuts are also higher, their price being 13 to 15c. The New England Grocer says :—Nuts are moving up, especially almonds, filberts, walnuts and Brazil nuts. The likelihood is that they will stay up, too, and perhaps go higher. The almond and walnut crop in Brazil is very short. In Tarrangona, an island in the Mediteranean, where almonds are very largely raised, cholera now prevails, and the crop stands a very poor show of being picked. California will only show a fair crop of almonds and these will fetch high prices along with the European article. The crop, taken altogether, is inclined to be inferior in quality as well as scarce. California walnuts are plentiful, but are thicker shelled and not nearly so good in quality as the European. Brazil reports a short crop in Brazil nuts also. These nuts are all conveyed to London, from whence we get our supplies. Pecans are mostly raised in Texas. The crop is good in quality but small. Pecans that a year ago could have been bought for six cents now bring eight and nine cents. The new nut crop will begin to come in generally from September on.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice has made an advance, a movement which was long expected, on account of untoward weather in the centres of production, which greatly shortened the yield. The stocks now in wholesale hands here are light, and supplies can not be laid in except on the basis of the outside advance. Sago and tapioca are lower.

SUGAR.

On Saturday the price of granulated and all white sugars declined ⅛c. The prices now are 7c. for quantities of 15 barrels and over, and 7 1-8c. for quantities below 15 barrels. Yellow sugars are unchanged. Trade has been very quiet, and seems not to have been affected by the lowering of the market. Willett & Gray, New York, write as follows of the sugar situation for the week: Raws declined 1-16c. for centrifugals. Refined unchanged. Receipts, 22,009 tons; meltings, 23,719 tons. Total stock in four ports, 65,201 tons, against 97,825 tons last year, a decrease of 1,710 tons for the week. The market has been quiet and steady and without special feature during the week. Total stock in all the principal countries by latest uneven dates is 379,077 tons, against 400,000 tons at the same time last year. Regarding the month they say: In September the receipts were 76,985 tons and the meltings 109,598 tons, thereby reducing stocks 32,613 tons for the month. The meltings exceeded the meltings of September, 1889, by 35,418 tons, and shows a large increase for the year, notwithstanding the absence of fruit crops this year, which goes to show that the lower prices for refined (over 1c. per pound) are having a great effect in increasing the consumption of sugar in the United States.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are scarce and higher, Redpath's having advanced ¼c. per pound, or 3½c. per gallon. The reason is that former prices were too low. The stiff prices of molasses still hold, and if the bent of the market were not restrained by doubts that stock held here by United States buyers might be sold here, there would be a further advance now.

If the stock bought on the Montreal and Quebec markets by a Boston operator be shipped out of the country, instead of being sold in it, prices may be expected to move on.

It is learned that the ship Eden's cargo of 691 puncheons of molasses has been bought up by Mr. W. A. C. Baldwin for the Bostonian, who is cornering the market. The price paid is said to be close upon forty cents, and the thirty-nine small packages went at the usual advanced.

TEAS.

There is not the same activity in the tea market here that was observable last and several antecedent weeks. There is still a good demand for cheap teas, either Japan or Young Hyson, but what probably has modified the demand to its precent state is the difficulty even impossibility experienced by importers and jobbers to supply such teas. In blacks, which comprise the fullest stocks of cheap grades, there has been a very dull week's business. There is a fair import inquiry for low-grade Young Hysons. The enquiry for Indian is good. In London, although the quantity of Indian tea brought forward showed a large increase on that of the preceeding week, the market remains strong. There has also been a good assortment of tea of fair quality, and the demand continues active for all grades. The finest kinds, of which there was an improved supply, were briskly competed for, and well maintained previous rates, while some of the Darjeeling growths brought higher prices. Medium grades also met with a good enquiry, and values generally were well supported. The lower descriptions, however monopolise the principal attention, and have been eagerly bought at firm to advanced rates, which proves that the trade were comparatively bare of stock. But when these requirements are to an extent satisfied, considering the largely increasing imports, it is not improbable that a reaction will take place, as present rates are from 1d to 1½d higher than last season. Ceylon teas are in good demand, and as a rule went firm,ofen selling at advanced prices.

PETROLEUM.

The prices of Canadian and Carbon Safety have gone up, a cent and a cent and a half respectively. This was expected on account of the strength of the market for crude. There is a very fair trade now done in refined.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

Borax has advanced a cent from both its lowest and highest points of a week ago. Castor oil has also moved up one cent higher. Glycerine has declined two cents from it lowest quotation and four cents from its highest of a week ago, quoting now 20 to 21c. Trade is fairly good.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market is very conservative, its predominant characteristic, the poorness of the stock offered, remaining unchanged and overruling the other circumstances of the market as price, demand, etc. There is as small a proportion as ever in the first class, there is two small a proportion of medium, and the quantity of poor is enormous. There is a steady demand for good, to which the supply is very inadequate. Choice dairy tubs go at 15 to 16c. medium tubs are 10 to 12c. large rolls are 14 to 15c. and pound rolls ars 16 to 18c. Of the latter there is a very good proportion of fine butter. Creamery tub is 20 to 22c., and creamery rolls are 22 to 24c.

Cheese is firm at 9¾ to 10c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

APPLES—Are worth $2 to $2.50 per barrel. Though the crop is short buyers are not taking it for granted that prices will be extremely high.

BEANS—Growers are offering at $1.80 to $1.90, but buyers are not eager to contract for deliveries. The old crop is all but absorbed, and there is only a slight hand to mouth trade being done.

DRIED APPLES—Are very scarce and firm, the price running from 7 to 9c. according to the view of different dealers There is but little old stock, and there is no new yet in anybody's hands here.

EVAPORATED APPLES—The new stock is held very firmly by all who have any of it. There are some dealers from whom nothing can be bought under 15 to 16c. and there are others who will sell all they have for 13c. The market is not settled yet.

EGGS—The egg market has not yet collapsed under the incubus of the McKinley Act. The prices did give 1c. on Monday, leaving 18c. a firm figure, but there is no surplus of stock yet visible on the market. The time of year is one in which there is usually no plethard of eggs, so that a depressing effect of the new United States duty is not apt to be felt just now.

GAME—Partridges are 50 to 55c. per brace, and ducks 30 to 50c. per brace.

HAY—Baled is unchanged at $9 to $9.50 and in liberal receipt on this market. Farmers' street supplies are also plentiful, and tend to keep the price of baled down.

HIDES—There is no alteration in the hide market. Cured are 8c., and No. 1 green cows' are 7c., No. 2 being 6c.

HONEY—The market is steady and buying is fairly active from producers. Clear honey is 12½c. for good, 11c. for medium, and 7 to 8c. for low grades.

HOPS—The price of the new crop is yet in statu quo as it were. Holders continue to evince faith in the firmness of the market, which they expect to be maintained. The prices yet asked are from 30 to 35c. Last year's crop seems to be about consumed, as dealers can scarcely get any for good offers, 16 to 20c. failing to bring any quantity on the market.

OATS—Are still coming in at 40 to 42c. on track.

ONIONS—Are $1.75 to $2, with a fair amount of business being done between large dealers and producers.

POTATOES—The market is likely to be overstocked if unlooked-for relief is not afforded by increased internal consumption or exportation. The price is now down to 50c. for car lots, and the supply is large. The market has become so dull that holders outside are trying to get their stock sold on commission on this market. Street receipts are also numerous. Out of store, prices are 60 to 65c.

POULTRY—Ducks are 60 to 65c.; chickens are 50 to 60c. per pair, and turkeys are 10c. per lb.

SKINS—Sheepskins are unchanged, 85c. being a steady price.

STRAW—Good oat is worth $5.50 to $6, and is not plentiful.

TALLOW—Rough is 2c., and rendered is 5½c.

WOOL—Is 20c. in the fleece, and clothing wool is 22c. The enforcement of the McKinley Act brings to a close the spell of brisk exportation that we have lately had.

FISH.

The arrivals on the market of smoked fish have caused the demand for lake fish to be rather quiet. Shipments this week are larger than last week, causing the prices in some classes to decline. The supply of trout is more plentiful this week. The close season for trout and white fish comes in to effect next month. There are more salmon received at present than there is call for. The lake herring catch is usually at its best in September and October, although this year the local fish dealers report the catch throughout those months to be smaller than it was in August. The sale of pickerel was mostly to the United States, but since the McKinley bill has come into effect the shipments have been limited. The fish dealer cannot get enough black bass to supply the demand. The sale of pike is generally transacted when other fish are scarce. The following are the prices: Trout, 6½c.; white fish, 7c.; British Columbia salmon, 14 to 15c.; lake herring, $3; per hundred by count; pickerel, 5c.; black bass, 9c.; pike, 4c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The present month is part of the interval that lies between seasons, and which is therefore, usually a very quiet time with the dealers in green fruit. It has been particularly so this autumn, and the quantity of stock handled has been small. The two indispensable conditions, a sufficiency of stock and an adequacy of demand, have both been lacking, and trade has taken quite a rest. Jamaica oranges are worth $7 to $7.50, and Messinia lemons are $7. Malaga lemons are expected next week. The banana trade is virtually done, the residue of the stock going off at 75c. to $1.50.

PROVISIONS.

There has been no decline from the active trade which has been kept up from midsummer. The stock of smoked meats is dwindling down, and the supply of hams is almost depleated. Packers expect to have some new hams soon in stock. Hogs are arriving rather freely.

BACON—Long clear is 8 to 8¾c. Backs are 10½ to 11c. Bellies are 10½ to 11c. Rolls are 9½ to 10c.

DRESSED HOGS—Are worth $6.to $6.25.

HAMS—Are firm at 13c. for smoked, and 11c. for sweet pickled.

LARD—Is 9 to 9½c.

MESS PORK—Is $15.00 to $16.50.

SALT.

The Toronto Salt Works has been unable to transact any sales this week, on account of the difficulty of getting crude stock to the refineries. The railway companies have been unable to supply them with cars, owing to the recent heavy transit of barley. The prices are the same, large lots selling at $1.40 for bbls; 70c. for sacks, and $1.20 for dairy. Smaller quantities sell at $1.50 to $1.55 for bbls.; 80 to 85c. for sacks, and 40 to 45c. for ¼ sacks.

DRY GOODS.

The movement of trade has been strong and steady, business being better this week than it was a week ago. There have been no changes in prices, but the manufactured cotton market is in a state of suspense, owing to uncertainty as to the upshot of certain operations that are now in course. The consolidating of the different cotton firms into one concern by the purchase by a syndicate of all interests in present hands is not yet an unlikely event.

MONTREAL

MONTREAL MARKETS.

OCT. 9, 1890.

GROCERIES.

The feature of the market during the week has been the activity in dried foreign fruits, particulars of which are appended. Otherwise there has been no particular feature here, although in a general way matters are rather quiet; a fair distributive trade has been doing.

DRIED FRUIT.

An active business in dried foreign fruit to arrive has been one of the features of the week, the bulk of the Dracona's cargo having been already turned over, and beyond one lot which the importer is holding there is very little in first hands. It seems, therefore, as if these jobbers who have been holding off for more favorable terms would be disappointed, as besides this lot, there is but little in first hands, and the holder in question it is claimed prefers to hold at the moment. The Dracona, which is now at Quebec, brings out about 68,495 half boxes and 600 quarter boxes of Valencias, which, as we have said have been pretty well cleared out of first hands, except the lots that were imported by jobbers direct. The Escalona which was delayed at Cadiz, and which sailed on the 3rd, has only 30,000 boxes, while the Florence, the last direct steamer, now loading at Drina, is only expected to bring moderate supplies. Therefore, the total direct importations of Valencia fruit into Canada will fall far short of the average. On the other hand the consumption is increasing yearly, and is now estimated at 300,000 packages. It would seem, therefore, as if the stocks would run light this fall. The Escalona will not arrive until the end of November, and the Florence some time in November, so that there is a possibility of fruit being wanted before they arrive. The basis on which business to arrive has been done is 6 to 6¼c. as a rule, although some who got frightened offered some for less, and are sorry now that they did so. One dealer has cleared out the balance of his lot of ordinary to arrive at 19s. 6d. and his layers at 24s. 6d. ex Dracona. There are a few thousand boxes of currants also on board of her, which have been selling at about 5¾ to 6c. Otherwise there is no change.

GREEN FRUIT.

In green fruit there is nothing particular to mention. We hear of nothing in apples since the business noted last week except a jobbing trade on spot on a basis of $4 for Fomeuse and Alexanders. Jamaica oranges are selling in a jobbing way at $5 to $6. There are about 600 crates of Spanish onions on the Dracona, and they are held at about 90c. to $1.00, and we quote $1 to $1.10 as a range, so that it does not seem likely that we will see the low prices that prevailed last fall owing to heavy supplies.

SUGAR, SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The stock of raw sugar with the exception of one lot that is pretty firmly held is all out of first hands, and its position remains about the same. Refiners have not evinced any change in their position either, but with an easy feeling elsewhere it is not expected that prices will change but keep about steady. Refined sugars on spot are worth about 6¾c. for granulated, and 5¼ to 6c. for yellows. There is no change to note in syrup, there being a fair demand at steady prices. Ordinary grades are worth 3⅞ to 4c., while extra brights are quoted firm at 4½c. per lb. Molasses has shown no new developments since the recent deal. Stock is held firm at 40c.,but in the absence of business the figure is a nominal one.

TEA.

The tea market rules quiet and there is some difference of opinion between buyers and sellers regarding prices. This feeling will continue until the Duncan sales, which take place on Thursday, are over. The total quantity that will be offered at these comprise 5,000 packages including 2,500 half chests of Japans. When this sale is over the market no doubt will pick up.

SPICES.

Spices have shown no change during the week. There has been a moderate jobbing movement of Pimento, Jamaica ginger and pepper at steady prices.

HOPS.

There has been no new developement in this market during the week. No business of consequence is reported except the report that an Ontario dealer has been offering new crop laid down here at 30c. and made sales at that figure but we could not trace it, and as far as we can learn brewers continue to hold off actuated by the idea, that in so doing they will be able to force sales by some needy holders in the country. Consequently prices are still nominal but we do not think that anything could be touched in the country under 25c. and perhaps little at that.

EGGS.

The McKinley bill and its effects was instrumental in creating a quiet egg market on spot during the past week as trade was very active in the country and in the west where stock was being rapidly forwarded across the line. This made matters rather quiet here with light receipts comparatively and prices were steady at 16½ to 17½c. This week however receipts are naturally expected to be somewhat larger, but not excessively so as the impression is, that there has been a good clearance.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market has been characterized during the week by continued firmness and activity in pork and lard, indeed some refiners have been refusing orders for the latter. Smoked meats have been rather quiet. We quote:—Canadian short cut, per brl, $17.50 to $18; mess pork, western, per brl, $16.50 to $17 ; short cut, western, per brl, $17 to $17.50 ; hams, city cured, per lb., 12c to 12½c; hams, canvassed, per lb, 12½c to 13c ; lard, western, pails, per lb, 9 to 9¼c; lard, Canadian, in pails, 8¼c to 8½c ; lard, C. O. P., 10½c ; bacon, per lb, 9 to 10c ; lard, com., refined, per lb, 8 to 8½c.

CHEESE.

The week has not developed any material change in the position of this market. Business during the week was of an irregular nature, as cables were generally unfavorable, so that transactions were generally in odds and ends, which could be picked up at a fraction under 10c. Some of the lots graded pretty fine according to all accounts. In fact the bulk of recent business for some time back has been in stock of this kind, and most of the large shipments this week are Augusts which grade as high as Septembers tor English bids, which will not permit of any general business in this line of stock. This is evidenced by the fact that factorymen are as stiff-necked as ever, and will not part with their holdings, except at a fraction over 10c, while their was purchasing in the Townships at 10 to 10⅛c., and at the wharf here of French country make at equivalent rates. However, the market as regards new business in a shipping way rules dull, and the impression seems general that September's should go for near the value of August's. The shipments last week were almost 78,000 boxes, or 29,000 more than for the corresponding period last year, while the stocks in Liverpool on the 1st were 112,000 boxes, or 25,000 less than expected, and only 13,000 more than those for the same period last year, which would indicate a pretty steady movement as our aggregate shipments this year have been considerably in excess. We quote as follows the figure for September's being nominally : Fine September's, 10 to 10½c.; late made August's, 9⅝ to 9¾c.; early August's, 9 to 9⅜c.; finest July's, 8¾ to 9c.; medium grades, 8c.; cable, 45s.

BUTTER.

The butter market rule unchanged. The jobbing demand for parcels of select late makes continues and this leads to some odd purchasing in the country at long figures, but we cannot ascertain that it has been extensive. Values are too high for export ideas. We quote : Late made creamery, 20 to 22c.; Summer makes, 17 to 18c.; Finest Townships dairy, 18 to 20c.; Western dairy, 14 to 14½c.; Medium do. 10 to 12c.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

The flour market has not shown any material change during the week, and busines has continued to be of a jobbing character, with no apparent desire to talk business in a jobbing up way, and new wheat flours are offering somewhat easier, but old wheats are pretty firm on the whole. Strong bakers are worth $5.75 to $6, the inside for new wheat, and straight rollers, $4.80 to $4.90 in the same proportions.

In grain there has been nothing doing beyond an odd business in coarse grains. We quote the following prices :—Peas, 75 to 76c per 66 pounds in store, 76 to 77c, afloat ; L. C. oats 42 to 43c ; U. C. oats, 44 to 45c ; corn, 65c, duty paid 57 1-4c in bond ; feed barley, 50 to 52c ; good malting do., 65 to 70c ; rye 63 to 64c.

The stocks of grain in store compared with those of a week ago show a decrease of 3,264 bushels of wheat, 2,640 bushels of oats, 600 bushels of barley, and an increase of 44,089 bushels of corn, 28,878 bushels of peas and 2,724 bushels of rye. Compared with a year ago there is a decrease of 151,170 bushels of wheat; 25,201 bushels of corn, 986 bushels of oats and 7,607 bushels of barley, and an increase of 20,007 bushels of peas and 5,936 bushels of rye.

The stock of flour in store shows a decrease of 600 bbls. compared with a week ago, and 15,051 bbls compared with the same date last year.

McLAREN'S

COOK'S FRIEND BAKING POWDER.

Is Honest Goods and just the Thing on Which to Make or Extend a Business.

The Best Grocers Make a Point of Keeping it always in Stock.

POINTS FOR CLERKS.

It is a common expression with most of us who lead busy lives, that if we had less to do we could do our work much better. We could have time for personal improvement, and for perfecting our plans in a handsome manner. If the coveted leisure has come to us by some chance, we are surprised to see how little we accomplish, and how really interior are the results compared with the old busy days.

The truth is, no one will develop his best powers unless he is pushed. There needs to be always a little more ahead to be done than can be compassed in one day to keep the working powers up to their full strength. Did you never find, on a day when you had very little to do, that it was almost impossible to get that little done? Did you ever find people who abounded in leisure to "have time" to attend to anything you wished done? The people I have known who were the most oppressed with care and labor were those who spent the summer fanning themselver and whisking a fly or two out of their rooms. The flies would come back, and there they were, with all their work to do over again, and "that was the way it was the whole long summer."

You can put in the whole time doing little or much, according as you are trained to it, and there is no trainer like necessity. If business rushes at your place, so that every one's capacity is taxed to the full all day, you are likely to develop into a wide-awake business man, far ahead of what you would have become in that "easier place" you coveted. Perhaps, too, you are not more wearied when night comes than the clerk where business favors much idleness, with grumbling at the little which has to be done. The grumblers seem to be constitutionally tired. Certainly there is something in a brisk business that should awaken the enthusiasm and give satisfaction to every right-minded employee. He will make a note of how it was brought about, for his own future good, also see how such a large business is successfully handled.

The more you have to do the more you can do, and the converse seems also true. It is hard to gauge an enterprising, healthy man's ability to work. Whatever may be true of an ambitious employer, a clerk does not often break down by over work. He will not be likely to stay long enough for that in these days with a really oppressive employer. The "breaking down" cause should be looked for in the hours after work.

A farmer friend brought home two new chains one day and put them both into service on the farm. After a time one was lost, and years after was found in an old log-heap. They tried to use it, but the links were rust-eaten through and through; there was no strength in them; and it was tossed aside for old iron. The other working chain was worn in places, but bright and strong yet for many a long, hard pull. So idleness will rust a man out faster and sooner than work can wear him out.—American Grocer.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday s yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

NOTCHES IN HIS HEELS.

"Do you know," said a commercial travelling man, "that I had an experience recently which was not at all complimentary to my vanity. I had occasion to go to San Francisco not long ago, and on the day after my first night on the sleeping car I noticed that notches had been cut in the heels of both of my shoes. I supposed that the porter had done this to identify my shoes, and was disposed to forget the whole affair. I noticed, however, that the porter was assiduous in his attentions to me, although there was a slight, almost imperceptible, touch of hostility in his manner. He was a good porter, however, and when I changed my sleeping car I tipped him liberally. After my first night on my second car, I remembered the notches, and looking at my boot heels found a cross on each. I decided that this was a notice to porters that I was a liberal tipper. Still I noticed the same concealed dislike of the porter, and his earnest desire to please me. I found his services excellent, however. When I took my next sleeper at Chicago, I met there a porter with whom I had traveled before and who knew who I was. While he was brushing me down the next morning, he kept chuckling to himself. 'What tickles you so much, Sam?' I asked finally. He only chuckled and grinned the harder. At last he said, choking with laughter: 'Dey's took you for er spotter, suah.' That meant nothing to me, but Sam explained that the first porter had imagined I was a spy. He found out that I was going to San Francisco, of course, and not knowing how far my wickedness extended, warned all porters whom I should meet. The cross was substituted where the signs changed. There's esprit de corps for you. I should not wear those shoes if I were to start on another railroad journey to-morrow.—Ex.

CLERKS SHOULD READ THIS.

A dealer said to the writer the other day that "the clerks were beginning to be the bosses." Inquiring into the reason why he made a remark of this sort, he said that one of his clerks had insisted on several more dollars a week pay, alleging that he was worth more than he had been receiving, and that he had been offered more by a competitor.

"I do not care to enter into a competition of this sort," said the dealer, "as it will upset all the other clerks, and everyone will want an advance because he thinks he is worth it." The information was elicited that the clerk was worth more as a salesman than any of the others, and had been in receipt only of the same pay.

Now, this is not according to business principles, for the man who is the most valuable to his employer should receive the most pay, since ability to make money for one's employer is certainly the only test that should be made in fixing wages. This employer should certainly grade his one clerk higher, or the others lower.

An old friend of ours in the retail business once told us that he had but one rule for all matters, and that was the rule given above, and when an increase of wages was asked for he had but one reply to make: "Make yourself worth the increase to me, and you shall have it."

This every clerk should bear in mind, that he can make his own wages if he but wills it. There are thousands in the grocery, as well as in all other business lines, who are mere mechanics, and work only for the time when the clock shall proclaim that the time has arrived when the day's work is done. These men are machines only, and can be supplied at any time. They keep their own grade of wages down because they are so numerous that they tramp each other's wants under foot.

But the boy or man whose sole object is to please his employer and learn his business thoroughly, who does not grumble when a belated customer tumbles in to take up five or ten minutes of his time when his hours are over, and who does with good grace whatever comes in his way, can always be sure that he will have his place and good wages.

We notice in many stores of our acquaintance men who have been there for a decade, and who are prosperous and contented. You can guess why this is so, and you must do as these men do, and then you can have what they have.—New Jersey Trade Review.

Rivalry, open, fair, good natured and enterprising, is the life of business.

Master the whole business and the way to fortune has been mapped out.

As the design of THE CANADIAN GROCER is to benefit mutually all interested in the business, we would request all parties ordering goods or making purchases of any description from houses advertising with us to mention in their letter that such advertisement was noticed in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

OUR FUTURE EGG MARKET.

The market which has for several years been the outlet for our surplus eggs, being now practically closed by the McKinley Act, we are just now casting about to find a new outlet Our egg-production has, we believe, enough natural force in itself to open a channel into some other centre of outside consumption. We have the eggs, outsiders have the consuming capacity, and there are markets to which ingress is untaxed. As well might the Republican party of the United States hope to dry our Columbian river by closing the section of its bed which runs through their country, as to aim at the extinction of a Canadian egg trade by the setting up of a prohibitory duty. The river would be likely to find other avenues through which to transmit its waters to their natural destination, and perhaps one of these might still be through the United States, despite the restriction. Our egg production is a large and forceful interest. It will gravitate to some leading seat of consumption, probably to some extent still to the United States, as the want which made that country a good market in the past will not be extinguished by the attempt to snuff out our egg-trade. United States citizens will still have a liking for eggs, and that liking, though handicapped by the 5c. duty, is apt to afford a basis of trade with us yet.

But the market to which our egg-raisers and dealers are now addressing their attention, is that of Great Britain. England and Scotland import a very large quantity of eggs, the bulk of which are laid in Denmark. We are now making a set for the British consumption, and are not unlikely to win a share of the profit now derived by the Danes from catering to it. Necessity is the mother of invention, and if the length of time elapsing between production here and consumption in England be an enemy to the freshness of our stock, we must bestir ourselves to find some antidote for this effect of lengthy transit. Our large egg dealers are sanguine that the eggs can be got to the English market without damage, and apprehend no obstacle to trade with that market but the mistrust that is felt by consumers, who cannot be assured that the eggs are almost new-laid. Egg-packers and steamboat companies are at work upon schemes for preserving the health and integrity of stock throughout an ocean voyage, and there is little doubt the issue of these investigations will be satisfactory. The really difficult thing to do is to establish confidence in buyers. If they can be brought to believe in the original freshness of our stock and the wholesomeness of our shipping methods, we can sell eggs in England. If not, we cannot. But we do not think that failure is probable. Our attempts to open up markets in England have before now been in the face of prejudice and alien competition, but we have succeeded. England buys nearly all our cheese, despite the bad name of our domestic make, which was the incubus upon our manufacturers in their efforts to interest English buyers. Our cattle trade flourishes, notwithstanding all the misgiving in English minds that importation from our continent was likely to supply their market with diseased stock. Our egg trade, too, will find support, we believe, in English consumption.

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

One of the largest and most enthusiastic meetings ever held by the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association was that to which its members turned out on Monday night. The rallying sentiment which had brought so many together was disapproval of recent developments of the combination movement among the wholesale grocers. Very little attention was given to any other matter. The meeting did not close till near midnight. Among the members present the following took an active part in the proceedings: Messrs. Mills, Thackray, Westren, Binnie, McCulloch, Roberts, Williamson, Butcher, Clarke, Sinclair, Lindsey, Barron, Booth, Mara, Berwick, Sykes, Jones, Partridge, Radcliffe, Hodgins. Mr. Mills, the president, was in the chair.

The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted.

NEW MEMBERS.

Mr. S. Saunders was proposed by the secretary, Mr. Thackray, upon whose motion the by-law regulating the admission of new members was suspended, and Mr. Saunders was elected unanimously.

THE PIC-NIC ACCOUNTS.

The Chairman announced that the report of the pic-nic committee was simply waiting on a few subscribers who had not yet handed in certain small donations. The treasurer of that committee, Mr. Westren, stated that if all subscriptions were paid there would be a balance on hand of about $40. He moved that at this meeting Messrs. Barron and Lindsey be appointed auditors of the pic-nic accounts, so that when the report should be completed the auditors would be able to dispose of the matter before next meeting. Mr. Roberts seconded this motion, and it was carried.

THE WEDNESDAY HALF HOLIDAY.

The secretary reported that, on his rounds to collect the contributions to the delinquent list, he had put the questions framed at last meeting, and which he had been instructed to ask of retailers to get at the drift of trade opinion as to the advisability of closing on Wednesday afternoons during the summer months. The replies, he stated, were virtually all in favor of such weekly half holiday.

ACCOUNTS.

An account of $5.25 for printing done in connection with the agitation for higher license upon pedlars, was presented and passed.

WORD FROM KINDRED BODIES.

The following communication was reported as received and answered by the secretary :

HAMILTON, Sept. 25, '90.

DEAR SIR,—Will you please to forward me a copy of your by-laws. We meet on Monday evening to organize a permanent Grocers' Association if possible.

Yours truly,

B. WINNIFIRTH.

The next communication, from the Brantford Co-operative Society, asking the same favor, had not been answered, as the nature of the Society making the request was not known. The Association approved of the Secretary's discretion.

The next communication was as follows :

HALIFAX, N. S., 12th Sept. 1890.

JNO. T. THACKRAY, Esq.

DEAR SIR,—Your favor of last August to hand. I wish to thank you for some of your suggestions, which we have acted on. I am of opinion that our Association is in a fair way to make an honorable record here. We have quite a lot of work on hand at the present time. In this city there is no restriction on pedlars, and as a result, everything under Heaven, be it manufactured or a natural product is hawked from door to door. The Association propose to remedy this, among other things. Again thanking you for past favors,

I remain very truly yours,

H. V. WIER.

N. B.—We have two-thirds of the trade, about 70 members to start with, which, perhaps is a fair start.

H. V. W.

VOLUNTEERS OF ANTI-COMBINE SCHEMES.

The following anonymous communication was next read :—

TORONTO, Oct. 10, 1890.

MR. THACKARY, Sec. Retail Grocers' Assn.

DEAR SIR,—There seems to be a good deal of talk about this wholesale grocers' combination doing just as they like, and I for one would like to see something done in the matter.

I think if the grocers of the city were to form themselves into a joint stock company then we as grocers could have stock in this company, and then would derive some benefit by purchasing all our goods from the one firm.

I remain, yours, etc.,

GROCER.

The reading of the next communication was prefaced by a few explanatory words from the chair. An evening paper had presented a view of the general effect upon the retail trade of certain resolutions passed at the last meeting of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild. This article elicited from the author of the scheme now to be unfolded, a request, sent through the office of the evening paper in question, to be permitted an interview with the president of the Retail Grocers' Association. The request was thus indirectly sent, because the name of the president was unknown to the person who sought to meet him. The request was granted, but at the meeting between the two gentlemen, the president referred an anti-combine scheme proposed by the other party to the meeting, to the Association. In the communication now to be read was that scheme promulgated. It was the work of Mr. J. D. Wright. The scheme is outlined in Mr. Wright's letter as follows :—

Combinations for purposes of extortion must be met by co-operation to resist extortion.

Wasteful methods must be abolished or want will result.

The retailers are boss and the wholesalers can be dispensed with. The combine can be burst and money made while doing it.

The foregoing are facts.

It is also a fact that at least three million dollars a year is spent by wholesale grocers in Canada upon commercial travellers. These three million dollars are added to the first cost of the goods, and the retailer pays this, besides a profit to the wholesaler. This is a wasteful method.

Why do wholesalers send out travellers ? To benefit the retailers ? No. To get ahead of a rival wholesaler and benefit himself ? Yes. Then why in the name of common sense should the retailers pay the piper for the army of commercial travellers who dance over the country and tumble over each other in the race for orders for the benefit of the wholesale men ? Let us have it on the "European plan," each man pay for what he gets, but it is not fair to ask the retailer to pay for the wholesaler's pudding.

But some will say: Oh, but the consumer pays it in the end, the retail grocer collects the three million dollars from the consumers as he sells out the goods. Very good, but who pays the retail grocer for acting as tax collector for the benefit of the wholesale men ? Has not the grocer enough to do to collect a living profit from the consumers, let alone a tax on the goods ? Has not the consumer a hard enough time to pay a fair price for the goods without this wasteful tax?

Let the men who benefit by travelling pay for it, the retailer has no use for it.

A wholesale grocer invests $50,000 in business, and sells $500,000 of goods a year. His travelling expenses will amount to at least $10,000 a year, or 20 per cent. of his capital.

A sufficient number of retail grocers club together and say to that wholesale man, we require $500,000 of goods each year, we will order them from you, but we don't wish to be "drummed" for orders, we will send you a post card when we want anything. That wholesaler dismisses his travellers and these grocers save him $10,000 each year, besides paying him a fair profit, the result is that in two or three years he is wealthy and retires, but the retailer stays behind the counter.

These grocers by simply joining together and saying they will buy from one particular wholesaler, have the power to make that man's fortune. Why then should they not make that fortune for themselves ? Why give it away ?

If united and organized the retail grocers can secure from the investing public, for six to eight per cent., the largest part of the money necessary to do their own wholesale business. They can make 20 per cent. on that money by saving travelling expenses besides the usual profit of the trade.

Suppose fifty grocers use $300,000 of goods each year, and they organize a joint stock company to buy and distribute the goods they require, a capital of about $30,000 would be required. Of this three-fourths should be obtained from the outside public, leaving $7,500 to be paid in by the fifty members of the company, or $150 each.

Estimating the profit of the wholesaler to be 8 per cent. on the goods he sells, the following result would be arrived at :—

Working capital invested by the public	$22,500 00
Invested by the grocers	7,500 00
Total working capital	$30,000 00
Turn over $300,000 at 8 per cent.
Gross profit	$24,000 00
Expense, including interest to public	13,000 00
Net profit	11,000 00

Equal to 146 per cent. on grocers' capital.

Now what would be the intrinsic value of the stock held by these fifty grocers? Bank stocks are worth a price which returns 5 or 6 per cent. on the investment. The $7,500 of grocers' stock if only required to yield a like return, would be actually worth $183,000, or, in other words, each of the fifty grocers by investing $150 would have secured as good a thing as though he had bought $3,700 worth of stock in the Bank of Montreal for $150.

Under this proposal, the power of the combination is broken so far as those who become members of the company are concerned. It matters not if the company has to charge its members combination prices, because if they pay with the one hand they receive the entire profit back again with the other.

It is not intended that this company shall seek for customers outside of its own members. It is confidently expected that (so soon as the benefits and profits of membership in the company shall become known, and be demonstrated by actual results) every wide-awake retailer in Canada will enrol his name and make the movement a national success.

It has been suggested to the promoter of this movement, that the sugar refiners would attempt to boycott the company, and refuse to sell at the best figures. But why should they when we are willing if need be to sell at the desired price ? For, as already shown, the selling price makes no difference to those supplied by this company. And dare they?

For, every hostile effort on the part of the manufacturer and the wholesaler only strengthens the co-operative movement and drives another nail in the coffin of the combine; and it must not be lost sight of that legislation is turning its attention to those who combine and conspire to oppress and extort, and if sugar refiners make themselves too obnoxious they may wake up some of these mornings to find co-operation refining sugar.

Let the grocers use their power for the general good—let a company be formed now, however small, though the start be small the end will be big, now is the time to strike terror to the centre of the combination camp. Tyranny must be resisted, and let the war cry be, "Not a cent for tribute, but millions for defence."

The very general sense of the meeting upon this paper was acquiescence in its propositions, but that sense was not expressed in any resolution relating to this particular scheme.

ANTI-COMBINE DISCUSSION.

The secretary then read from a report of the recent meeting of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild at Quebec, the resolutions of that body relating to reduced terms of credit and rates of discount, the prepaying of freights, to canners' contracts, the expulsion of members, the listing of articles under combination prices, the grading of yellow sugars, that all graded sugars be sold at open prices, etc.; also the proceedings of the Toronto Wholesale Grocers' Guild, all which are to be found in our issue of the 26th of September.

Mr. Williamson asked if this association could not take some step to prevent further combination, or to use its influence against the strength the movement had already attained.

Mr. Barron said that some time ago this Association had signified its approval of combination, although he had always believed in every man's doing business as he pleased.

Mr. Mara believed it would be unwise for the Association to approve a certain course that seemed an obvious remedy for the evil. He considered his former conviction that combination on sugar was beneficial, was wrong, and he was now a believer in the unrestricted right to regulate prices according to the views of individual traders.

The Chairman was of the opinion that there were some houses in the Guild not from choice but because of the tyranny of the majority, and thought that some of them might be detached if any encouragement were given by the Association that its influence would be used to divert trade to such houses.

Mr. Radcliffe said he had interviewed several wholesalers, and was satisfied that many found the control of the Guild irksome, and were far from strong in their loyalty to it. One of the largest wholesalers on Front street stated that he had gone to the Quebec meeting intending to withdraw if there was much more combination talk. Two other leading wholesalers had expressed their disapproval of combination to Mr. Radcliffe. The wholesalers are afraid of each other. A broker had remarked that the wholesalers had about rope enough, and would soon have a scaffold to hang themselves. But for the Telegram article, Mr. Radcliffe felt assured, the Toronto Guild would have held its meeting and passed some more of the new combine resolutions. He took a list of combination articles, and showed to the Association that for nearly every one of them substitutes could be found by the retailers, and sold to the consuming public quite as easily and with equal satisfaction to buyer and seller. Some of the articles on the list had already been driven out of trade by the combination, as retailers had ceased to buy them, and thus the combination demonstrated its ill effects upon trade, having literally killed the trade in some articles. Mr. Radcliffe gave examples of combination articles that could be easily displaced from retail trade, by the introduction of available substitutes. James' dome black lead, could be supplanted by Nixie's stove polish, in the opinion of many a better article than James', which was already given up by many of the trade. An alternative for Dingman's blue could be got. Pearline was not so good an article as Babbitt's "1776," which was under no combine. Crosse & Blackwell's pickles were almost played out. In reference to these Mr. Hodgins strongly recommended Lazenby's. Instead of Royal yeast, Mr. Radcliffe, continuing, suggested Barm yeast. The Empire tobacco was not in the combination. As to matches, pails, etc., there was little immediate chance of relief from the tribute exacted by the combine. As for the soaps under the combine, there was no obligation on anybody to buy them. Morton's makes were yet free, Mr. Morton resolutely standing outside the combine. To this, Mr. Mara objected, that Morton would sell five boxes upon the same terms as he would sell a hundred. Mr. Radcliffe concluded by saying that the retail men of Toronto must have a paid broker, and that Mr. Thackray, the secretary, could as well be that man as any one. The broker idea was received with general applause.

Other members spoke in the same tenor as Mr. Radcliffe.

It was resolved that a committee of four be appointed to draw up for the consideration of this meeting an expression of the feeling of the Association upon the matter of combines as they now affect the grocery trade.

The committee was appointed, and after a few minutes' retirement returned with the following report, which was unanimously adopted :—

Whereas:—Owing to the excess to which the combine system is at present being carried by the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild; and, whereas, owing to information of further movements in that line, which are in reality an extortion felt severely by the retail trade; the result being a partial, if not total wiping out of the retailer's margin of profit and a hampering of our freedom as business men: We hereby pledge ourselves to substitute in every case possible, other goods for those at present under "combine" prices, as we feel it is in our power as caterers to the consumers to place upon the market any first-class article instead of the goods under the combine. We think combination prices are unjust to the consumer as well as the retailer, and knowing this fact, we now decide to oppose on every line possible, the action of the wholesale combine.

Be it also resolved—That we feel some action must be taken to procure our goods at first hands independent of the Combine.

It was further moved by Mr. Barron, seconded by Mr. Radcliffe, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Secretary of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, to each of the city papers, and to the different trade associations throughout the country.—Carried.

Mr. Jones thought some course of concerted action should be mapped out, that the Guild might see that the Association was prepared to do more than pass resolutions.

Mr. Mara felt that if the resolution were followed out there was enough in it to afford a basis whereon to bring the wholesalers to reason.

Mr. Hodgins said it was plainly signified to wholesalers that this body was prepared to do more than resolve, as its members had ceased to deal in certain combine goods, as James' blacklead and Croose & Blackwell's pickles. This course indicated plainly to the wholesalers that the retailers had a line of action along which they could extend further defensive movements as far as they pleased.

Mr. Jones was of the view that if the Association sent out a report of the censure it passed upon combine prices, and appointed a committee to draft a scheme for the purchase of goods otherwise than through wholesale channels there would not only be a declaration but a preparation for war. He would therefore move that a committee be appointed to get information about prices, about alternative non-combine goods, about houses willing to concede the demands of the Association as to flexible prices, and to prepare a scheme whereby the Association might proceed to buy independently of the Guild; the committee to consist of Messrs. Barron, Partridge, Radcliffe, Mills, Butcher, Roberts, Westren, Hodgins, Mara, Berwick. Mr. McCulloch seconded this motion, which was carried unanimously.

The meeting was then adjourned.

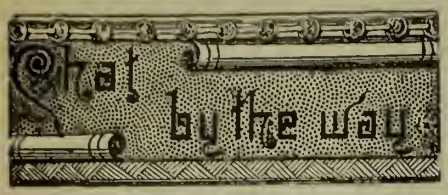
STORAGE

To Grocers!

There are three articles which the consuming public have decided are the best of their kind in the market, and it will pay every grocer to keep them in stock. They are



The "Horseshoe" brand of canned fruits and vegetables.
Packed by Bowlby Bros. & Co., of Waterford, Ont.

"Cairns" Home-made marmalade, jams and jellies.
Packed by Alexander Cairns, Paisley, Scotland.

The "Trident" brand of canned salmon.
Packed by Ed. Wadhams, Latimer's Landing, B.C.

Every package of the above brands guaranteed as to quality and weight.

BLAIKLOCK BROS, Agents,
17 Common St., MONTREAL.

Ruppel Bros., Elmira, are disposing of their business.

Mr. Ward, of John P. Mott & Co., Halifax, is here on his western trip.

The salmon pack on the Frazer river, B. C., this season is valued at $1,417,248.

Fifty thousand dozen eggs have been shipped to Detroit by McNaughton & Co., of Chatham.

The grocery store, kept by Mr. James Cronk, in Wallaceburg, was destroyed by fire, on Thursday night, the 9th inst.

The Guelph Soap Co. is extending its business throughout the Province. The soap was awarded the diploma at the Collingwood Exhibition.

Letters patent have been granted, incorporating the business of Hiram Walker & Sons into a stock company. The capital stock is placed at $5,000,000.

St. John's great exhibition is over and has proved an immense success. There were nearly 60,000 paid admissions registered at the buildings besides other thousands at Moosepath.

The Brantford Board of Trade has appointed a committee to arrange an exhibit for the Jamaica Exhibition. The Penman Mfg. Co. have decided to send a large quantity of their knit goods.

Some time the other night burglars effected an entrance into the dry goods establishment of J. M. Farthings, Aylmer. About $400 worth of silk handkerchiefs, kid gloves, and neckties were taken.

The "Trident" brand of canned salmon has made its appearance again on the market, after an absence of several years, and those who have sampled it say it has lost none of its old time richness and flavor.

Mr. Jas. A. Daglish, junior, buyer for the firm of John M. Garland, wholesale dry goods, Ottawa, was the recipient of a very handsome silver tea set, presented to him by his fellow employees, on the event of his marriage.

H. Yates, of the bonus tea store, Cornwall, exhibits, in his shop window a squash weighing 80 lbs. He also exhibits two mammoth pumpkins. These extraordinary vegetables took first prize at the Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry fairs.

There appears to be a gang of burglars operating throughout Waterloo and neighboring counties. Several villages in the North Riding have been visited lately by these gentry, with more or less success, and last week a store at Norwich was relieved of about $600 in cash and goods. A sharp lookout should be kept on stores and dwellings and everything made secure against such unwelcome intruders.—Galt Reformer.

The general store of Alfred & Jarvis, at Grimsby, was burned out completely the other night. Loss estimated at about $6,000, which is covered by $5,000 insurance. The building was owned by James Doran, but there was no insurance on it. Nothing was saved.

The Maple Leaf Brand of canned salmon is very popular with the consumers. About 25 car loads have been sold this season in Ontario, which is double the quantity sold last year. The value of this large lot is about $40,000, and the freight amounted to $5,400.

F. McRae, of the firm of McRae & Co., Beaverton, merchants, spent a few days with John A. Chisholm, barrister, last week. Mr. McRae was on his wedding trip, his bride Miss Kerr of Beaverton, sister-in-law of John McRae, senior member of McRae & Co.—Cornwall Freeholder.

Mr. Andrew McEwan, of Greenfield, is about to retire and take a well earned rest for the remainder of life's journey. It is now fully 25 years since Mr. McEwan accepted the position of bookkeeper and confidential clerk in the office of his brother-in-law, Mr. David Goldie, of the Greenfield mills.

At its last meeting the Montreal Trades and Labor Council adopted a report of the Legislative Committee asking that a law be passed to amend the factory act in order to prohibit the employment of children under sixteen years of age in cigar factories, and to prevent the competition of prison labor.

Owing to the large increased demand throughout Canada for "Cairn's" Homemade Marmalade, the stock, which is specially prepared for the Canadian market, has run short, so that all orders taken for fall shipment will have to stand over till the new season's stock is ready for shipment in January next.

While Joseph Bennett, an employe of R. Donald, grocer, at 134 Queen st. east, Toronto, was rolling a barrel of currants down cellar, on Friday, by means of a skid of ropes, the rope slipped, and he fell through the trap door, the barrel descending on him and fracturing his thigh. He was removed to the hospital in the ambulance.

Mr. J. M. Fortier, one of Montreal's most enterprising cigar manufacturers, has just arrived from Europe with probably $100,000 more than when he left this country several months ago, and all owing to the McKinley bill. Mr. Fortier purchased 650 bales of tobacco in Rotterdam, Holland. This was accomplished on the 15th September, but being unable to get a steamer for Liverpool a bargain was made with the captain of a tug boat to the effect that if he would get the tobacco on board of the Servia, which was to leave Liverpool for New York on the 20th, a cheque for $2,000 would be his. After a great deal of trouble the tobacco was received on board, and when Mr. Fortier arrived in New York an American importer offered him $30,000 for his bargain. This, of course, was refused, and to-day it is estimated that the Montrealer has cleared $100,000 upon his tobacco deal.

An advertising fakir who did up a number of western Ontario business men is in gaol at London. Even John Labatt, the well-known brewer, was one of his victims. The moral of all this is that merchants should stick to legitimate newspaper advertising. The man who takes a good space, in a good paper, puts in a readable advertisement, and changes it before it becomes stale, will keep himself well before the public without wasting his money on "fakes."—Cornwall Freeholder.

COFFEE CROP, 1891.

From the Rio News we learn that: "According to all accounts the blossoming is so abundant up country that the prospects are exceptionally good for an enormous coffee crop next year, both in the Rio and Sao Paulo districts. The season has thus far been most favorable, with just rain enough and a continuance of cool weather, to develope a strong and healthy blossom. With anything better than half a show, the crop is sure to be a large one. The question now arises—What are the planters going to do about it? Are they intending to continue lamenting the loss of their slaves? Are they proposing to continue sitting at the door of the national treasury begging for assistance? Or, are they willing to take hold of the problem by themselves and for themselves? One thing is certain, if the planter does nothing for himself, a great part of his large crop will be lost. We do not believe that Government aid has been an advantage to the planter in more than one case in twenty. It has either gone to his creditors, or it has been wasted in channels whence no good to his plantation could possibly come. Public assistance, as a rule, is demoralizing and obstructive, for it encourages wastefulness undermines private effort, and destroys all independence and enterprise. So far as we can see the planter needs no help whatever, either in money or through immigration. All that is required is a little enterprise and liberal management on his part. In the first place, he is producing an article for which there is always an active demand, consequently he has a basis for individual credit which, if not abused, will invariably yield him all the assistance he requires. And, in the second place, if he looks after his own affairs, treats his laborers consideratly and liberally, and pays good wages, he will never lack for laborers, either to cultivate the ground or pick his crop.

A feather duster disperses but does not remove the dust from the store.

Mr. Wm. Beech, of Toronto, Ont., has just arrived with a carload of fine Ontario dairy butter and a quantity of excellent cheese and hams—articles that the "Lake Province" excels in the production of. He is exposing the same for sale in a store on Water street, next to Van Valkenberg's meat market, and persons wanting a good article in any of the above lines at a reasonable price should call at once.—Daily World Vancouver, B. CHAPTER V.

When Mr. Bender said—"You may send me a small assortment of cutlery" I was happy again. He was turning to go away as if we were now through, but I felt as if we had but just begun.

"Don't be in a hurry," said I, "here is a very fair cigar; try it."

My opinion is he would much rather have been back in his store, but courtesy compelled him to thank me for the cigar, and when it was lit he sat down again. I took his full name, left a blank for the knives I would select for, him and then took up the matter of spoons.

No, he didn't want any spoons.

"How about table knives?"

"Full."

I took out an all steel knife and fork that cost us $1.20 a set and showed it to him. "When you need anything in this line," said I, "please remember this. The fork is steel," and I twisted the tines in the floor to prove my words," "and I can sell it at $1.25 a set."

The selling price on the knife was $1.40, but I wanted to start him. The bait took; he made up his mind he would not add to the pocket knife order, but he saw that this knife and fork were cheap. He handled them in such a way that I could see this.

"Our regular price," said I, "is $1.40, but I told you I would sell you close, and I will. You can get $2.00 for this knife, can't you?"

'Yes, it ought to sell for that," he said.

"Suppose you try a package," I suggested.

"How many is there in a package?"

I chose to understand that question in my own favor; table cutlery was put up two sets in a paper, and then three of these packages were tied up togother and repapered. For this occasion I concluded to call the larger amount a package, so I answered, "six sets."

"Well, you may send me a package," he answered.

Before entering it I picked up a fancy English knife among the samples, one that cost 92 cents a set. "Don't you want a few of these, too?" I asked.

"No, six set are enough."

If he was going to buy just that one kind, I began to be sorry that I offered it so cheap. "This is a very neat knife," I continued, still holding the English knife, "and costs you the same—$1.25."

He took it, and the fancy handle caught his eye.

"Try a package of each," said I, coaxingly.

"No, six sets will keep me in stock till you come again. But this knife will outsell the other."

As I made 28 cents on this and only 5 cents on the other, I was willing he should think the English the best-selling goods.

"If you like I will send these instead of the other."

"I guess you had better," and I entered the order.

Then he added a few files, some hinges, and other notions, until the bill was about $60.

I walked over to the store with him, thanked him cordially for his order, promised that the goods should come all satisfactory, and begged him to come and see me when in the city, promising to show him round and give him a good time. Then we shook hands and parted.

By this time it was well on to 5 o'clock. There was still one "grocery and saloon" to conquer, and I went toward it very hopefully. As a matter of course, there were half a dozen or more loafers there, and they were gathered around the stove. They watched me from the moment I opened the door. A tall specimen of humanity stood behind the counter, and leaned forward, as if to get his head nearer the crowd by the stove. I walked up to him with a "Good evening, sir," in my briskest voice.

"How are you?" said he, without changing his position. I saw I must do my talking before them all, and I worked myself up to it, though I would have given a dollar to have been home sitting by my desk.

The store was the ordinary one-horse grocery, and no signs of the saloon part were visible.

"How is trade?" I asked, for the want of something better to ask.

"Well, we've plenty of time to visit; hain't we, boys?"

The "boys" were delighted at being taken into the conversation, and each one added his mite of wit. "All right," thought I; "I guess I can make a strike one way, if I can't another," and I laughed at each one's remark, as was expected of me, and then I took a seat on the counter and proposed to be at home with them.

As good luck would have it, I had a string of stories to draw upon, and I remembered one that came in under the subject we had started, so I told it in my best manner. It took; the "boys" haw-haw'd, and the dealer clapped me on the back as if I was an old friend.

From that on it was free sailing; one after another had a story to tell, and I exerted myself more than I remember ever to have done before in my life. No topic is ever quite so entertaining to rural ears as that of city ways and life, and I found myself rehearsing every event that had happened in the city in the last six months—murders, burglaries fires, etc.

When this had gone long enough I swung my feet around inside the counter, and proposed to do some business, if possible. My eyes had not been idle while I had been there, and I could have given him a pretty fair inventory of the stock.

"Mr. Jackson," I began, and every noise was hushed, so curious were the men to know my business, "I am a traveling missionary, preaching from the text 'Hardware;' I am traveling for Heman & Co., and if there's anything you want in my line I want to send it to you; as the bitters say, 'Try me and I'll do you good.'"

He took the card I offered him, but without looking at it, said, "I'd like d——n well to give you an order, but it's so cursed dull I ain't buying or selling anythin'."

"But, my good friend," said I, putting my hands on his shoulders, "it will not always be so dull; spring is right here and the farmers want shovels and spades, and you must keep your stock up if you want to hold your own."

"Fact is," said he, "I've about made up my mind I will go out of the hardware trade; everybody keeps it here, and no one sells enough to make it pay for bothering with it."

"Don't you do anything of the kind," said

I, energetically; "you are keeping store to make money, and a dollar made on hardware is as good as a dollar made on soap, and if you don't sell your shovels this spring they won't go out of fashion; they're just as good next spring. This is my first call on you and I want an order. If it isn't more than $5, why, well and good, so that is all you want; but a small order I must have."

He laughed; "I've got to order, have I?"

"You have; so you might as well do it at once How is your stock of nails?"

"If I should give you an order, I will want some nails."

"Let's not have any 'ifs' about it; give me a little order, old fellow, and next time you are down to the city see if I don't get up some sport for you. I am not a very bad fellow; I'll treat you well, sell you goods right, and send you just what you order."

"Well," said he, "d—n the odds! I'll give you a little order, and if you don't do the fair thing I'll break your back the next time I see you."

"Good," said I; "I am willing. What is your first name, Mr. Jackson?"

"G. W. What do you ask for nails?"

"Three dollars."

"For all sizes?"

"No, for 10-penny; 8's are a quarter more."

"Blazes! You're away out of the way."

"I guess not; what makes you think so?"

"I know you are; I haven't paid that much for nails."

"You can tell in a minute; just hunt up your last bill."

He went toward the desk, and I followed him. His papers were in fearful disorder, but after a deal of rummaging he found a bill. While he was looking for nails I was looking at the entire bill, and taking notes of the prices charged in it.

"I guess you're right," said he, "here's 8's $3.75. But ain't they down now?"

"No, they are firm $3 for 10's."

"How long time do you give?"

"Give you all you want."

"That's fair; say twelve months."

"Twelve months it is; now will you pitch in, or will you hang off longer?"

"No, but what are your terms?"

"Thirty days, invariable; but if you take a day or two more we won't sue you."

"Well, send me a keg of 8's."

CANADIAN EGGS.

The Goderich Star of Oct. 10th gives the following in their leading article:—

Here's a significant fact about the egg trade. An order was closed in Goderich this week for 75,000 feet of lumber to be manufactured into 2,500 boxes for the shipment of eggs to England. This will be at least a second, if not a third shipment to that country by the same person, so that it does not look as though his first shipment there had been a failure. On the contrary, it is a positive proof that the purchaser is confident that he has a profitable market in Great Britain, and there is a general agreement of opinion amongst those who know the gentleman that the recent stories about his great loss on the first shipment were calculated to keep the price down with the producer, so that a neat sum could be saved before it becomes generally known that the eggs could be as profitably shipped to England as to the United States. The trick has been worked before, so that the impression is not unwarranted.

Sorel has given a bonus of $15,000 to I. J. Winship & Co., Montreal.

Mr. Joseph Inglis, Kemble, has sold his business and property to Messrs Gardiner & MacGregor of that place.

Perkins, Ince & Co. are showing a very fine sample of Patras currants this week, packed for their trade under the 'Crescent' brand. Ask their travellers to show you samples or send for them.

TORONTO, October 16, 1890.

GROCERIES.

Trade has been rather desultory, the record of the week's business showing it to be a series of buying spells, some of which took off a considerable quantity of stock. There would seem to be a basis for more activity than can now be reported, as the barley crop has mostly been marketed at figures much higher than those of last autumn's sales. But there seems to be a scarcity of money at the bottom of the somewhat tranquil state of present trade, for wholesalers find some difficulty in getting money on notes due. At the present stage of the season great stir is not looked for even when money is plentiful, but the seeming scarcity of money to meet matured engagements points to the same cause as operative against brisker trade.

CANNED GOODS.

The market for canned salmon appeared to be gathering fresh strength as we were on our way to press with last week's report. At that time some canners had begun to withdraw their goods from the market, and thus had signified an advance of 50c. per case. The spirit of this greater confidence in the value of stock has been the ruling feature of the week's trade, and though jobbers have made no advance they have done business on a firm basis. Prices of all canned goods are firmly maintained, especially on staple lines. There are a good many enquiries from jobbers, but holders are inclined to retain their stock to fill retail customers' orders. A bid of $1.15 was refused for 1,000 cases of a favorably known brand of tomatoes. This is, however, the figure at which jobbers are selling small lots. Peas are $1.15 and corn $1.10 to $1.15. Plums, gages and Lombards are firm at $1.85. In fruits $2.35 is asked for black raspberries and $2.25 for strawberries, with peaches at $3.75 to $4.

The New York Bulletin says: It is gratifying to observe in the London Grocer the following paragraph, inasmuch as the journal referred to has been a vigorous exponent of the "bear" side of the salmon market until very recently: "The position of the market for salmon at the moment is certainly stronger, and bids of 1s. to 1s. 6d. per case over the reduced quotation lately ruling have been refused for several large lines, so that purchasers for immediate consumption cannot now execute their orders on the same basis as before." Add to this the fact that English buyers have purchased considerable new Columbia river and British Columbia fish, and also some Alaskan for forward delivery, and reason may be found for venturing the statement that the surplus stock of 1889 pack in the foreign market will not go as far as some "authorities" on both sides of the Atlantic predicted not long ago. Within three days' time there have been orders here by cable for some specially favored Columbia river brands for immediate shipment to Liverpool direct via rail and steamer at the highest prices of the season, and fairly liberal quantities of British Columbia stock have also been taken at full prices for shipment via Montreal. As far as export movement is concerned, the market would thus appear to be in very fair shape, and the home trade movement is certainly not discouraging, although showing no particular animation at the moment.

The corn, peas and tomatoes of the Delhi canning factory are now fairly on the market, and they more than uphold the name of their brand. They are particularly fine this year. Peas were never before so hard to put up, on account of the rapidity of the ripening process, which made them hard, and rendered bursting and dissolving into an emulsion difficult to prevent. This difficulty has been happily overcome by the Delhi cannery, and the peas are intact.

COFFEES.

There is no new condition in the coffee market, and consequently no alteration in prices. There is a fairly good demand for Rios, and a rather dull business in Mochas and Javas. The production of Rio seems to be still limited as a consequence of the emancipation of the slaves, the shock of that reform not having been succeeded fully by a new industrial adjustment, and cultivation being therefore somewhat checked.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been a good run of buying by retailers. The prices of currants are unchanged, though provincials may be bought in some cases at a shade on the quotations. Stocks of currants are pretty full in all lines. Valencia raisins, off-stalk, have come 6½ and 7c., recent arrivals having had that effect upon the market. A low grade of Valencias has been offered at 6¼c. Selected Valencias are 7½ to 8c., a reduction of a cent and a half from the prices of the remains of the old crop. Valencia layers are a cent lower, selling at 8½ to 9c. Sultanas are 14½ to 16½c. They are very firm. They are the strongest article in the market, and are steadily but surely creeping up, though some houses have not yet asked the full advance. A bid of 14½c. for 500 boxes, to go west, was refused, 16c. being asked. Extra is at 16 to 18c. Present selling prices are considerably below what they can be laid down for. A recent cable represents an advance of nearly 300 per cent. on the cost of two years ago.

Malaga raisins are coming on the market, new London layers and black baskets being now looked for by the wholesalers.

NUTS.

Retailers are not doing much in nuts just now, and there is therefore little demand. Prices are unchanged.

The Pennsylvania Grocer says :—The total visible supply of peanuts in the United States is under 20,000 bags, of which quantity about 8,000 are held by St. Louis firms. When the fact is taken into consideration that the average consumption for the United States is about 600,000 bags per annum, it will be readily understood that the shortage is quite serious and that the prices are justified. The prospects for the new crop are for a very heavy yield. The new crop is due after October 20, and is usually not marketable until January 1st, from the fact that the nuts are not sufficiently cured. Owing, however, to the short market this year the new crop will probably go into immediate consumption, though at a loss of about 15 per cent. in roasting as against 7 for old goods.

RICE AND SPICES.

Business is dull. There is a lighter demand for rice and spices the last fortnight than there was during the previous month. The price of rice is, however, very firm, and spices are unchanged.

SUGAR.

There was moderately good sale for sugar throughout the week, better at all events than there was a week ago. Granulated is 7c. for quantities of 15 barrels and over, 7⅛c. for quantities under 15 barrels. Yellows run from 5¼ to 6½c. Raws are scarce, and worth 5 to 5¼c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Dark and medium syrups are hard to get, not being offered by refiners; brightest offer at 65 to 70c. Molasses firmer, 40c. being now generally asked for Trinidad in barrels. A very fine grade of New Orleans syrup is offered for $1 per gallon.

TEAS.

There is a lull in the tea trade, which was so good a few weeks ago. This does not affect prices, however, all low grades are as firm as ever, the commonist Japans not being purchasable below 18c. Young Hysons are all above 18c., mostly indeed above 19c. Blacks are still plentiful in all grades and very dull.

Russell & Co., Shanghai, September 5, as follows: Black teas—Since our last report a fair business has been done in the common grades, owing to the satisfactory news from London, and prices have advanced a full tael per picul. Prices have ranged as under: Ninehow, 10 to 19 tis per picul; Keemun, 17.25 do.; Hohow, 13.25 to 15 do.; Kutoan, 9.50 to 10.50 do.; Oaufa, 9.10 to 13.50 do.; Oopack, 10.50 do. Settlements, 12,500 half-chests; stock, 49,400 half-chests. Green teas—A large business has been done during the past ten days, buying being confined to a few firms. Firm prices have been maintained for both Pingeueys and country teas, especially in the choicest and common grades. Prices have ranged as under: Pingsueys, 12,300 half-chests chops, 12.50 to 24.25 tis per picul; Shanghai packs, 500 do.; 15 do; Fychows, 3,700 do., 15.30 to 17.25 do.; Tienkais, 4,900 do., 17.50 to 22.50 do.; Moyunes, 6,900 do., 19.50 to 28 do. Total settlements to date, 140,900 half-chest; 1889-90, 117,400 do. Stock, 34,260 do.; 1889-90, 50,600 do. Arrivals to date, 175,160 do.; 1889-90, 168,000 do.

Indian teas have been quieter during the week. In London all grades have shown a decline on account of the heavy supplies coming forward, but the prices are still much higher than last season, and the demand is not likely to improve to any appreciable extent until values recede to a more moderate level. The demand for Ceylon teas is well sustained and no signs are apparent of any return to lower rates. Commenting on the remarkable price paid for some small boxes of Ceylon tea, as recorded by our "Commissioner in the 'Lane,'" last week, the Grocer says:—"One of the rarest and most curious kinds of tea that has been imported into this country in modern times was offered by auction in Mincing Lane on Tuesday last, when a small parcel of three boxes Ceylon, weighing only 5 lbs. each, very showy, and described as 'choicest golden-tipped flowery Pekoe," fetched the astonishingly high price of 30 shillings and sixpence (30s. 6d.) per pound. Just fancy seeing tea marked up at such an extravagant figure in a grocer's shop window! and the effect, we should think, would be to scare away customers, instead of inviting the to buy, for no one surely but some magnate or a crowned head would ever think of drinking tea that cost so much money, as, at the rate of nearly twenty-three pence (1s. 11d.) per ounce, it would be dearer than many bottled wines of the finest vintages.

PETROLEUM.

A good demand keeps dealers busy just now, the firmer prices and shortening daylight operating to improve business.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

Nothing new can be reported. Business is very good and prices are stationary.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

There is no better supply than ever of good dairy tub, though the demand for it grows stronger. What is taken from first hands as prime quickly degenerates, and the stock of medium and low grade stuff is swelled by the product of good makers whose butter is allowed to decline in store. The quantity of even medium is not up to the demand for it, and prices are accordingly firm. Prime dairy tub brings 15 to 17c. Lower grades bring 10 to 12½c. The quantity of the inferior makes of medium butter is very large. Large rolls are 13 to 15c. as are also crocks and pails. Pound rolls are 18 to 20c. Creamery rolls are 22 to 24c. Creamery tubs are 22 to 23c. The stock of creamery tub now on the market is of the September make Cheese is higher and firmer, selling very freely at 10 to 10½c, Dealers here cannot get good stock from makers at anything much closer than 10c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

APPLES—Are firm at $2.50 to $3. Stock comes in slowly.

BEANS—Bring $1.65 to $1.80. The new crop is just beginning to come on the market.

DRIED APPLES—Some small lots of new have got into jobbers' hands and are selling at 7 to 7½c. obtained at 7 to 7½c. from outside holders.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Are uncertain, as the season has hardly opened. Prices run mostly from 13 to 15c., though purchases have been made at 12½c.

EGGS—There are more coming to Toronto now than before the passage of the McKinley Act. The small buyers have nearly all quit the trade, and the stock comes freely to Toronto dealers. Prices are easy at 17 to 18c.

GAME—Partridges are 50 to 55c. per brace, duck are 30 to 50c. per brace.

HAY—Baled is $9 to $9.50, but the upper price is weak.

HIDES—Cured are down a quarter, going off at 7¾c. Green are 7c. for No. 1 cows' and 6c. for No. 2.

HONEY—Is unchanged. Clear is 12½c. for good, 11c. for medium, and 7 to 8c. for low grades.

HOPS—Are growing firmer as the shortage in German, Bavarian, and American crops comes to be known. This year's growth is 30 to 35c., and last year's, when it is to be had, is 20 to 25c.

OATS—Are 38 to 39c.

ONIONS—Are $1.75 to $2. Stock continues to be rather scarce.

POTATOES—Have not improved, as 50c. remains the price for cars, which come in freely. Out of store, prices are 65c.

POULTRY—Turkeys are 10c. a pound, ducks are 60 to 70c. a pair, and chickens are 50 to 60c. a pair.

SKINS—Sheepskins are steady at 85c.

STRAW—Is $5.50 to $6, and is in growing request.

TALLOW—Is unchanged at 2c. for rough and 5½c. for refined.

WOOL—Is 20c. in fleeces, and clothing wool is 22c.

FISH.

The fish market at present is overstocked with fresh fish, smoked fish having taken their place. The latter have also caused the fresh fish to come down in price. Local dealers have already from seven to eight tons of frozen fish on hand for the winter trade, which is expected to be much better than last year's. There have been no white fish, British Columbia salmon, or black bass on the market this week. The prices for the week are: Trout 6 to 6½c.; lake herring $2.00 to $2.50; pickerel 4 to 5c.; pike 4c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The dullness which has reigned for above a month in the green fruit market is the predominant condition still. There is a minimum of buying, and large stocks are consequently not carried. The coming in of the new fruit makes this a season in which jobbers do not go very freely upon the market. Jamaica oranges are $5 to $7. Floridas will be in very soon, but for some time there will be no large stock of them. As yet they are rather green. Messina lemons are $9 to $10. Malaga lemons are coming forward, and will sell next week at $6 to $8.

PROVISIONS.

Trade is very healthy now, and in no line is there dulness. The want of hams is still urgent and restrictive of business. Packers expect to be supplied in a few weeks.

BACON—Long clear is 8 to 8¾c. Backs are 10½ to 11c. Bellies are 10½ to 11c. Rolls are 9½ to 10c.

DRESSED HOGS—Are worth $6 to $6.50.

HAMS—Are firm at 13c. for smoked, and 11c. for sweet pickled.

LARD—Is 9 to 9½c.

MESS PORK—Is $15.00 to $16.50.

DRY GOODS.

Wholesale dry good houses are not as busy as they could wish, but they are far from quiet. A fair demand for sorting keeps trade moving at a very good pace. Prices are steady. Money is not circulating freely.

SALT.

The first car of crude salt since the 1st of October arrived out Wednesday. The demand for the next two weeks will be very large. The sales transacted for the week have been good, and have been at the same prices except dairy salt, which has advanced 5c. Small lots have advanced from 5 to 10c. The sales transacted by the Toronto Salt Works for the week are: 2 cars bbls. at $1.40, 2 cars sacks at 20c., and 2 cars dairy at $1.25. Smaller quantities sell at $1.55 to $1.60 for bbls.; 85 to 90c. for sacks, and 55 to 60c. for ¼ sacks.

MONTREAL

MONTREAL MARKETS.

OCT. 16, 1890.

GROCERIES.

There has been no particular feature to this branch of trade during the week. Business in a general way has been fair, the most prominent feature being continued activity in dried foreign fruits, which has effected a pretty good clearance of the stock in first hands.

SUGAR, SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is no feature to the sugar market locally outside of a quiet business in refined, the demand being somewhat limited. Refiners, however, are not urging sales to any extent, and prices are maintained around 6⅝c. for granulated and 5⅞ to 6c. for yellows, which is a slight fractional decline from the figures that prevailed at the beginning of last week. There is nothing to note regarding raw stock, and there is only one lot held here in first hands. Recent cables quote beet very firm in London, and rather higher, while refined finds a steady demand.

Syrups are scarce here, the holdings of the two refineries being very light, while there has been business in some American, which was offering during the latter portion of the week at 49 to 50c. per gallon owing to scarcity. Quotations here are 3¾ to 4c. for ordinary grades and 4¼c. for extra bright per pound.

There have been no new features to molasses, holders still asking 37½ to 40c. per gallon, and present indications are that prices will advance rather than decline. The stock recently purchased on American account is still here in bond, but the Halifax purchases by the same syndicate have been ordered to Portland, and the trade expect that the lots at Quebec and on spot will follow them across the line shortly. If they do prices are bound to stiffen.

TEA.

The tea market has ruled quiet since the recent sales last week, and there has been no business to note. Cables state that China teas are very firm in London, while India and Ceylon are steady.

The sale of teas imported direct from Japan and China by Messrs. John Duncan & Co., were sold by catalogue on the 9th inst., in the warehouse by Mr. T. J. Potter, every lot was sold absolutely without reserve. The buyers present were from Kingston, Hamilton, Cornwall, Toronto, Ottawa, Quebec, London, England, Winnipeg, and a large number of others were represented by brokers. One of the chief features of the trade was the purchase of a large quantity by a large English firm for immediate shipment to London. The principal portion of the shipment was new crop Japans which realized from 16c. to 25c. Imperials brought 21c. to 23c, gunpowder 24c. to 35½c., Young Hysons, 18½ to 36c., Congo 12½ to 34c., Indian teas, 28c., Ceylons 27c. In all 4696 packages were sold in an hour and three-quarters.

RICE.

This market is unchanged, with a fairly good distributive trade in progress, but no large turnovers noted. We quote: Common $2.70, Japan $4.10 to $4.25, and Patna $5.50.

SPICES.

A small quiet business has been done in

THE THRIFTY HOUSEWIFE.

Is always on the LOOKOUT for LABOR-SAVING DEVISES, whereby the HOUSEWORK can be LESSENED. An article that saves LABOR, TIME and DIRT must be INVALUABLE in every HOUSE. Such an article is the NEW IMPROVED SILVER STAR STOVE POLISH. This Polish entirely SUPERCEDES all the OLD-FASHIONED DOME and OTHER leads just as the ELECTRIC LIGHT SUPERCEDES THE CANDLE & LAMP. By the use of the SILVER STAR STOVE POLISH more than HALF the TIME and LABOR is SAVED as it is all ready for use. Being a PASTE it does not SLOP or SPILL nor does it STAIN the HANDS. It can be USED on a HOT or COLD STOVE, and is altogether the MOST PERFECT STOVE POLISH of the Day. Be sure you get the SILVER STAR put up HANDSOMELY in 3 doz. hinged cases, each case containing show cards and advertising matter. This Polish will not dry up or eat the tins. For sale by all wholesale dealers and by this branch of business during the week, Pemento, Jamaica ginger and pepper being steady and unchanged.

FRUIT.

The activity in dried foreign fruit noted last week has been continued, and most of the first arrivals being turned over, prices are firmer, the advance which we intimated a week ago being made. This is owing to the fact that the Dracona's cargo has been delivered from the wharf, while the most of it has gone into consumers hands, so that wholesale lots are very scarce on spot. Prices, therefore, are fully ¼c. higher, and sales of car-load lots of Valencias have been made here at 6¼c., consequently values are bound to rule firm until the arrival of the second direct steamer, the Escalona, which has a much smaller consignment than the Dracona. She is expected here toward the end of the month, while the third boat, the Florence, sailed from Drina on the 12th of September. The amount of her cargo should be very small, but no definite news has been received regarding it, beyond a letter to a leading firm of importers here, which states that as yet their agent cannot speak of her cargo as the scarcity of boxes at Drina is a great drawback, and as fresh lumber cannot be got forward soon enough the Florence's cargo is bound to be light. The currant's business has been fair during the week, prices being very firm with sales of good sized lots at 5¾c in barrels ; 5⅞c for half barrels, and 6c in cases. The first arrivals have been pretty well turned over, and no one expects any decline. Mail advices from Great Britain state that business in this article has been brisk with activity in all growths. Other lines of dried fruit are unchanged with business unimportant. Dried apples are firmer here under light supplies and some enquiry at 13 to 15c. Imported green fruit furnishes little trade except a jobbing business. Almeria grapes are offering at $4.50 to $6. Lemons are quoted at $12 to $13 a case, and $5 to $6 a box, and Jamaica oranges unchanged at $5 to $6.

BUTTER.

The butter market is unchanged in all important features. There has been some business in Western dairy on Maritime Province account at 14c., but the bulk of the trade passing is in jobbing lots for local wants. We quote : Late made creamery, 20 to 22c.; summer makes, 17 to 18c.; finest townships dairy, 18 to 20c.; western dairy, 14 to 14½c.; medium do., 10 to 12c.

CANNED GOODS.

Trade in this line continues very slow. Packers are pushing out tomatoes on a $1 basis, but the movement in other lines is limited to small lots in a jobbing way. Quotations on the whole are steady.

EGGS.

The egg market has exhibited no change since our last and there does not appear to be any accumulation of stock the demand being fully up to the receipts. Consequently we quote prices unchanged at 16½ to 17½c. according to quality. Dealers do not expect much decline from the present basis as the trade generally admit that the country has been pretty well cleared up. Everything however depends on the weather, for if there is any spell of really fine, there may be some buying done in the country.

CHEESE.

The cheese market shows but slight change from the position it occupied a week ago, except that there appears to be more desire on the part of factorymen to "let go" their holdings as shown at the recent Board meetings, where bids of 10c. were as a general thing accepted for September's, when they were refused a week ago. This spirit has led to some business, the most important during the past week being the sales of Combinations, in all comprising some 23.000 odd boxes. The price was kept private, but it could not be over 10¼c. We quote: Fine September's, 10 to 10¼c.; late made August's, 9⅝ to 9¾c.; early August's, 9 to 9⅜c.; medium grades, 8 to 9c. Cable, 48s.

GREEN FRUIT.

The main feature of the week in this branch has been the gratifying cables received from Liverpool, where comparatively high prices have been made on the first turnover of Cakadian fall stock re Lake Winnipeg. The prices realized are from 25 to 50 per cent. better than the first sales last year, from which it would appear that the expectations of a favorable apple season are likely of realization. In fact all round, both locally and otherwise, prices are generally better this year. The lot referred to at Liverpool comprised 665 barrels of Canadian fall varities. The prices realized were: Kings 26s. 6d., Blenheim pippins 27s., twenty ounce 24s., and culverts 21s., which means a range of about $4 to $6 here. In consequence of these prices the stock of Kings and other choice varieties are firmly held here. Locally business has been of a fair distributive nature. Fall apples have been moving steadily at $2.75 to $3.75, and the first arrivals of winter stock were received this week, $4 being the best bid that has been made on them. They are firmly held, and $3.60 is the lowest figure that will move any really desirable stock in the country.

WINES AND LIQUORS.

This market continues firm in consequence of recent American purchases. The first brandy vessel from Charente is now at Halifax and is due here a week later, her cargo being anxiously looked for owing to the light stock on spot.

HOPS.

There is no change to the position of this market, and consumers have not taken hold in a general way yet. Outside of one transaction that was noted at a range, somewhere between 30 and 35c., there have been no sales to brewers. Holders in the country are asking long figures, stipulating for 30c and upwards at the cars.

ASHES.

There has been some shipments going forward in this line of late, as is generally the case towards the close of navigation. Prices are steady ; first pots $4.35, and seconds $3.90. Pearls $5.23. Stocks are being reduced, about 100 barrels being sent across the line during the week, and the removal of the American duty is bound to benefit trade.

PROVISIONS.

There has been nothing to note during the week peyond a steady business in pork and lard. We quote:—Canadian short cut pork, $17.50 to $18 per barrel; mess pork, western, per brl $16.50 to $17; short cut, western, per brl $17.00 to $17.50 ; hams, city cured, per lb 12 to 12½c.; hams, canvassed, per lb 12 1-2 to 13c.; lard, western, pails, per lb 9 to 9¼c.; lard, Canadian, in pails 8¼ to 8 1-2c.; lard, C. O. P., 10 1-2c.; bacon, per pound, 9 to 10c.; lard, com. refined, per pound, 8 to 8½c.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

There has been no feature in this connection during the week. New wheat flour's have been offering at somewhat lower prices, and this has been imparted a somewhat easy feeling to the market, but on the whole prices are steady. In grain business has been very dull.

The stock of flour in store shows an increase of 1,134 barrels over last week and a decrease of 16,218 bbls. compared with the same date last year.

The stocks of grain in store show a decrease of 25,951 bushels of wheat, 162 bushels of barley, and an increase of 7,826 bushels of corn, 11,831 bushels of peas, 20,698 bushels of oats, and 5,624 bushels of rye compared with those of a week ago. Compared with the same date last year there is a decrease of 199,235 bushels of wheat, and an increase of 35,668 bushels of corn, 3,315 bushels of peas, 26,532 bushels of oats, 531 bushels of barley and 11,035 bushels of rye.

"The city grocers are going to ——£" is the catch expression a leading retailer has been working off on travellers this week. Being an Englishman they at first thought him profane but later they saw the point.

The Best Grocers Make a Point of Keeping it always in Stock.

POLITENESS A NECESSITY.

Pleasant manners are of almost inestimable value to business men, and especially to those who are brought into direct contact with all classes of the public. In the retail line many a business has suffered materially while others have been entirely ruined, by the inability of the proprietor to show a pleasant face continually while being subjected to a badgering by half a dozen whimsical and shallow-brained women. "A man may smile and smile, and be a villian still," says the immortal William. Hence, a courteous disposition and affable manners are no criterion of a person's character, and the public may stand more chance of being cheated by the polite dealer than by he of morse and surly temper. But nine out of ten people, particularly if they belong to the fair sex, as nine-tenths of the grocer's customers do, actually would prefer, if they had a choice, to be cheated by a pleasant mannered man rather than patronize a grumphy individual of the most undoubted integrity. In our walks about the city we often enter the grocery stores on our route for the purpose of noting the facilities for doing business, the display and quality of goods in stock, and the manners of the proprietors aud their assistants. We dislike to pick flaws in the retail trade, but in the interests of the retailers themselves we must say that in general we find more to criticise in the manners of storekeepers and clerks, than in any other of the points mentioned above, and have no doubt that what is true of the trade hereabouts holds good in many other localities. We find enterprising dealers strenuous in their efforts to extend their trade by every channel open to them, and we also find that trade hampered and new patrons repulsed by the absence of so small an essential as common politeness. Now, affability and pleasant manners do not by any means imply servility, and there can be no excuse for the dealer or clerk who fails to display them in the interests of the business. Politeness is one of the few weapons that the small dealer has at his command to meet the competition of larger dealers who buy more cheaply, as the larger the business the greater the number of assistants required and the less chance of the customers being treated with deference, clerks being as a rule more wanting in this respect than the proprietors of stores. That this advantage is not fully utilized by the average retailer is our firm belief, hence these few remarks.—Merchants' Review.

EGGS FOR ENGLAND.

Three hundred cases of eggs were last week shipped from Montreal to England as an experiment, and if successful—as is confidently expected—they will be followed by other shipments. Owing to the prohibitory duty levied by the McKinley Act on eggs, Canadian producers are now looking out for other markets. One effect of the increased duty will be a very tangible increase in the exportation from the port of Montreal, and already the shipping agents are corresponding with Ottawa concerning the conveyance of these delicate articles of food to the other side of the sea. Mr. Foster, Minister of Finance, has written to each of the steamship companies' representatives in Montreal, asking for all information concerning facilities on board the steamers for the safe carrying of the eggs. Most of the lines possess admirable facilities for the shipment of eggs. The Beaver line has had each of its steamers fitted up with three of Blackman's patent power ventilator wheels or fans, each of which supplies 30,000 cubic feet of fresh air per minute. Last year an exporter shipped 11,000 dozen of eggs to the English market as an experiment. A person who saw the eggs taken out on the other side of the Atlantic said that in three cases there were only six eggs broken. They were taken to the London, Liverpool, Manchester, and Scotch markets, and were all sold at a profit. They were fresh and in good condition, and enquiries for further lots were made. The Dominion line also has made excellent arrangements, and any shipments so far taken over by the line have been landed fresh and in good order. All the companies, including the Allan and Reford, are kindly disposed towards the new trade, and promise to meet the demands of the exporters in every way possible to ensure the fresh keeping of the eggs. Tho opening of navigation next year promises to see a new era in the British export trade of Canada. Producers here say that large quantities of eggs will be shipped from here to England, and that very few will be sent hereafter to the United States. The British markets are at present supplied from France and Belgium, but it is believed Canadian eggs will be preferred. The freight on eggs to Liverpool will be about fifteen shillings per ton.

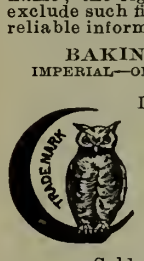
THE CANADIAN GROCER PRICES CURRENT.

TORONTO, Oct. 16, 1890.



This list is corrected every Thursday. The prices are solicited for publication, and are for such qualities and quantities as are usually ordered by retail dealers on the usual terms of credit.

Goods in large lots and for prompt pay are generally obtainable at lower prices.

All quotations in this department are under the direct control of the Editor, and are not paid for or doctored by any manufacturing or jobbing house unless given under their name; the right being reserved to exclude such firms as do not furnish reliable information.

BRAINS EXPERIENCE CAPITAL

We have these requisites, and we use them in the publication of THE CANADIAN GROCER AND GENERAL STOREKEEPER. They are the corner-stones of the successful business we are building. The fourth is Organization. No paper published in Canada has grown as rapidly in circulation and influence as THE GROCER. No paper has given better returns to subscribers and advertisers.

We do not claim that we have as large a circulation as the metropolitan dailies, but we do assert that we reach a larger number of grocers and general storekeepers in Canada than any other paper. We admit that we cannot afford to insert advertisements as cheap as many other papers do and at the same time keep the paper up to its present high standard of excellence.

ADVERTISING PAYS

At any rate does the cheapest paper pay best? If you are ill, do you skirmish round for the cheapest doctor? If you are in trouble, do you engage the cheapest lawyer to handle your case? This is the principle some advertisers go on; then they say, "advertising don't pay."

Of what use is a large circulation among thousands of readers who never will buy goods from you? Why take six bottles of medicine when one will cure you? THE CANADIAN GROCER goes direct to your customers.

IF DONE
JUDICIOUSLY

Judicious advertising pays, but there are thousands of dollars wasted annually by advertising in useless mediums, but especially fakes.

Vol. IV. TORONTO AND MONTREAL, OCTOBER 24, 1890. No. 43

THE AUTUMN NUMBER OF THE GROCER is now in your hands. Accept it as the currency of our thanks to you and to all to whose support and encouragement THE GROCER has been beholden. It also gives you an idea of the stature to which our business has grown, and we hope it is a satisfactory bulletin of the bodily and mental health of the journal to whose progress you have been contributory. Sensible objects always make a stronger impression than words, and the best measure of our improvement must be taken from a comparison of this number with the very first we issued. These two numbers are linked together by a series, which we trust is another record of earnest and successful endeavor to serve well the cause of the retail grocers. A third evidence, partly an underlying complement of the other two, and also partly an effect of them, is the continuous and rapid expansion of our subscription list. It simply illustrates how great things from small beginnings grow. That list has now become an excellent and all but exhaustive directory, to the names of men in the grocery and general store business of this country.

The deeper the soil which a paper has the cultivation of in the field of its subscription, the thicker and more enriching will be the marl of advertising which will deposit upon it. The stronger then will become the facilities and resources of that paper to improve itself for the service of its readers. This has been our experience, and we have rendered as we have received. The improvement of our paper has increased our subscription, our increased subscription has carried the line of our advertising patronage higher, and the enlarged volume of our advertisements again has reacted upon the improvement of our paper. Good management is therefore the primary and fundamental element in the success of any paper. Good management involves many things. Some of them that our practice includes under that general head are : studying our customers' wants, doing all we promise, sparing no pains to get at the facts in every situation of the market, upholding the cause of the grocer wherever it is threatened or assailed, keeping pace with the times, being outspoken in behalf of what we consider not expedient but right, doing business on business principles, working. We have never yet received from any trader a question on any matter of trade import, that we have been too busy to answer promptly, even if we had to set going a considerable circuit of inquiry. Our success we attribute in no small degree to the fact that we were willing to go great lengths in the interests of our subscribers and advertisers.

A special issue this autumn is due not only to our own progress and our sense of gratitude to our readers for their support, but is befitting to the abundant yield that has been a general feature of the year's growth. For, latent in that abundance, is the power that is hoped to be sufficient to drive trade at a smart speed throughout the coming year. In the lap of plenty are to be studied the physics of trade. This year they give promise of unusual energy, and there is no business which is more sensitive to general good times than is the grocery and general store trade. It is seemly therefore, that the journal identified with that trade should hail the prospect by the issue of a special number. The gratifying outlook of trade after so prolonged a period of dullness should be a sufficient reason of itself why we put a little of our autumn glory on. The conversion of staple crops into money has already begun. Our barley is pretty well sold at a good price, and instead of lying stored within our country waiting for a hypothetic high figure, it is now malting in the United States, while its equivalent in money—the ready sinews of business—is with us. For our wheat the market also yawns, and the beauty of it is we have the stock, whereas many of our former competitors for the market have a deficit. In many other lines the same is true: we have what corresponds to an imperative outside want, and in this condition is the guarantee for money circulation and trade activity, Our shortage in fruit will be much more than counterpoised by our surplus in products of greater value.

We prefer to look upon the McKinley Act less as a fetter to trade than an irritant to the adventurous quest of new trade which has played so important a part in the history of the race to which we belong. England is great and became great, simply because her subjects were never content to settle down to the supplying of acquired markets. She not merely made herself great, but she became a civilizer of backward peoples, by the roaming of her pertinacious sons over the face of the deep, for the discovery of regions of dormant consumption. She taught nations wants that their own consciousness would have been ages evolving, and while she enlightened them in the teaching, she profited by it as well. And it may be so with ourselves. We have kept too much in hand that spirit of commercial adventure, which makes England a modern Phœnicia. We remained quiescent as long as we had one market. Now that the gates of that market are shut we must look about for others. We have abundance of stuff that the nations of the South have to buy. They want our flour, wheat, fish, lumber, potatoes, fruits. The McKinley Act is apt to be felt in its effects as a stimulus for the extension of our international trade, but not depressingly as a deterrant to trade. Canadian trade will touch the outside world at more points than ever before. We are not of those who take a view that is clouded by any shadows the McKinley Act casts towards our trade. Those shadows fall short.

The grocery trade of Canada has our best wishes as well as our best hopes for a good year's business. The tree seems to be well laden, we hope a vigorous shaking may bring down a fair share of its fruits to every one of our readers.

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS AND THEIR INFLUENCES.

BY J. F. THACKRAY, SEC. T.R.G.A.

In considering the question of trade associations there is much to be said, but the very fact of their springing up on all sides shows that there is a necessity for them. Men engaged in a similar calling frequently meet upon the street and elsewhere and ask, how is business? From general talk they are apt to get down to special points, and soon find they are in the same boat. What affects A also affects B, and if they are not too short-sighted they look to combined effort as a remedy. The workingman professes to find much in his trade-unionism, the manufacturer in his combination, the wholesale trader in his board of trade, and so on all along the line. While one individual is powerless to help the many, on the other hand the many can help the one as well as they can help each other. Every trade should have an organization of its own, and if these organizations are founded upon the correct principle, their success should be assured. While a trade association should watch all points, and, I am now speaking of retail trade organizations, I feel satisfied that upon one point in particular they should be very cautious, and that is upon touching the question of prices. A natural result of forcing prices to an abnormal figure is that it opens up competition. Let me explain. Six men, or sixty if you like, so long as they are in one line of business, are trading in the same place. To still further simplify it, we will suppose they handle ten different articles. Those men meet and raise prices on these articles 50 per cent., which, with an ordinary profit, gives them an extortionate price for their goods. My argument is, that in a very short time these six or sixty men will find their trade invaded by a large number of outsiders, who are attracted by the large profits to be made, and that organization must be very powerful to be able to stand the pressure which will, I claim, naturally result. Therefore, I say that the final outcome of forcing prices opens up competition. What, then, should be the aims of a trade association? Mutual protection is a phrase which covers a lot of the ground. Are the members oppressed by corporations such as railway companies, in the matter of freight rates or unjust discriminations? Are their city or county councils doing the correct thing with transient traders, peddlers, bankrupt stock men, and the like? If not, trade associations will find a sphere for action in awakening these bodies to a proper sense of the tradesman's rights.

Let the retail merchants of any town or city meet quietly one evening, and own up how much they have paid to collecting agencies during the past few years, and then let them total up the results. I am satisfied the said results would open their eyes. Here is another sphere for the trade association, and one which can be worked to perfection. Credit is given too freely, debts are made, the collector or collecting agency is set to work, and nothing but trouble results. Now every association should have a collecting agency or at least an enquiry office of its own, supported by its funds and presided over by an efficient and painstaking officer. A delinquent list should be a main feature, and a system of notifying debtors should also be adopted. When a customer approaches the tradesman for a line of credit, the tradesman should be prepared with his answer. How is this to be done? In the first place, it very seldom happens that a customer asks for credit. The first time he enters your store his rule is almost invariably to commence by making cash purchases. A few judiciously worded questions will ascertain where he came from, and what his occupation is. Send that information to the office, and your answer should be forthcoming in a few hours. Now, no collecting agency can do this work in the same satisfactory manner that an association can, and with regard to the cost, no collecting agency can do it for the same money. Some tradesmen do not see this as clearly as they should, and that is the reason they do not associate. At the same time, wherever an association starts which has a delinquent list and enquiry office, the tradesman who does not join is placed at a serious disadvantage. His confreres are in possession of information which he cannot get, excepting he goes to the collecting agency, and then he is taxed from five to ten times as much. Need I say more?

An association of which the meetings are regularly attended is an advantage in more ways than one, and many times by means of co-operation buying have the members saved a dollar. Sociability among men of a trade must produce good results.

Standing foremost among associations in the grocery line, is the Toronto body. The work it has accomplished since it was organized in 1885 is no small item. The giving of Christmas and New Year's presents was about the first evil it attacked. That practice is now obsolete. Early closing was attempted more than once, and although success has not yet crowned the movement, the seeds then sown will finally bear fruit. Next summer the Association wants the Wednesday half holiday, and whatever may be the result, the step is in the right direction. The practice of so-called wholesale houses selling to consumers was taken in hand, and again the Association was successful, for the wholesale men were heartily pleased with the move, and were only too glad to co-operate in stopping a very pernicious practice. The spring and early summer of 1890 saw the Association pitted against the peddlers, and here again it can claim a victory.

These associations in the grocery trade are springing up all over the country, and the time is almost ripe for a central body for the province. The summer of 1889 brought together a large number of retailers in Hamilton from all parts of the country, and much credit is due to the gentlemen who projected that movement. The Ontario business men's association was to have resulted. As to its success I cannot speak, but I am inclined to think that had it been confined strictly to retail merchants it would have proved a greater boon. Such a central body is undoubtedly needed, and if local associations prove healthy, it will soon be in existence. Suppose each association in Ontario should send representatives to Toronto, for instance, and organize themselves into such a central body with president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer, together with an executive committee. Understand me, each association to send representatives, one for every twenty-five members, said representatives to consist of the president and secretary first, and the remainder elected. Where an association has under fifty members let the president alone be sent. When these meet let them elect officers as above, and before parting let them decide upon the place of next meeting, no city to have that meeting twice in succession, except in the case of a special meeting being called. The expenses of sustaining such a central body would be small, and certainly a mere trifle to the advantages which would accrue. The questions which would be discussed at such meetings would be those of general importance, for instance, inland revenue regulations could be watched more closely, and representations from such a body would have more weight than if they emanated from a local source. Again, local organizations would receive valuable pointers as to attacking the peddling nuisance, and who shall say where the usefulness of such a body would stop? I claim it would go on from one thing to another, until a much better state of affairs would exist than at present. Some months ago I was in a town east of Toronto, and in talking displayed the delinquent list of the Toronto Association. One of the gentlemen present saw a name there, the owner of which had victimized him long before. If an association had existed there at that time, that name would have reached Toronto in time to have spoilt its owner's little game with the Toronto retailer, and thus money would have been saved. Now, where shall we look for a commencement towards this central body? London has an association, Hamilton has one, Peterboro' and Kingston, as well as numerous other places, all in Ontario, have associations. It only wants properly starting. Small towns want organizing, but they are slow in getting to work.

There is one question which I have not touched upon, and that is, what should these organizations consist of? I would be inclined to say all trades, since in country places they should include all legitimate business men. The general storekeeper in a country town usually has a pretty good head. He knows nearly every one in his neighborhood. He would not be merely a grocer, nor would he be purely a dry goods merchant or boot and shoe man, but I would not like to see him shut out upon that account, since his advice would be valuable.

Mr. Editor, I have written a long article, and the worst of it is I have no excuse to offer for inflicting it upon you. I have simply given you a few ideas. I do not claim them as perfect. I know they can be improved upon, but if they should stir up some of the merchants to action I am well repaid. Of one thing I am certain, and that is that every trade should have an association for mutual protection, and none more so than the retail trade.

INSURANCE CONTRACTS AND ADJUSTMENTS.

Country merchants throughout Ontario have the question frequently put to them, "Are you insured?" Sometimes it appears at the head of an invoice, sometimes in an annual trade circular, or it may be asked in the private office of a wholesale house by the head of the firm, when he is interviewed by some one desiring to obtain a line of credit. This question, although in its way a very important one, might be advantageously changed into "How are you insured?" for we believe there is no part of the duties of business men performed in a more perfunctory manner than that of looking properly after their insurance, and there is nothing in connection with any business that requires more careful attention. There is no difficulty whatever about getting insured. Agents are to be found on the highways and byways of commerce, eager to accommodate any one desirous of taking a policy, but to get insured so that the money will be forthcoming after a fire is, to use a vulgarism, a horse of another color.

The rule, and not the exception, is for merchants to trust almost entirely to agents, not only as to what companies shall carry their risks, but as to the manner in which these risks shall be placed. Many of these agents are no doubt reliable men, who will see that their clients as well as the companies are properly protected, but unfortunately a large number are unreliable, some being ignorant of the business, and others careless about everything except the pocketing of their commission.

A very fair proportion of the insurance companies doing business in this country, are good solid companies, who deal handsomely with their customers, and will not shrink from the responsibility of settling a loss fairly and squarely, and oftentimes with considerable open-handed liberality, but we also have companies doing a larger business than people who have not given this matter their attention would suppose, which take risks below the current rates of the more respectable companies, and meet their losses in a mean, niggardly manner, frequently trying through some technicality to evade the responsibility altogether. In a former article on this subject we referred to the advisability of the assured filling up his own application for a policy, or getting some trustworthy person thoroughly conversant with the subject, to do it for him. We particularly desire to press this matter home to the country merchant, and advise him to exercise the utmost caution before signing his name to an application, so framed, that it requires to be carefully looked into and studied in all its bearings before being completed. It is important to see that the application should make the policy cover all the goods kept for sale, and to see that any reserved stock which may be stored in a back storehouse or adjoining building is covered as well as that in the main building, otherwise it is very difficult to adjust the loss satisfactorily. It is very unwise to put specified amounts on each particular line of goods, for although the amount of the loss on the whole stock may be very accurately ascertained from the invoices and books of the assured, it is almost impossible to find out the amount of the loss in each line of goods, and of course the same difficulty exists in the case of goods contained in a back storehouse or outbuilding. The statutory conditions, printed on every policy, should also be carefully studied. Few indeed are there among our merchants who have given these conditions their careful attention, and it is astonishing the number there are who have not even read them, yet these are the conditions which govern the settlement of a loss, conditions so stringent, and framed so evidently in the interests of insurance companies, that it is surprising our business men do not take some more active interest in the matter, and watch more closely the progress of these enactments in the legislature. The variations in these conditions (printed on the policies in red ink) are also worth looking into, for although they may be worthless in a court of law, they sometimes cause litigation.

It is only after a fire has occurred, that the assured will find out the full force of these conditions, when he will have to face the experts employed as appraisers and adjusters. The strong companies, doing a reputable business, usually employ men who are paid respectable yearly salaries to do this kind of work, and very little fault can be found with this class of experts in their settlement of losses, but there a number of companies, principally mutual, employing a class of men who act, as one of our judges very appropriately put it, "more with the view to catch the claimant than to get at the truth."

These experts, knowing that the average country merchant does not understand the statutory conditions, put their own interpretation on them, which is often at variance with the true meaning, and lay down the law as if they were the only individuals who had really mastered it, some of them even going so far as to hint that they had a hand in the framing of it. Their way of adjusting a loss is not always the most reliable, and to show that it is not we quote a case.

A fire occurred three or four years ago in one of our western towns. The companies interested sent up what they considered a competent expert, who adjusted the loss at a figure that the claimant agreed to accept. When the claim papers were sent in, the companies, before deciding to settle, laid them before another expert to look over. Expert No. 2 discovered that expert No. 1 had placed figures to represent the year of our Lord at the top of the column of figures representing the purchases, and had added the whole up together, so the companies refused to pay the amount claimed, it being as they said nearly $2,000 more than the actual loss. They did not take the trouble to point out the nature of the error, so the ease went to arbitration, when some extraordinary evidence was adduced. Expert No. 2, although he had detected the serious error of expert No. 1, appeared to be unable to detect errors unfavorable to the companies, but a statement was put in by a third man, an ordinary bookkeeper, supported by his evidence and vouchers, showing that there had been omitted from the column of purchases a number of invoices which counterbalanced the error of expert No. 1, so the arbitrators awarded the full amount claimed.

Very few country merchants are thorough accountants, and for the ordinary requirements of their business, such a qualification is perhaps unnecessary, but in the adjusting of losses they may have to deal with unfair experts, who have the faculty of muddling up figures in such a way as to make the claims as small as possible, so that they may make capital for themselves with the mean companies who employ them.

A first-class adjuster does not require to find a market for his services in this way, but there are some of smaller ability, who are not even fair accountants, that have an aptitude for harassing a claimant over the figures, until they get him to accept a settlement very favorable to the companies, and very much less than the unfortunate man honestly considers he has lost. He takes what he can get, rather than carry his case into court or to arbitration, which is worse than a court, the expense being usually very much greater and the decision not always final, for one of the glorious privileges our laws give insurance companies is the right to demand an arbitration before the claimant can bring his case into court.

Mutual life insurance has been pretty severely criticised of late in some of our daily and weekly papers, and we think there is room for criticism on mutual fire insurance. There is nothing wrong about either mutual life or mutual fire insurance, provided it is conducted on fair and equitable principles, but some mutual companies apparently conduct their business as if they were brought into existence more for the purpose of giving a fat living to needy applicants, than of doing justice to policy holders.

THE PERMISSIVE ACT.

The study of political economy has been productive of many reforms, but it is not the parent of all fiscal reform. Before the arrangement of the elements of this science into a system, before the writings of Adam Smith, Malthus and Ricard, there had been considerable enlightenment brought to the contemplation of inequalities and wrongs in the taxation of various classes of British subjects. The statesmen of that time, notably Walpole, had very liberal ideas upon the question of taxation. We wonder that some questions escaped their sagacity. There are subtle problems, of course, that require modern knowledge and modern means of inquiry to settle, and such questions are seasonably brought up at a time like the present. Questions of more obvious solution we look upon as more or less unfitting to the accomplishments in economic knowledge of this age. Why, for example, have we now to be dealing with a matter that opinion was sufficiently informed and matured to have settled in the middle of last century? What seems like an heirloom handed down by the feudal system, is the fact that capital is not yet emancipated from the bondage of municipal taxation. Such a reform as that might be looked for in the history of a ruder time than this end of the eighteenth century.

But the freeing of capital from tribute is yet to be completed, and we hail any means. The Permissive Act is the only means, and our hearty approval of it makes us alive to its incompleteness. The Act is not comprehensive enough, and the exemption it affords capital is too contingent. In its present shape it is applicable to only three cities in the province, as there are only three of our cities whose population makes them eligible to avail themselves of the Permissive Act. Capital engaged in business is therefore far from being all under even the imperfect exemption aimed at in this Act.

Another fault of the Permissive Act is the instability of the right which is sought through it to be done to business men. That right, if once granted by the finance committee of a city council, is secure only so long as that finance committee does not change its mind or its make up. Its make up is certain to be changed partially or wholly every year. A new council may have new ideas, and instead of re-enacting may repeal the by-law adopting the Permissive Act, and so throw taxation again on the capital of merchants. This would be likely. There are always demagogues aiming at election to the city councils. These, to get votes, would pledge themselves beforehand to relieve the people by reloading the merchants with the tax on capital. No doubt that would get votes, as there is nothing so odious to the people as taxes, and nothing so deserving of their support as promised efforts to lighten the burden of taxation. They do not stop to reason that their fellow-citizens, the merchants, have a right to be taxed on the same basis as the portion of the public not belonging to the merchant class. Therefore, the exemption which is provided for in the Permissive Act is too contingent, and as we pointed out before its action is not sufficiently far reaching.

SPECIAL TO OUR READERS.

As the design of THE CANADIAN GROCER is to benefit mutually all interested in the business, we would request all parties ordering goods or making purchases of any description from houses advertising with us to mention in their letter that such advertisement was noticed in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

HONEY PRICES GRADED.

The extent to which the price of this year's crop of honey will be affected by the yield, has already been indicated in these columns and in our market reports. The yield has been neither large nor small, but prices will be apt to keep, throughout the next twelve months, the firmness that is usually caused only by a shortage. What will operate to this effect in the absence of a notable shortage is the scarcity of fruit. Part of the unsatisfied fruit-consuming capacity of this country will be added to the demand of the honey market. Prices, however, will be affected by the policy of the producers to some extent. These have not combined, but there is an understanding now ruling among them, that has for its object a more marked discrimination in price between superior and inferior grades. The effect of this is not to increase the price of any grade, but to reduce the prices of the lower grades. Heretofore, the slight difference between any given grade and the one a single degree below it almost invariably threw the choice of the buyer on the better one. Where there was but one cent of price difference to correspond with one grade of quality difference there was usually less of the inferior sold than of the superior. So it happened not uncommonly that the stock left over in the late part of the year showed a greater proportion of medium and poor honey than of prime. The beemen have concluded tow iden the gap between grades, and throw the popularity on the side of the low grades, running these far enough down the price scale to make the low grades easily available. Consequently a grade that was last year only one cent lower than another given grade will this year in some cases be three cents lower than that given grade. The difficulty always had with the low grades will therefore now be ended, and what is left towards the close of the year's trade is unlikely to be hereafter the poorest of the gathering. A system of nice grading is now made possible by the methods of the honey producers. They now extract four or five times during the season of production, the interval between drafts being a time of transition from one bloom to another. Under the old mode all the honey was left in the hive until the bees ceased to work, and then the product taken off was a melange of all the flowers that bloom. This made the grading of prices difficult, and made it impossible to specialize flavors. Now, the beekeeper extracts at the close of the season of basswood bloom and gets an unmixed grade of inferior honey. Again, at the close of the thistle bloom he extracts and gets a pure grade of better honey. Also, at the close of the clover season, he separates the flow from what comes after, and thus has the best and the worst at their respective ends of the series, with the intermediate grades also separated. This makes the adjustment of prices a matter that can be secured with exactness.

PRUNES, DRIED AND EVAPORATED APPLES.

Those dried fruits which have come to be looked upon as necessaries—namely, prunes, dried apples and evaporated apples—will come high to the consumer for the next twelvemonth. They are all staples, in demand by both rich and poor at all seasons. It requires a large stock, therefore, to meet the wants of trade for a single year. What will give extra zest to the voracity of consumption for these dried fruits is the scarcity of fresh fruit, and the consequent high prices of the part of the crop that is canned. The stock will be short, the demand strong, and prices high.

The stock of prunes will be in about the middle of November. Cases will be 60 or 70 per cent. higher than they were last year, and casks will be fully 100 per cent. higher than they were last year. This enormous advance is solely a consequence of the short crop. Another effect of the shortage upon the prices, is the closing up of the difference between grades. There are four grades, heretofore the basis of four different prices, and the interval between the prices of two consecutive grades was often as much as four cents. Now the difference in price is very faint, the value of the low grades being pushed up so far. That is usually the effect of advance on all classes of stock that admits of grading. The name covers all, a certain point in price considered not too high to check consumption is taken by the highest grade, and the others run as closely as possible up to that, the name selling them. On Tuesday, cable advices from Trieste reported an advance of 2s. per hundred on casks, and 1s. a hundred on cases. Stock this year will come here chiefly in cases. Casks will constitute but a small part of the importation, on account of the fact that the price of them approaches so closely to that of cases, in which there is a better class of stock, possessing the added advantage of being in more portable form. Bags are not usually brought on this market to any important extent.

The short crop of apples in this country has made the raw material for dried and evaporated apples unusually dear. The stock of these is therefore small and held very firm. This stock cannot be increased by importation with any relief to prices, as the United States crop of apples was a short one, and the duty on evaporated and dried apples is too high for importation to be practicable with the cost of production what it is now in the States. Dried apples now run at 7½ to 9c., very high prices at this season, while evaporated are on stilts at 14 to 16c. The stock of either on this market is very slight so far.

LOSS ON PRUNES.

The shrinkage on prunes very commonly amounts to from 3 to 5 per cent. of their weight. Precautions have to be taken that this is not a cause of loss to buyers. On prunes there is no allowance for tare. Consequently buyers, both wholesale and retail, must aim to make their profit on the actual cost of what they get, not on the actual cost of what they should get. In this way alone can they save themselves from loss entailed by shrinkage. The original weight of a case is 25 kilos, which is about equivalent to 55 lbs. If a trader buys a case of prunes, it is as well for him to divide the cost of that case by the number which represents the weight in pounds of its contents. That will give the cost value to him per lb. of the prunes in that case, to which he can add the rate of profit he wants, and thus lose nothing, no matter what the shrinkage. It is in this way wholesalers have to defend themselves. A case costs as much to everybody, at all times, as if it held 55 lbs. Everybody should therefore sell it so as to realize upon it what would have been realized if there had been no shrinkage. Wholesalers do, and retailers must likewise do so. The loss is to be made up in the price. We have a report of one instance of shrinkage to the extent of 10 per cent. Here, of course, it would be well-nigh impossible for all the loss to be recovered by increasing the price, as that would require an increment of one-ninth of the value of the remainder, or 11 1-9 per cent., to make up for the shrinkage alone. An addition of the regular rate of profit after that, would put the price beyond that current in the place where the dealer traded, and would stop sales. In buying, therefore, the dealer should be on the look-out to get cases weighing as nearly as possible the full 55 lbs.

The shrinkage will be according to the degree of moisture of the fruit when it is packed, and according to the sort of package. Bags offer least protection from evaporation, and cases most. In bags and also in casks there is considerable diminution of weight owing to shrinkage. The case prunes are generally better prepared for packing and are also put up more closely than in the other forms of package.

A POINTER TO WHOLESALE FIRMS.

To the Editor Canadian Grocer.

Sir,—Seeing an article in The Canadian Grocer about politeness, allow me to give my experience in Toronto last July. I buy from the largest firms in the city. Going to my dry goods house, I walked around for about five minutes, plenty of clerks, but no one to ask me if I wanted anything. Finally I asked for one of the partners, Mr. C., received a short answer and hunted him up myself. Was very near walking out to try some other place. Went to the grocery house, walked into the sample room, was received very warmly by one of the firm, Mr. E., had every attention paid, was taken into the private office of the other partner, kindly received, and went away well pleased. Walked into the boot and shoe house, strolled around the sample room, no one there, walked out in about ten minutes and the firm lost a large fall order. Had the same experience with a biscuit and candy house. To my mind, when a country merchant walks into a wholesale house where he buys from on his yearly visit to the city, he likes to see one of the firm for a five minutes chat and to have a little attention shown him. What do you think about it?

Yours, etc.,
Country Merchant.

"Country merchant's" experience is that of many others. Wholesale grocers look well after customers who honor them with a call but other wholesale trades and many manufacturers treat callers with scant courtsey. The grocers are so anxious to take care of their out of town friends that when there is a celebration of any kind in their city they call in their travellers during that period. Even the grocers, not to say the dry goods, boot and shoe, biscuit and confectionery houses, in Ontario, Manitoba and out to the coast can learn a great deal in the matter of handling callers from business houses in Quebec and the maratime provinces. It is a pleasure to call upon them. Even if you are not a buyer you are treated with the utmost politeness. As we have before pointed out—and our suggestion has been followed—in busy times one of the partners should be stationed near the entrance to the warehouse, whose duty it shall be to receive all callers and make their acquaintance if he does not already know them and introduce them to the proper salesman. The moment a customer enters a wholesale house he should be attended to. We have no sympathy for those houses who allow many to stand for five or ten minutes while they are finishing a letter, putting away goods or even talking to another customer. Sometimes, though not often, a retailer will be received courteously the moment he enters the warehouse, but neglects to state who he is. He is then at a disadvantage. If you do not know the members of the firm ask for them and introduce yourself. They will be glad to make your acquaintance. If they are not, then they do not deserve your custom. At the same time do not impose on them by chatting too long. Get to business as soon as possible. [Ed. Grocer.

A SUCCESSFUL COMPANY.

A reporter of the Advertiser, taking in the late Industrial Fair, met a leading fire insurance man, and in conversation learned from him that the fire insurance business in Canada this year was likely to be more profitable than for many years.

Turning around he saw Mr. McCabe, managing director of the North American Life Company of Toronto, and the reporter, anxious for news, thought it a good opportunity to learn how the life business was progressing. Mr. McCabe was ready to give any information desired. He said: "So far as our company is concerned, I certainly think it will be the best year we have ever had; at least, that has been our experience up to date. The outlook for business is encouraging, crops have been fairly good and prices are satisfactory; this means a help to our agents, and the result, more business for the company, besides, policy holders will be better able to contribute and increase their insurance. I see no reason why all our properly managed home companies should not meet with a fair measure of success this year." The reporter suggested that several companies had a great variety of plans now, and inquired whether they excelled the old plans. "Undoubtedly," said Manager McCabe, "formerly a man had to pay till death, whereas now he has the option of terminating his contract at the end of fifteen or twenty years, and, if the policy be on the investment plan, he will not only have his life insured for the term, but in addition get a good return for his money. Talking of the old plan reminds me that two or three years ago one of our vice presidents, a man of successful and financial experience, mentioned at one of our agents' conventions that he had been insured for many years in an old Scotch company, and had paid in premiums considerably more than the face of the policy. He regretted very much that when a young man no opportunity was offered him to secure an investment policy such as our company is now offering the public.

"The North American has gone further than this, however, and is issuing policies upon which, after being ten years in force, the company will lend the insured the balance of the premiums to make his payments, and if the insured should die before the end of the investment period the full amount of the policy becomes payable without deduction of the loan. Yes, we think it is a splendid plan, as it offers the insured so many advantages.

"Now, for one getting up in years or a young man wishing to save some money, we have a 7 per cent. guaranteed income bond."

"What form is that?"

"Why, at the end of fifteen or twenty years the insured can draw out his cash surplus, have a paid-up policy for the full amount of his policy, and in addition draw an annual cash income of 7 per cent. on the face of the policy as long as he lives."

Further conversation with Mr. McCabe was abruptly terminated by the pressure of the crowd carrying the reporter to another part of the building.—London Advertiser.

THE BUTTER QUESTION SOLVING ITSELF.

The role of Jeremiah is one for which we are unsuited, both by natural disposition and acquired conviction. The most hopeful view is to us the best, as well as the most agreeable. If one considers it wrong to make the wish father to the thought, then it is usually better to forego the expression of the thought, and content oneself with uttering wishes as wishes simply. This habit of mind is deserving of culture, if for no other application than to the study of the situation in which we find, at any given time, this or that one of our national products. One of these, not so prolific of wealth as it ought to be, our butter, has not inspired the brightest visions, in the minds of most observers, of the future which its present tendencies are likely to shape for it. We have found it difficult to say anything to the credit of our domestic producers, but we believe that the fine national resource they are so busy wasting will not always be unsatisfactory as a commodity of trade. We hope that, before long, Canada will get all there is to be got out of her national facilities by the production of first-class butter. The realization of that hope would mean the addition of several millions of dollars to the present annual value of Canadian exports.

The position of this paper, overlooking as it does the wide field of that retail trade through which nearly all the home-made butter of this country is ushered upon the market, is an important fulcrum, we consider, to base an effort upon to lift the home dairy to a higher plane. We have acted upon our belief, and have made steady use in our editorial columns of the advantage our circulation gives us to serve the cause of better butter. The lever has been worked also by able contributors to our columns. Our dairy market reports have been constantly aimed at this end. For, we remembered we were addressing a body of men who felt the loss which trade in bad butter always occasions. We suggested to the Minister of Agriculture for this province the advisability of not confining attempts at dairy reform to the producers alone, but to enlist the country trader in the movement, as we believed the general retail trade of the country was the point upon which efforts at reform would be best concentrated. Our activity in the behalf of improved butter-making shows that we took a sanguine view of the possibilities of that industry.

This year the proportion of bad butter is not lower than it was last year, so that the art of home butter-making appears not to be improving. But there is encouraging evidence in another fact, which is, that the quantity of home-made butter of all kinds is less this year than it was last year. In fact, if we take the last four or five years successively, we will find the quantities of domestic dairy butter assigned to each to follow in a descending series. The home dairy is slowly making way before the movement of something more modern. But is this the creamery? In part it is, but to a much greater extent it is the cheese factory. While the volume of domestic dairy make has very considerably declined, that of the creamery make has not by any means so appreciably advanced. But our production of cheese has pushed ahead very fast, and its gain is at the expense of the farm dairy.

So, on the whole, we make less butter than we did, though more of it is creamery make than ever was before, but we make much more cheese than we did. The reason is that we have a market for cheese, and have no waste stock. We forfeited our right to an English butter market by the badness of our dairy make, and creamery men have to make head against the prejudice that English buyers and consumers took to Canadian stock. That is the reason why the retreat of the dairy production to-day is more to the advantage of the cheese factory than to the creamery. Butter is wanted in England as much as is cheese, and when the creamery men get a good chance to assure the English buyer that the manufacture is in good hands, then we may look for the domestic industry to dwindle rapidly away. This is a consummation devoutly to be wished by the country retailer.

So reform is at work, if not in better home production, at least in the increasing withdrawals of home makers. It looks as if the manufacture of our milk would soon be between the creamery and cheese factory, both of which may be expected to flourish. The best self-defence Canadians can take against the McKinley Bill is to help such industries as the creamery to thrive. Professor Robertson's idea that cheese can be best produced and marketed abroad in summer, and butter in winter seems to be a good one To have it acted upon and prevent rivalry between cheese factory and creamery, would necessitate the changing of the calving season from April to October. This the farmer can do, and immensely increase the production of milk.

THE RIGHT PAPER IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

Messrs. W. A. McClean & Co., importers and dealers in groceries, provisions, etc., Owen Sound, write as follows:—Just one word—one word we think we should be allowed to speak. We have taken your CANADIAN GROCER for some time, and we must say it is the right paper in the right place. We find it useful as regards exposing fraud, certain as regards correcting errors, and painstaking in market reports and general information. Hope it may always live and prosper.

MANUAL VS. MACHINE LETTERS.

BOLTON, Sept. 26th, 1890.

J. B. McLEAN & Co., Publishers,
CANADIAN GROCER, Toronto.

GENTS,—Enclose find two dollars to pay six months' arrears and six months in advance to the CANADIAN GROCER. Allowed your agent to take my subscription for three months on trial, but I have been so well pleased with your paper that I gladly renew again. Wishing your every success, I remain,

Yours truly,
D. W. HUGHES.

The above is a reprint of a letter received at this office. The matter in it is gratifying to our self-esteem, and we thank Mr. Hughes for the compliment. But we wish to draw attention to the fact that it is not pen-written. It is type-written, and is of important interest on that account. Being the first type-written letter we ever received of a retailer, we were curious to know the result of Mr. Hughes' experience with his machine, that if it were satisfactory we might benefit readers of ours by putting it before them. We inquired of Mr. Hughes and got the following reply, also type-written:

BOLTON, Oct. 7th, 1890.

J. B. McLEAN, M'g'r CANADIAN GROCER,
Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—Your favour of October 6th enquiring as to use of type-writer received. In reply would say, the one I am using is a single case "World," and so far am well pleased with it. Can make nearly the same speed as ordinary writing with a few days' practice, and the work looks so much better than with the pen. If purchasing think I would get a double case "World" or "Victor," as they answer all purposes for ordinary correspondence as well as the larger machines, are easily learned, and cheap enough to be in general use. I remain,

Yours truly,
D. W. HUGHES,

We have no doubt this testimony to the ease with which the art of using the instrument can be learned will be persuasive with many dealers who have a large correspondence, to get machines in their offices. There are several arguments in favor of the type-writer. First, there is more to do than when the pen sufficed; second, letters are now strictly limited to the number of words actually necessary, so that there is no time or care spent in attention to elaboration; third, wholesalers and others in the thick of business want letters to disclose their gist at a glance; and for this legibility and brevity are needed. Therefore, the type-writing machine is more and more displacing the pen for business correspondence. The art of using it is more easily acquired than is a good style of handwriting. Take a middle-aged man or woman who writes very badly. It is almost impossible to educate the hand of that man or woman to write firmly and legibly, but it is a comparatively easy matter to make of him or her a good typewriter. It is more desirable to do so, if business correspondence is the end aimed at. Consequently, we advise all general merchants who write badly to get a typewriting machine. Mr. Hughes' example is a good one.

"THE PATRONS OF INDUSTRY."

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER,

DEAR SIR,—Allow me to suggest the advisability of your cautioning the merchants of western Ontario, against encouraging a new organization known as "The Patrons of Industry." The scheme is of Yankee origin, and is only in its infancy in Ontario, having just been introduced from Michigan by a person, as I am informed, named Smith. "The Patrons of Industry," amongst other things, aim at getting one or more storekeepers in each town to enter into a contract to supply them with goods at 10 per cent., or failing that, at 12½ per cent., advance on the invoice price. The merchant so contracting is bound by the terms of the contract to show his invoices whenever demanded; and is also firmly bound not to sell goods at as low rates to any other persons as to "The Patrons of Industry." In making these statements I am speaking from actual knowledge, having been waited on by a deputation of the 'Patrons of Industry,' who handed me a printed copy of the contract required to be entered into. I could do nothing but refuse to entertain any such preposterous ideas. Truth, Mr. Editor, compels me to say, to the disgrace of the Business Men's Association of our town, that the president and vice-president of the said Association, men, who by the vote of their fellow merchants were placed on the watch towers of the mercantile citadel, were the only persons who undertook to deal on the foregoing terms with "The Patrons of Industry." What a shame that merchants can so far forget where their true interest lies! Were merchants only faithful to themselves, how easily such selfish and absurd associations as "The Patrons of Industry" could be consigned to oblivion. Were they to present a solid front against the aggression of such selfish people they would at least be allowed to continue to make a livelihood. The vast majority of them, as statistics clearly show, fail to do much more.

I think, Mr. Editor, it goes without saying, no honest merchant can undertake to do business with these people, except at a heavy loss. In my humble opinion the wholesale trade should array themselves on the side of the retail merchants, and instruct their travellers not to call on merchants who supply the "Patrons of Industry." This would probably be the most effectual mode of squelching the business.

With apologies for trespassing on your valuable space, I am, etc., etc.,

MERCHANT.

The association of consumers to which "Merchant" draws our attention is one of the excrescences that are apt to show themselves upon the body commercial at a time when the health of trade is run down. They are the outward sign of an abnormal process on the part of some portion of the economy, to do more than there is functional stimulus to do. Trade has to be pretty well debilitated for such eruptions to become seriously galling to it, and in that condition it appears to be wherever such leagues as the Patrons of Industry flourish. In the general dulness of the past year is to be found the trade climate most favorable to the growth of the alien principle, which Mr. Smith inoculated into the tissue of Canadian trade. The sickly symptoms will slough off we hope in the more bracing air of the better times that are now in prospect.

When trade can keep its spirits up there will be no collapsing under the threat of a few consumers. If there were stauncher and more hopeful men always in trade, that prostration on which such associations feed, would never be reached. It is in the weakness of will shown that dealers prove themselves recreant to the cause of trade, cowering as they do before the terms dictated by organized haggling. There is temptation as well as unbusinesslike fear at the bottom of the capitulation. The temptation is to get ahead of one's rivals. The conservative influence of the general good of trade cannot restrain men who are either afraid of their consumers or envious of their rivals. The sounding of the health of trade will always reveal points of weakness, so long as such men are in trade.

Can the Patrons of Industry be depended on? Is a dealer who has once got into the meshes of their web sure that they will support him in the pittance of profit he has left himself the chance of getting? Let some dealer in bankrupt stock come along and open out a lot of goods bought at 40 or 50 cents on the dollar. He can afford to give better bargains than those contracted for by the Patrons, and they may be depended on to get those bargains. The dealer who has surrendered his independence to them may close up shop until all the bankrupt stock is run off.

An evil that will be the sure outgrowth of the trade's alliance with the Patrons, will be price cutting, either with goods bought in the bankrupt sales or goods bought normally. Traders who have withstood the temptation and are determined to overcome the coercion of the Patrons, will cut prices if they never cut prices before. They will break up the Patrons by their bargains, but trade will have to suffer. That is all that can be done. There must be no compromise. In business competition, as in war, there can properly be none, bnt in any other emergency of business competition, price-cutting need not be the manner of the warfare. Compromise is what is the ruin of trade. There are two parties, buyers and sellers, and those tradesmen who aim to temper their selling policy with considerations that have to be transplanted from the hostility and jealousy of buyers, will be entitled to little sympathy if they fall short of success. To run with the hare and hunt with the hounds is not the course that the manlier of our business men pursue. They work for trade, and not also for the destruction of trade.

Master the whole business and the way to fortune has been mapped out.

THE DRY GOODS TRADE.

The dry goods trade has passed through a crisis during the last twelve months, such as has been unknown for years, owing to the poor harvest of 1889, and a mild winter and cool spring, and it is only owing to the caution pursued by both importer and retailer that a catastrophe has been averted. The imports for fall have been reduced about 40 per cent, and with such prudence manifested by all there will be no trouble in adjusting the stocks to the requirements of the country. Very little money has yet come into actual circulation from the result of the present bountiful harvest in Ontario, and the storekeepers have not yet felt its full benefit, either in the matter of collections or sales, and this, coupled with the unsettled feeling amongst them because of the uncertain operation of the McKinley Tariff Bill and the mild and wet Fall, has prevented the retail stocks being really well broken into yet.

Our friends, Messrs. Knox, Morgan & Co. of Hamilton, have kept their stock well assorted right through the season and are able to fill up the assorting orders with ease, owing to their close proximity to the point of production of most of Ontario's textile fabrics. Their stock is in that clean condition which enable them to offer new, attractive and easy-selling goods, that will bear good profits to the retailers and save their customers wading through a large lot of old samples. Mr. Morgan has visited the European markets this fall, and there will be placed in stock this month a large supply of Baldwins' fingering yarn, also an assortment of rough brown linens, tablings, silk handkerchiefs, black and colored velvets, with other scarce goods which will be in active demand before Christmas. Not only can our friends pick up all the sorting they require there, but we are informed that their print and embridery and flouncing samples are already to hand, as well as all Canadian woollens and cottons for the spring of 1891, and early lookers would do well to compare their range of staples and values before placing their spring orders. Their travellers are continually covering western Ontario, and as the house is known to be a reliable and liberal one and fully abreast of the times in their line of business, we commend their offerings to the favorable notice of our retail friends.

To Grocers!

There are three articles which the consuming public have decided are the best of their kind in the market, and it will pay every grocer to keep them in stock. They are

EXPANSION OF THE WHOLESALE GROCERY TRADE.

A Toronto wholesale grocery house received an order through one of its travellers the other day for a coffin. It was not stated whether the enterprising country merchant wanted it for immediate use or to keep in stock. We have great hopes for the future of that traveller, as well as his pushing customer. We see in them millionaires of the future.

OUR CUSTOMS TARIFF.

In another column will be found a compilation, that we have been at pains to make complete, of the duties that are levied on the various articles of merchandise kept by the grocer. The preparation of this list has taught us something of the inconvenience it must be to traders to wade through the chaotic assemblage of items that is issued by authority. The selecting of the names of articles kept by grocers, the alphabetic arrangement of them, and the revision of the original list by the introduction of changes made since the debate, will we hope make this list a handy reference to our subscribers.

GIVE THEM A WIDE BERTH.

Bowmanville business men are advised to give perpipatetic advertising fakirs a wide berth.—The Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville.

Business men in the various towns throughout the country are constantly troubled with these fakirs. There are local fakes also who publish calendars, time tables, etc., who sell space in hotel registers around the clock, etc. The best paying advertisement for a retailer is the one he puts in his local paper. Set your back against all other schemes. Let the matter in your advertisement be such as will attract attention. Tell the truth in it. Do not make extravagant statements. Briefly study advertising as carefully as you do any of the details of your business. If you do not make your advertisement in your local paper pay the fault is yours, because others have.

FISH AND LOBSTER CANS.

The manufacture of fruit, paint, lard, and baking powder cans by automatic machinery is one of Hamilton's leading industries, the Norton Manufacturing Co. having a capacity of 50,000 cans per day.

This company started some three years ago with a capital stock of some $50,000, and turning out 25,000 cans daily. The demand for the cans became so great, that at the end of the first year their out put was increased to 50,000 per day.

The tin goes in in large sheets and comes out a nicely finished can, tested ready for use. The first operation, after the tin is cut into pieces the proper size for the bodies of the cans, is through the Body Forming Machine. This machine forms the tin into a cylinder, makes a "lock seam" and pounds the seam down. The cylinder is then fed into a machine which solders the side seam, and wipes off all surplus solder both from the outside and inside of the can. From the side soldering machine it passes automatically into the Ending Machine which puts on the ends as fast as two boys can feed them into hoppers. From the Ending Machine the can passes into the End Soldering Machine, which solders the bottom on first, reverses the can and solders the top, then conducts it over a cooling conveyor to the Testing Machine, from the Tester it is conveyed to the Dryer, and along the Dryer to about the place from which it started, when it is ready to ship. From the time the can is placed in the side seam soldering machine until it is completed it is not touched except in case of accident, which very seldom happens.

The demand for fish and lobster cans has so increased that the manufacturers of handmade cans have been unable to meet all orders. The Norton Manufacturing Co. are about to overcome this difficulty by putting in machinery specially adapted for the manufacture of this line, so that packers can have all the cans they require of better quality and cheaper.

THE SUGAR TRADE.

The sugar market has for some time past been in a state of stagnation, while the whole trade is hanging on the lips of the beet crop prophets, till they condescend to make up their minds as to the probable yield of the coming season of 1890-91. As these gentlemens' first estimates last year turned out to be some half a million to three-quarters of a million tons, or, say, 20 to 25 per cent. under the mark, and as, on the other hand, they over-estimated the crop of 1888-89, it seems to us that very far too much importance is attached to these guesses, even if they are made with perfect disinterestedness, and in the interest neither of buyers nor of sellers. At two tons of sugar to the acre, the area of land on the Continent covered by the beet crop of 1889-90, which is just concluded, was something like 1,800,000 acres. If, as appears pretty certain, some 8 to 10 per cent. more land was put under beet in the spring of 1890, the acreage for 1890-91 is probably about 2,000,000 acres, spread over the whole of central and northern Europe. How can a weekly or monthly analysis of a few dozen roots in Germany and France afford a sufficient index to the growth over so vast and scattered an area, especially as the weather from day to day, for some weeks to come, will alter the saccharine strength of the roots? The so-called tipsters or prophets of the turf are not noted for their accuracy, but they are no doubt very useful to the betting fraternity; nor are the sugar prophets' tips worthy of much more attention from the genuine trade, however useful they may be to terminal speculators. It is true that the statisticians, who foretell the sugar crop for us, are believed to act in good faith, so that it is only their imperfect data which can at present be criticised. But with the vast financial gain to be obtained from misleading estimates, how long would this continue? The object of these remarks is to point out the dangerous dislocation of the trade at the present moment, due to buyers reducing their stocks to the last bag, while the crop estimates are being waited for. The general supplies of sugar at the present moment are, as will be seen below, undoubtedly small. This is, no doubt, in a great degree due to the fact that "invisible" stocks, which had been depleted to an extraordinary degree during the great speculative rise in 1889, have now to some extent been replenished. A couple of hundred thousand tons would readily be absorbed in this way, and the European and North American consumption increases on an average some 150,000 tons a year. The fact remains that, notwithstanding an increased production of 840,000 tons of beet sugar in 1889-90 as compared with the previous season, the "visible" stocks are now considerably below the exceedingly low point of 1889 at this time, and very far under what they were in previous ones. Prices are, nevertheless, very moderate. Yet for the past week or so the demand has been at a standstill and refinery after refinery has had to stop work because the price offered for manufactured goods bears no adequate relation to the cost of raw, while other holders also, who are not refiners, have been driven to sell at a considerable sacrifice. In England, at any rate, the grocers are exceedingly bare of sugar, and should an unfavorable crop estimate, in the next week or so, give a good opening to speculators, the trade, for the time, may be defenceless, and might see sugar running up without any reason whateqer. In any case, no considerable supplies of new sugar can be had for another month, and there appears no present object whatever for a further curtailment of stocks. Even if a bumper yield were obtained, the absolute necessity for buying, which must soon come upon the trade, through their holding such light stocks, would only defer the good day of lower prices, and enable overladen speculators to unload their dear purchases on to the grocers. After objecting to crop prophecies ourselves, it would not do to predict that the estimates of the coming crop may be anywhere between 3,500,000 and 4,000,000 tons. If, nevertheless, the first figure were named, there would be no real reason for a rise in sugar at the present time, while a crop of 4,000,000 tons reaped between now and ten months hence would only bring stocks to a fair level, after allowing for the usual rise in the consumption. In short, there is no reason whatever for the existing absence of demand.—Manchester Grocers' Review.

Nos. 2 and 4 DeBresoles Street,

MONTREAL, P. Q.

Three houses are going up at Calumet. One is to be a large wholesale store.—The Advertiser L'Original.

Messrs. Godfrey Bros., Yarmouth, N. S., do a large trade in groceries and fruit, and the large premises they occupy are none too large to accommodate their trade.

The management of the co-operative F. & C. Co., Yarmouth, N. S., has changed hands, and Mr. S. P. Goudey has taken charge and under his direction business is being successfully carried on.

Senator Boyd, of St. John, has just purchased a couple of barrels of Nova Scotia gravensteins, which he is forwarding to the Marquis of Lorne and Duke of Argyle as samples of Canadian fruit.

An Annapolis correspondent writes that whatever effect the McKinley bill may have on other things, it has not affected the price of apples one cent a barrel. Speculators are just as hungry for apples as ever.

Grocers frequently want tin cans and tin samples boxes for various purposes, either plain or decorated. The Macdonald Mfg. Co., King street east, Toronto, make a specialty of these goods. Write, and call for prices.

Chas. A. McGuire has purchased the general store of Mr. R. H. Bryant at Salmon Arm, B. C. and will carry on the business in future. He has also taken up a tract of land there and will devote his spare time to managing a ranch.

Mr. J. H. Wethey, condensed mince meat manufacturer, St. Catharines, has been buying all the dried apples he could lay his hands on for some months, and now holds the largest stock in Canada. He will require them nearly all for his factory.

There is a great boom in shipments of potatoes from Halifax to the West Indies. Ten thousand barrels have been sent from King's county to Havana within a few days, of which 5,000 barrels were carried by the steamer Odin. They are shipped at a good figure.

A deputation waited upon Sir John Thompson last week and urged that in purchasing tobacco for the Indians the Government should purchase only tobacco manufactured from Canadian leaf, in order to encourage the growing of tobacco in Lower Canada.

Messrs. Parker & Ekins, fish packers, Yarmouth, N. S., are now behind their orders but expect to be able to clear their order book by Nov. 1. They pack a very fine boneless Codfish and smoked haddy, a good many car loads of which find a market in Ontario.

Mr. L. B. Wyman, Yarmouth, N. S., is located very centrally, and has a fine plate glass store which brings to view from the street one of the finest stocks of groceries and fruit in the city. Mr. Wyman says he is no relation of the great free trade agitator, but likes his principles on that score.

A beet root sugar factory at Nassandre, France, has begun the manufacture of white granulated sugar direct from the beet root, ready for consumption. This is a long step forward in sugar production. The refined sugar will find a market in England. It cannot come to the United States.

Turner, Rose & Co., call special attention to their "Clover Leaf Salmon" flat tins. Mr. Rose says he would rather pay 10c per tin extra for this than for the ordinary brands. He should be a good judge, and we have no doubt but that they as agents for this brand will have a good patronage.

Chaput, Fils & Cie., have had many flattering letters lately complimenting them on the fine fruit they are handling. Among the most expressive was one from a well-known firm, referring to their Valencias. They say "they have never seen better." This is most encouraging to this enterprising firm.

Mr. W. C. Purney, Yarmouth, N. S., is still shipping eggs to Boston. He has no confidence in the British market as yet. The Ontario and Quebec markets are 4 to 5c. under Boston prices, the Boston freights are about 2c. and he gets 22c. per dozen. This nets a fair price to the farmer, but just 5c. less than heretofore. Mr. Purney is a pretty heavy dealer in eggs.

During the present season 480,000,000 of young lobsters have been hatched and placed in Fortune, Placentic, Conception, Trinity, Bonavista and Green Bay, Nfld. Many fishermen report having seen enormous numbers of Tom cods of smaller size, which are also the product of the Government hatchery, the young fry planted early in the summer having reached that stage of growth.

The Department of Fisheries has received the fishery bulletin for August 3, which reported cod plenty at Prince Edward Island, but no mackerel. Along the southeast coast of Cape Breton and Nova Scotia fish of all kinds were exceptionally scare. On the west coast of Nova Scotia herring are plentiful; cod and mackerel fair; while from the Grand Banks the reports are favorable.—Weekly Gazette, Montreal.

Mr. Ernest Stanley Smith, for several years with Warren Bros. & Boomer, the well-known wholesale grocers of this city is now located in New York. Mr. Smith is a wide awake young Canadian. Three years ago he was a stranger in the ways of the metropolis and he is now a successful contracting agent for the Clyde SS. Company and the Great Southern Freight Line, with offices at 347 Broadway. His many friends will be pleased to hear of his prosperity.

The seaport of St. John, N.B., has began to figure very extensively in the importations of teas, and the figures will reach a total of one million pounds for 1890. Of this amount Mr. John Mackay, of that city, received about 300,000 pounds up to September 1st. This is highly complimentary to St. John merchants, and statistics in other lines show St. John to be steadily increasing in its volume of business as a distributing point for imported goods.

William, Logan, soap manufacturer, St. John, N.B., sends us one of the beautiful hangers that he has introduced this year to throw the softening and refining influence of art into the prosiac relations between buyer and seller. The picture shows a wholesome neatly dressed maid in the act of carrying a 5 o'clock tea service for two. That it is five o'clock is mutely but convincingly shown by the watch hanging at the fair attendant's girdle.

We have pleasure in drawing attention to the advertisement of Mr. Ebenezer Thompson, 48, 50 and 52 Thomas street, Liverpool, who is one of the largest dried fruits merchants in Liverpool, and may be considered the pioneer in the canned goods business. Mr. Thompson had the sale of the first two hundred cases lobsters consigned by Messrs. Underwood & Co., of Boston, to Messrs. Peniston in 1860, and has steadily increased his business until his large warehouses which he built in 1878 are become much too small for his business. The new American tariff will no doubt divert considerable consignments to Great Britain, and Mr. Thompson is prepared to handle shipments of apples, provisions and canned goods of all kinds to best advantage.

An amusing competition in stove polishing took place in a hardware store in Ottawa the other day. A representative of R. Ralston & Co., Hamilton, manufacturers of the Matchless Stove Polish, was discoursing on the merits of the "Matchless." When the proprietor stopped him, saying that he had a polish that could blacken both eyes of the "Matchless," at the same time challenging him to a competition. The proprietor, who, by the way, is near-sighted, produced his famous blacking, and soon had a stove shining like the morning sun, and with a triumphant look pointed to his handiwork. But his glory was short lived, when he discovered that it was the "Matchless" he had used. After giving Ralston & Co. an order, both "went out to see a man."

We would call the attention of the trade to the removal of the Globe Tobacco Co. This well and favorably known company have removed their plant to London and have formed a new company under new management, securing larger and better premises where the facilities for turning out their goods will be much increased. The best talent and manipulators of tobaccos have been secured from the United States, and the company are determined to please the public and make a class of goods second to none. They will continue to manufacture all of their well-known brands as well as various new ones, and the new management intend to place on the market from time to time new and attractive goods (in a word to keep up with the times.) An experienced traveller will be placed on the road in a few days and price lists will be issued shortly. We refer you to their advertisement in this issue.

The fruit trade of Canada both import and export during the past ten years has increased most wonderfully. Among our largest dealers are, McBride, Harris & Co., McGill st., Montreal. They are large receivers of California fruits, which now are largely imported. The evaporated fruits are gaining a wide and well earned patronage from the public, and grocers handling them find very good profits. This firm also have in stock, nuts, bananas, oranges, lemons, canned goods, etc., and if you have a consignment to offer, you will do well in giving them a trial. Mediterranean fruits they make a specialty of with great success, and we have no hesitancy in recommending them to our subscribers.

The Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association hold a meeting in Montreal on the 8th of next month to elect new officers.

TORONTO.

Please examine our lines of fancy cups and saucers, vases, china cabarets, etc., specially selected for the Xmas trade. With our ADAR and WENEN glassware—an entirely new line to the Canadian market—we challenge competition. Our varied assortment of Opal Baskets is meeting with large demands. As the most attractive lines are continually running low, the Trade would do well to place their orders at once, and thus take advantage of our leading lines.

A NATIONAL TRADE ASSOCIATION.

It is proposed by Mr. J. N. Blake, Toronto, to establish what has been termed a Canadian National Association for the development of trade. The object of the association will be to invite correspondence from various parts of the world, to disseminate information abroad with reference to the general products of the country and to gather information as to the manufactures and products and minerals which can be disposed of in foreign markets. It is proposed to establish the association on a purely patriotic basis, charging a membership fee of $1. It is proposed to incorporate and issue debentures to the extent of $1,000,000, and ask the Government of Canada to guarantee the interest of these debentures at 3 per cent. per annum. It is also proposed to have three trustees, who will control the finances of the institution, and who will select proper men to visit the various countries which would probably trade with Canada. These agents are to be paid their expenses and small salaries, but they will receive commissions on all goods they sell in foreign lands. It is the intention of the promoters that the association shall be non-political, and to be supported by people who are loyal to Canada and the mother country.

THE ADVANCE IN STARCH.

In our Prices Current will be found registered the recent advance in the price of starch. This advance will not be entirely unexpected to our readers. In our report of a meeting of the Toronto Wholesale Grocers' Guild, held on the 18th of September, the adoption by that body of the manufacturers' price list was shown to be merely awaiting the signatures of individual members. The corporate and individual assent of the members of the Guild is now subscribed to these prices, and they are established.

CARD OF THANKS.

I beg to advise my numerous friends and the trade generally that I have retired from the firm of Bryant, Gibson & Co. My late partner, Mr. Bryant, will carry on the old business. In connection with this I beg also to announce that I have gone into the manufacture of COCOAS AND CHOCOLATES in partnership with my brother, Mr. S. F. Gibson, who is an experienced practical manufacturer of these lines of goods. Having ample capital and the best facilities for carrying on our new business, it will be our special aim to turn out a line of Cocoa and Chocolate preparations equal in quality and style to any on the market. To those who have honored me with their confidence and patronage in the past, I herewith tender my sincere thanks, and beg to respectfully solicit a continuance of their favors for the firm of GIBSON & GIBSON.

In all commands the Trade's obedient servant,

CREDIT AS A FACTOR IN MAKING PRICES.

Credit as a factor in making prices was the subject of a paper recently read by Mr. Edward Atkinson before the American Bankers' Association at Saratoga. In regard to the relations of credit to gold the speaker said:

"There is but one kind of money which is in absolute, undisputed, good credit throughout the world, and that is money made of gold, coined into pieces of established weight and fineness. That such is the only money which is in universal credit throughout the world is proved and established by the fact that all the international commerce of the world in respect to which there are no acts of legal tender, and all the mutual obligations which are entered into by merchants residing in different parts of the world, are conducted in terms or promises of payment in money made of gold; that is to say, so long as London is the clearing house for the settlement of the balances of international commerce in pounds sterling, which is but a name for a given weight of gold, of which the corresponding coin is the English sovereign.

* * * * * *

"Coined money has been well designated as coined credit; its valuation or estimation, which is purely an intellectual fact, or abstract and permanent idea ingrained in the human mind by long experience, is due to the credit or trust reposed in the future through the nexus of a material which is as sure to command a service equivalent to that rendered at the present time as any material substance can be, that material being gold.

"This estimation or value has become established by natural selection, or by what in these modern days we call evolution, and not by legislation.

"Legislation is powerless to change or alter this estimation.

"Every race which has ever been discovered that has come into the possession of gold—whether barbarous, semi-barbarous or civilized—every commercial state, every borrower, every lender gives confidence or grants a credit to gold or to the assured promise of gold to be delivered at a future date in preference to every other material or kind of money.

In summing up the main points of his address directly bearing upon the subject Mr. Atkinson said:

"I am inclined to believe, and I think that every student of banking will agree with me in the judgment, that the quantity of money which is required in actual circulation, and by means of which the actual small exchanges of the country are conducted, adjusts itself in inverse proportion to the intelligence of the people. The most intelligent people will make the greatest use of instruments of credit and of the methods of banking, and the least use of actual money. The least intelligent will make the greatest proportionate use of actual money, and will deprive themselves in greatest measure of the benefit of credit and of banking facilities.

"The conclusion follows that credit is the prime factor in making prices. An inflation of credit may occur, such as many of us have witnessed many times, and will produce a panic; that panic is a rough process of cure or adjustment to normal conditions. During this inflation of credit an inflation of prices will make the few rich at the cost of the many. Those who are shrewd enough to get out at the right time will grow rich; those who are not will become bankrupt; but the great body of consumers will pay both the profit of the few and the loss of the bankrupt.

"On the other hand, an inflation of currency or a great creation of cheap or fiat money by statute, forced into circulation by an act of legal tender, or a coinage act which forces a great quantity of token currency, made of low-priced silver, into service, or an issue of such an excess of government notes as to impair their credit, will neither inflate prices nor raise wages; on the contrary, by impairing credit, such acts will lower prices, depress wages, increase the amount of compulsory idleness, and by their bad effect will ultimately work their own repeal. * * *

"Bearing in mind, therefore, that the actual business transactions of this country in the exchange of products, wholly irrespective of the sales of stocks, bonds, lands, and the like, exceed in their value, by fifty to one hundred fold, the volume of money in circulation or held in reserve by banks, consisting of gold and gold certificates, silver and silver certificat's, legal tender notes, bank notes and subsidiary coin, all of which instruments of exchange are now convertible into gold coin—that is to say, bearing in mind that the volume of credit granted to farmers, merchants, manufacturers, tradesmen, workmen, and others, in order to enable the production and exchange of products to be conducted at present prices, at this very moment probably exceeds the whole amount of circulating medium by fifty fold—it becomes manifest that any inflation of the currency or addition to the money in circulation, which impairs its credit and renders ultimate redemption in gold doubtful, must result in such a contraction of credits as will obstruct commerce, depress prices, and work in the very reverse of what the advocates of inflation expect."

ENTERPRISING.

Most business men, especially the younger, says the American merchant, like to be called enterprising. In describing an eminent business man, among the terms employed we are sure to use the word enterprising, and sometimes it is so highly esteemed that we do not think it necessary to use any other to the credit of the man whom we would praise. "He is a very enterprising man," is enough.

Attending to the strict meaning of the word we find much reason for giving it honor. It is from the French, signifying alertness, boldness, courage and energy. The enterprising man has these in combination. He also has invention with them. So he becomes an inventor, an explorer, a pathfinder, a discoverer. He discloses new countries, new business, new methods, new instrumentalities, new combinations, new resources.

This is splendid and attractive. It is so nice to be different from the rest, or to have a place among the honored and praised, And, then, the practice of courage, boldness and energy is pleasant. It is fine to be more sagacious and alert than others, and independence in plans and methods seems to be so superior. And, then, enterprise may, and often does, employ the sterling virtues and give them activity, when otherwise they would be very quiet and inconspicuous.

We are an enterprising people, and the fruits of enterprise and enticements to enterprise abound among us pre-eminently, so that it is little wonder that those words are great favorites in our commercial vocabulary.

But enterprise may be reckless, and therefore should be guided by prudence. It may be ignorant, and therefore should cultivate intelligence. Sagacity, caution and conservatism may well consist with enterprise, and indeed, are necessary to it in its completeness. They do not necessarily imply old-fogyism. Enterprise should take close council of moral integrity to guard its character and credit Enterprise gives no one exemption from the claims of truth, honesty, honor, punctuality, industry, patience, courtesy—in a word, the Golden Rule. But much that is called enterprise little deserves the name, because so destructive of these virtues. Sometimes the enterprising business man is little less than a brigand, and even a sneak thief, for the rights of others seem so unsafe when in his power. The aim seems to be to "get there," whatever is left behind that a higher standard would much approve.

Where the virtues of a standard character are well developed and have full play, the enterprising man is a patriot and a benefactor as well as an honored man, but, where those are absent, he is a nuisance and a danger.

BY WM. H. MAHER.

CHAPTER VI.

Mr. Jackson gave me an order amounting to about $50 before we got through, and then my work in Paris was finished. I had good reason to be satisfied with my day's labor; it footed up $210. I arranged my samples in their cases, and then sat down to copy off my orders, all the time I was doing it picturing the surprise of the boys when they should see how well I had done.

Before starting I had been told to give full reports of the standing of all new men, and I had been at pains to inquire about my three customers. The reports were all good. Mr. Atkins was rich; the two others were fully as safe as he, although they were worth less than a thousand dollars each; their expenses were very light, and they were honest.

After the writing was done I inquired about the early trains to the next town. There was an accommodation freight at 4 o'clock in the morning; nothing after that until about noon. I gave orders to be called for the early train, and was then shown to my room. The bed was not any too clean, and the covering either very dirty or very musty, but I was in a frame of mind to accept all these things without complaint. I could not sleep: I was to happy.

What pictures filled my brain that night I leave the reader to conjecture, but they were none the less dreams because I was awake and not asleep. I tossed and turned on the hard straw bed from 10 o'clock until I was called up at 3:30 the next morning. I could not sleep. It was plain to my mind that I was a first-class salesman, and a bright future was in store for me—a future that led up to seeing my name in the firm; and then —well, that was enough; I did not care to see beyond that.

When my landlord pounded the door and said it was time to get up I was glad to hear it. I made a hasty toilet, and when I got down stairs found the landlord nodding behind the bar. My bill was $1.50, and when this was paid I prepared to get my baggage over to the depot. The landlord carried a lantern and one end of my trunk, and I the other end. Then I came back and got my two valises. There was no fire in the station-house, and the morning was raw and damp; my teeth were soon chattering. Four o'clock came, but no train; the landlord said it might not come for an hour yet, that it was scarcely ever on time, and with these comforting remarks he went back to his hotel.

The minutes dragged into an hour and, it was ten minutes after five when we heard the first signal of the coming train. The station agent told me to be on the alert and get my baggage in the caboose when the train was well drawn up, because there were times when it did not stop near the platform. The valise or the trunk was enough in either case to carry, but to have to take them both and my little hand-valise besides was too much. But I managed to get them aboard, and then endured ten minutes of banging and jolting while the train switched the freight cars in and out.

A run of forty-five minutes brought us to the next town—Welmore. This was a place of some pretensions, the largest town in the county, and contained many handsome buildings and shrewd merchants. That there were two hotels, at least, I knew before I got out of the cars, for before the engine slackened a couple of runners began to yell their respective houses: "Commercial House!" "Gay's Hotel!" No sooner did my sample case appear in sight than they both "went for me." One of them caught the valise, the other the trunk, and lifted them off for me. I had nothing to say, but wondered which of the places I would try. By something in the runner's face I decided in favor of Gay's Hotel, and I followed him to his place after seeing that my samples would be sent on later.

The hotel was a plain building, but when I opened the office door and found an immense open fireplace, in which a couple of big logs were roaring, I was satisfied I had made a good choice. The runner proved to be clerk too, and I was handed a pen and pointed to the register. I entered my name and residence, and than ran my eye over the page, but saw no names that were familiar.

"You are selling hardware?" said the clerk inquiringly.

"Trying to," said I.

"We don't see many men from your place," he continued.

"Have you any hardware men here now?" I asked.

"I believe there is one; yes, that Buffalo man."

I was sorry to hear this. What chance had I against a man from Buffalo? My stock of confidence went below par at once, and I sat down by the fire feeling decidedly blue. "It's all right," said I to myself, after a while, "if I don't sell a dollar's worth to-day I can stand it; my $200 yesterday will help me out."

Toward 7 o'clock the bell began to rouse up the sleepers, and as they stood around the office I wondered which was my competitor.

There were a dozen men whom I assumed to be drummers, and they made me feel rather ashamed of myself. They were free and easy with the clerk and the landlord, and got acquainted with each other rapidly. Then they all wore stylish clothes, and were as "nobby" as could be. I began to think I had missed my vocation; I was not stylish in dress, and it was not my nature to be free-and-easy with every one I met.

After breakfast I put my price-book in my overcoat pocket, and my cards where they would be handy, and prepared for work. We had sold goods to three or four firms in the place, though but very small bills at a time; still it seemed in my favor that they would be acquainted with the house. The business houses were all on one street. Standing in front of the hotel you could see every store, and among the prominent signs were a padlock and an anvil. I went for the padlock first.

The store was a very handsome one for a hardware store. The stock was arranged on platforms, in cases, and in frames, in a very artistic manner. Chains were coiled up as if done by an old tar; axes were displayed in such forms that they made a handsome picture; saws hung on wires, and seemed to be floating on the air. The store was so large, the stock so heavy and well arranged, I lost all heart. Such a concern as this would not buy of me! But I was here, and might as well speak my piece. The young man was looking as if expecting to sell me something, so I gave him a good morning.

"Is either of the proprietors in?" I asked.

"No, sir; they haven't come down yet.

All right; then I would pump this young clerk. I told him who I was, sat down on the counter with him, and chatted about such things as I thought would interest him, and then led him around to his store.

"Who is the buyer of the firm?" I asked him.

"Mr. Clymer."

"You buy East mostly, I suppose?"

"Yes altogether."

"I believe our house has done a little with you."

"Perhaps it has; of course we have to stock up a little near home once in awhile."

"Have you been long here?"

"Three years."

"Do you like the hardware trade?"

"Yes, I think it's the best trade going."

"Going to settle down here?"

"I don't know."

I was prepared to flatter him to any extent, because I wanted to get into his good graces, and to find out from him what prices the firm paid for goods, so that I would know how to quote them..

"What pay do you get here?" I asked him.

"Fifty dollars a month."

"You can do better in the city," said I; "and I wonder you don't go there."

"I've often thought I'd like to get out of here," said he.

Of course he had; where is there a man who is satisfied with his place?

"I am going to travel through here regularly," said I, "and we will get better acquainted, and if I can be of any help to you I will be glad to do anything I can."

Then I began to pump.

"Do you sell many cross-cut saws?"

"About fifty in the season."

"Can you get them for less than a dollar and a quarter.

"I don't remember," said he, going to the saws and reading the cost mark. "Yes; these only cost $1.15."

"You sell a good many axes; what do you have to pay for Mann's?"

"Eight fifty."

"When Mr. Clymer comes I want to get a little order from him, and if you can help me at all I will do as much for you some time."

"I dont believe you can do anything with with him this time. There's a Buffalo man in town now, and he wouldn't give him an order last night."

"Well, I shall try him. Do you know of anything you are running low in?"

"We are out of some sizes of Rothery files and copper rivets, and we ought to have a cheap buck-saw."

"What does a 10-inch Rothery cost you?"

"One dollar and seventy-five cents."

"Can you buy copper rivets better than thirty cents?"

"Twenty-eight these are marked."

"How is the stock of saws and axes?"

"We have too many; will carry some over to next winter."

"How is——"

"Here comes Mr. Clymer now."

Mr. Clymer was an open-faced, pleasant-looking gentleman; his eyes were shrewd and his mouth decisive, yet the whole effect of his face was pleasant.

We gave each other a good morning, he keeping right on to the office, and when he was settled there I followed him, and gave him my card.

"From————, eh?" said he. "How are times there?"

We went through these preliminaries, and then I took hold of business.

"Mr. Clymer, I don't expect to sell you a big bill of hardware, because I know there are many things in the line you buy as cheap as we do, but I suppose you need a few little things to keep up your assortment, and it will not pay you to send to New York for them. If there are any such I will let you have them right down to hard-pan, and be grateful to you for a small order."

"Yes; well, I may do something with you some time, but I don't believe we need anything today."

"How is your stock of saws?"

"Full."

"I am sorry, because I could do you good on saws. We have special arrangements with the manufacturers, and could sell you as low as New York."

"What do you ask for the Champion?"

"To the ordinary trade," said I, "we get $1.15; I would sell you some for $1.10." (They cost us $1.13.)

"For $1.10, eh? Frank, did our saws cost $1.10?"

"One dollar and fifteen cents, sir," said the clerk.

"And you sell for $1.10? Well, that beats the devil."

CHAPTER VII.

My quotation for saws made a vivid impression on Mr. Clymer; that was very evident. He got up and went to his invoice book, looked at a bill, and then sat down again.

"Look here," said he, at last, "I don't want any saws, but I'd like to know how the deuce you can sell them for $1,10 when such houses as Sargent ask $1.15."

"To tell you the truth, Mr. Clymer, we can't afford to sell at that figure; and to small trade we oftener get $1.25, than less; but I named it to you, as I will to a very few other close buyers, because I want to show you that I meant business when I said I would sell you down on the hard pan. If you want any saws you can have them for $1.10."

"I don't want any now; I'm afraid I'll have to carry over a dozen or so."

"How are you off for axes?"

"Whose do you sell?"

"Ebenezer Mann's."

"What do you get for them?"

"I will sell to you for $8."

"Let me see what ours cost." And he left me a moment.

"Your figures on axes are low," said he, when he was back; "but we can't use any more this season."

"Well, Mr. Clymer, is there anything you do want to-day? I have shown you my willingness to sell you at bottom prices, now can't you scrape up a small order for me? I don't care how small it is, so that I get an order from you; after you know me better I am sure you will give me a share of your trade."

"Well, you come in again; you are going to be in town all day, aren't you? Yes; well, come in, and I'll try and find something for you."

I thanked him. "By the by," said I, as I rose to go, "please don't mention my prices to any one; I shall not offer them to any other house here, and your speaking of them might get me into trouble."

He promised not to speak of them, and was pleased at the implied compliment that I was giving him better prices than his neighbors. Where should I go next? The other hardware store attracted me, and to it I went.

Standing behind the counter was a very red-faced gentleman, and I did not need to hear his voice to know that he was a German. Before the counter was a very spruce young man; spruce in every sense of the word; his clothes were a perfect fit, and were of the very latest cut, his black mustache was waxed till it curved and twisted on each side of his mouth into a perfect S, his boots shone as boots shine in Dixon's advertisements, and he had a book on the counter before him that looked more like a lady's gift-book than it did like a drummer's price-book.

I gave the gentleman behind the counter a good morning, and walked to the stove without further ceremony. The spruce young man eyed me keenly, but went on with his business, while I picked up the paper lying near me, and pretended to be interested in that. But I wasn't; I was taking notes of the young man at the counter; I was too far away to hear what he said. So far as I could understand the pantomime it was like this: The drummer turned to a new article in his book, showed the cut to the merchant, dilated on the merits of the article—the dealer agreeing with him in everything—then asking for an order for some of them, only to be met wita a refusal. Then something new was turned to and the process repeated.

It was rather a slow affair, and I needed all my stock of patience to sit there waiting for drummer No. 1 to go away, but I was determined to stay. At last I saw him close up his book and prepare to go. But his departure was a matter of time; he still expatiated on his goods, his house, etc., and still the dealer bowed his head to every statement, but gave no order. At last he shook hands, gave a keen glance my way, and went away. Now for it.

The dealer came toward the stove, and I rose to meet him. I had caught his name from the sign. "Mr. Millmeyer?" said I, with the interrogation at the end.

"Dot is me."

"I came in to visit a little with you; here is my card; I didn't expect to do anything but visit when I saw the other young man here."

He shook hands, told me to sit down, and took a chair beside me, with, "Vell, how goes times in de city?"

"Spring trade is opening up well; how is it here?"

"Tam dull; I vish de peesness was in de teufel."

I was ready to cheer him up, if cheering would do any good, but he seemed beyond that point, so I was equally ready to condole with him.

"You are not the only one who finds trade dull," said I, "it is the same story, everywhere. But the dullness now means good trade by and by. It's always dull this season of the year."

"Yes, I shpose so."

"You haven't laid in any spring stock yet?"

"No; it ish too soon."

"Where was this young man from?"

"From Buffalo; dit you efer see such a cuss?"

"He appeared smart and sharp," said I.

"Oh, yes; he was shmart as plaxes; und de house vas a goot house, too; but dit you effer see sooch clothes?" And he laughed loud and long, I joining in moderately, as in duty bound.

One thing is clear to me, in this present frame of mind there was no use in talking business to Mr. Millmeyer; he was not in the spirit to stand another siege just then; I proposed to make a diversion.

"I wish you could get out a few minutes," said I, "I am most confounded hungry, and would like a bit of bread and a glass of wine."

"I go mit you," and he went to a side door and called "Weely." Pretty soon a boy of twelve appeared, and after giving him instructions in German, the dealer led me to a wine-room down the street,

I called for a glass of light Catawba wine and some bread and cheese, and, as I really was hungry, I did justice to the lunch. My friend Millmeyer joined in it heartily, and was able to empty two glasses to my one, the wine making his tongue wag with more ease. He called the saloon-keeper over and introduced me to him, laughed at my jokes as if they were full of richness, and several times called me "a pully boy."

When he had about emptied glasses and plates I thought it time to turn to business. I told him about my luck the day before, how anxious I was to do a little with every merchant, and how well I meant to treat every one. "And now, I want you to pick up a little order for me, Mr. Millmeyer. I will sell you right, but I want you to do it just to help me; some day when I come around I can help you, and I will. You must be out of some little things; it will not pay you to send to Buffalo for them, but you can get them right near you and do me a favor."

I paid my bill and we turned back to his store; I saw he wanted to order yet he did not. "Is there anything you are out of? I asked.

"Well, to tell de troot, dere is a ding or two; but I hate like plazes to order; times are too dull."

"But you want to hold your trade," said I, "and suppose a good customer calls for something you are out of, and has to go to Clymer's for it, how is that going to make times better for you?"

"Dat is so, by shiminy!"

"Now my way would be to keep up my assortment, dull or no dull; don't give any big orders to anybody, but don't run out of anything."

"Dat ish so."

"I want to send you anything you need, and you may make just as small an order as you please, but don't be out of goods that are called for."

"Dat was goot adwice. I guess I will give you a leetle order."

I followed him behind his counter and helped him see what he was out of. He evidently bought goods in large quantities in

THE SUCCESSFUL MERCHANT

He believes that strict integrity is the foundation of all legitimate business success.

He places no limit to his ambition, since the field is free to all and work the price of progress.

He pushes for more business in busy seasons, and if customers are scarce still persues.

He depends upon his own exertions and abilities, and they reward his confidence.

He practices strict business economy, but does not condescend to penuriousness.

He has an eye open constantly for new goods, and accepts valuable ideas regardless of their source.

He realizes that the prime object of business is to make money, and he therefore refrains from extreme competition in prices.

He is not bounded by his surroundings, and if they prove too meagre, he seeks wider fields for his operations.

He prefers to be original in his methods, and leads rather than follows.

He never allows customers to prevent departure, or prejudice defeat progress, or obscure facts.

He stands on the happy medium plane, between commercial timidity on the one hand, and ill-digested schemes on the other.

He is not utterly defeated by defeat, nor careless from success.

He is aware of the changes which are almost imperceptibly creeping around his business and tacks to catch the wind.

He is honest, not only from policy, but from principal; he considers success lacking self-approbation, as failure in disguise.

He is not intimidated by unmerited or ignorant criticisms. Opinions have weight with him in comparison with their source and cause.

He pays promptly, and collects as he pays; rather than pays as he collects.

He is courteous in manner, and appreciates the commercial value of cordiality.

He is careful in details, knowing that they are the mortar which bind his operations.

He thinks first and deeply, and speaks last and concisely.

He believes in system, but does not depend blindly upon it for results, since he considers demand the power, and system the method of supply.

He keeps his hand on "to-day," but his eye on "to-morrow," and works in the present, while scrutenizing the future.

He possesses executive ability to a degree which renders him appreciative of the valuable points of his employes.

He seeks education both inside and outside of business, and widens his horizon of ideas by a healthy interest in the interests of the world.

He believes in judicious advertising, but never advertises his competitors by adverse criticisms.

He considers his business his means of existence, but he remembers his duty to his neighbor, and—himself.—Ex.

LEADING MERCHANTS.

The ambition to be leaders, and the necessary exertion made to accomplish this end, accounts for the successful business career of many who have attained prominence in the commercial world. Nothing succeeds like success, and to lookers on, the successful man has only to engage in some enterprise to insure satisfactory returns. Others have as good original ideas but lack the sagacity or boldness to adopt them. New ideas do not always result in drawing trade, as the merchant hoped, but the experience and education, the feeling of independence resulting from leaving the beaten track, usually more than compensates for the possible money loss. In every prosperous community there are leading merchants. To them come the largest number of persons who wish to buy, because they think inducements will be made in prices and variety of goods. Traveling men prefer to sell to this class of merchants, because larger amounts of their goods will be taken by them, and the endorsement of the leading merchant is a leverage that can be used in making sales in adjoining towns. Even if the new line of goods which you are pushing does not prove as successful as you anticipated, you have these advantages—it gives you something to talk about and show to customers ; it gives something new to advertise ; it brings customers to your store, both yours and others ; the impression is made on the public that you are a man of new ideas, and that if you do not keep an article in your store it is useless to look further for it.

The opening wedge to business success has been, in many cases, judicious advertising, and probably for a local business it is best to advertise in the town and county papers, which are read by the people on whom you have to rely for your trade. There is often a noticeable lack of Hardware and Stoves advertising in these newspapers, while nothing is more conspicuous than the advertisements of dry goods men and clothiers in the same issues. There seems to be an unspoken agreement among the Hardware trade to the effect that "if you don't advertise, I won't." To be a a leading merchant let the local world know what you have, change your advertisements often, and focus attention on your stock. The indirect results from advertising are harder to gauge than the direct results, but none the less important, whether it be newspaper advertising or some other novel way of catching the eye and ear of the public. It is not a debatable question, whether visiting the market once or more times a year produces adequate returns. The fact is, large returns are the result. The merchant obtains new ideas, absorbs the atmosphere of push and energy which is so prominent to a stranger in the city, and gains a prestige over competitors, when, upon his return, he tells a customer that in looking the market over thoroughly nothing was found which, in his opinion, equaled the article he is offering for sale. The most popular salesmen obtainable are worth as much to you as to any one; the best arrangement of goods that can be had is worth the time and trouble; both tending to increase your sales.

Reducing running expenses is not always accomplished by hiring cheap help, but is often a source of much loss in trade. You want people around you who will aid in keeping things moving. Some merchants show rare faculties in associating with themselves competent assistants. Profit from business is a necessity, and is that which remains in the hands of the merchant after all of the various expenses of doing business are paid. Selling goods for more than is paid for them does not always result in profit. Some goods are necessarily sold on small margins and each year that class of goods seems to grow larger. In marking goods the 5 or 10 per cent., or whatever percentage it costs to do business, must be added to the cost of the invoice price of the articles. To counterbalance this large proportion of close margin goods, judicious selections must be made from the never ending list of novelties continually being offered which will stand a good profit, thus securing a good average profit on sales. Do not overwork yourselves nor your employees; it is not a wise investment of energy. Have sufficient help and system so that everything will be done at the proper time, and in the proper manner. Don't let the cry against red tape keep you from systemizing the work, making each responsible for his part, thus having all the necessary details properly attended to. Above all never be discouraged. Nothing is more admired by the public than pluck, and sympathy backed by dollars will come to those who aim to be leading merchants.—Ex.

"SNAP" ADVERTISING SCHEMES.

There is probably no branch of business so little understood by business men generally, and there is certainly nothing so essential to success in any mercantile or manufacturing enterprise, as advertising. The most successful men in both advertise in newspapers; and no one who has any foresight or experience would think of not using newspapers first, and other mediums only as an adjunct.

No field is so thoroughly worked and so much ingenuity displayed to induce people to invest money as in these numerous schemes which are generally of but little benefit and often worthless. Thousands of dollars are annually expended in this way and people will patronize them, paying exorbitant prices for some transient benefit; people who would refuse to pay the same money for a standing advertisement in a local newspaper.

This class of people is the first to complain bitterly when outside parties who understand their business, open in their midst and take away their patrons by liberal newspaper advertising. They censure the newspapers because they carry these advertisements for strangers, and they seem to forget that the press has any power until it is demonstrated to their disadvantage, when they invoke its influence to correct the very evils they are directly responsible for. Nothing delights wide-awake, energetic advertisers so much as to get into a locality where those in business are too penurious or indifferent to make use of the newspapers, and when they do, there are both profit and amusement in store for them.

There is no safeguard like a local newspaper. Nothing can do more to keep up a town and help business ; and merchants, above all, should give them the preference. Yet frequently the only return the papers get for their enterprise is depreciation from those whom they have benefitted both directly and indirectly. As long as this is the case newspapers will be prone to welcome newcomers in the field, even if their visits are brief.—Harrisburg (Pa.) Call.

good times, for now in these dull times he ordered full packages of me. There was a line of files, screws, bolts, augers, bits, etc., amounting to $100. I was delighted, and profuse in my thanks. I promised to call again before I left town, and then went to the hotel to dinner.

In the afternoon I went among the general stores, most of them keeping a line of cutlery and woodenware,and I picked up three small orders, all of them being for knives and spoons, and ordered because I agreed to send them in Millmeyer's box and pay freight on them. As a quarter of a dollar satisfied Millmeyer, I considered I made a good bargain. The three orders amounted to $65, and at good profit.

This brought me around to Mr. Clymer's and I went in for the order he had promised me.

I did not see, until I had opened the office door, that the Buffalo drummer was there but it was too late to turn back. He did not notice me, at least did not appear to, and I took a back seat, refusing the one Mr. Clymer pointed at near him. I did not propose to listen to what was said if I could help it; but the office was too small. I heard every word they said.

"You fellows all tell the same story," said Mr. Clymer to the drummer; "it is always that you will sell me as low as you sell the jobbers near here, but you don't do it."

"I give you my word I do, Mr. Clymer," was the reply.

"Why, no, you don't; I have had quotations from Heman & Co. down here offering goods at less than New York prices."

"Oh, that was just a bait. I know Heman, & Co. well; we sell them lots of goods."

THE CANADA SUGAR REFINING CO'Y [LIMITED],

MONTREAL.

Offer for sale all grades of REFINED SUGARS and SYRUPS of the well-known brand of

Redpath

CERTIFICATES OF STRENGTH AND PURITY.

OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC ANALYST,

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Co., Montreal:

GENTLEMEN,—I have personally taken samples from a large stock of your Granulated Sugar, "REDPATH" brand, and carefully tested them by the Polariscope, and I find these samples to be as near to absolute purity as can be obtained by any process of Sugar-Refining.

The test by the Polariscope showed in yesterday's yield 99·90 per cent. of Pure Cane Sugar, which may be considered commercially as ABSOLUTELY PURE SUGAR.

JOHN BAKER EDWARDS, P.L.D., D.C.L., F.C.S.,

Public Analyst for the District of Montreal, and Professor of Chemistry.

CHEMICAL LABORATORY, MEDICAL FACULTY, McGILL UNIVERSITY.

MONTREAL, September 9th, 1887.

To the Canada Sugar Refining Company:

GENTLEMEN,—I have taken and tested a sample of your "EXTRA GRANULATED" Sugar, and find that it yielded 99·88 per cent. of Pure Sugar It is practically as pure and good a Sugar as can be manufactured.

Yours truly,

G. P. GIRDWOOD,

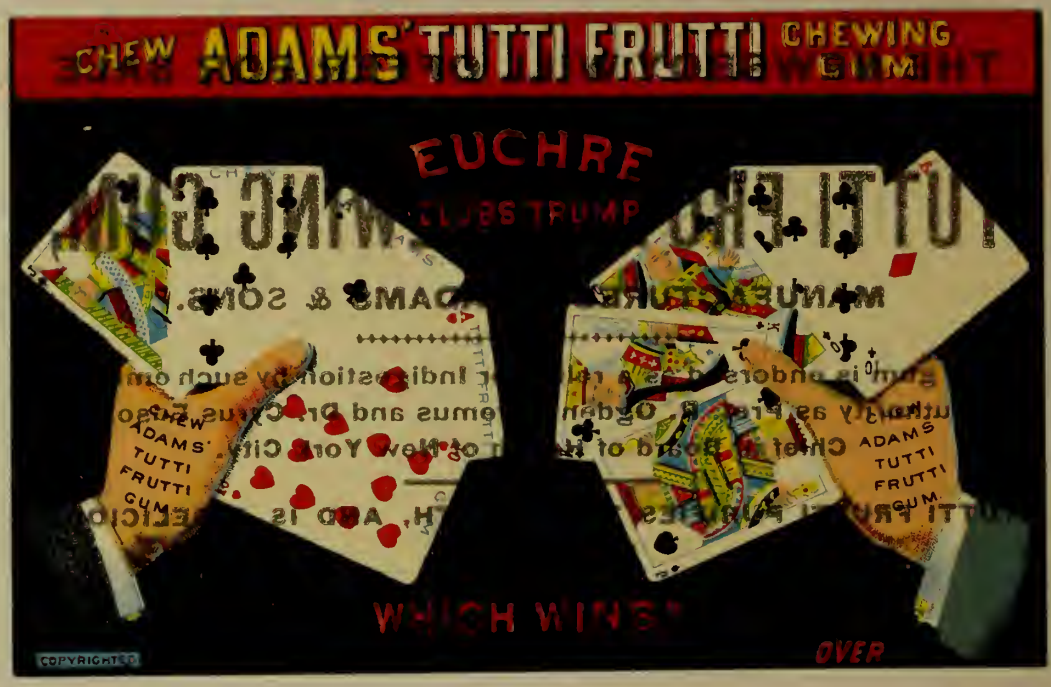
One of our Advertising Specialties for Retail merchants on the Purchase Ticket Plan.

This Method of Advertising has proved a most positive success, and very many merchants in Canada are handling it with flattering Results.



It is absolutely impossible to invent a method of advertising that will produce the same result, for in very many cases it has been the means of changing a long time credit business to a strictly Cash Trade, and is of incalculable benefit to the merchant. Send to us for Circulars explaining the system of handling this valuable method of Advertising.

Money in your business for the sole purpose of getting money. Now, the question arises, "Is it extravagance or is it economy to buy something that takes care of the money and guarantees to you that every time any goods go out of your store you will have full value received for them.

A NATIONAL CASH REGISTER DOES IT

YOU ARE A CLOSE BUYER

Our Cash and Credit Systems cost money but if those who are now using our Registers had felt that they were taking the whole amount out of their capital our sales would have been few and far between. Now every man that buys a Cash Register buys it because he sees it will save him money and pay for itself out of the money it saves, even if he does a business on only $25.00 a day.

Turn Your Attention to the Fact

That in running a business of any kind it is absolutely necessary, in every case, to have some method of keeping account of the daily transactions. It is a satisfaction to both proprietor and clerks to know that everything is running right and that there is no mistake in making change, no shortages in accounts, that whenever a customer pays he can see whether the proper amount is charged and accounted for. THE MARKETS

TORONTO, October 24, 1890.

GROCERIES.

The pace of trade is usually rather a a sober one in the interval between the fruit season and the Christmas demand. It is only the unexpected that ever relieves the level of mediocrity in any week of that period. Nothing, looked-for or unlooked-for, has arisen to lift this week out of the general monotony. Trade is but fair, and about as the season usually warrants, though late October last year showed a slightly higher activity. Money seems not to flow freely in the grooves of the grocery trade yet, as neither business nor payments brings much to the city. The chief activity in the warehouses was mapped out some time ago in the orders taken for future delivery of canned goods and dried fruit. The filling of these orders is now brisk. The canned goods trade is also excellent.

CANNED GOODS.

The controversy whether prices would be high or low in several lines has not lulled but has resulted in the conversion of both parties to the one opinion. There appears no escape from the fact that every line is firm, and that several lines have the potential energy in them for an advance. Prices in several staples have gone up since we reported a week ago, but it is generally believed they have not reached their limit. No corn can be had under a $1.10, and the top figure is $1.25. The 10c. advance to the lowest quotation is assured. Peas are $1.20 to $1.35. A 1,000 cases were sold to a Hamilton wholesaler on Tuesday, at $1.15, the stock being furnished by a Toronto wholesale house. This shows not only the strength of the price, but also the scarcity of stock in the hands of canners themselves. Canned tomatoes are $1.10 to $1.25, and equally firm with corn and peas. On Wednesday one firm of jobbers bid $1.10 for a round lot of 100 cases held by another jobbing firm, but the offer was not accepted. The additional 5c. to retailers will therefore be hard to melt away. Fruits partake of the general improvement. Peaches, 2's, are $2.75 to $2.85, an advance of 15c. from the lowest point and 20c. from the highest. Threes are $3.75 to $3.85, 25c. higher than they were last week. Raspberries are 20c. higher, quoting at $2.45 to $2.50. In canned fish prices are firmer and in some cases advanced. No more lobsters can be got for $1.90, the range of prices now being $2 to $2.25 for tall. One firm of salmon packers advises its broker here that the market has gone up to $4.50 per case on the coast. This is equal to $5.72 here, an advance of 72c. on the prices of last week. There is some stock to be had here yet at $1.25, but $1.35 is now asked for good brands. Horseshoe is $1.40 to $1.45, and flat tins are $1.60 to $1 65. P. & C. quarter tins of sardines are up, quoting now 23 to 25c.

Mr. Anning of A. C. Miller & Co., canners, Picton, has sold out to A. W. Hepburn.

COFFEES.

The demand for coffee shows little variation, and if it it showed more would not materially affect prices, as the strength of them is drawn from the firmness of outside circumstances. The trade in coffee is rather quiet. Prices are slightly easier for Rio, the lowest grade selling at 23c. Maracaibo is higher. What is now paid is 22 to 24c. The American Grocer says of the New York market: The market continues to be well sustained. There has been some improvement in the character of the supply of high grades, while low grades have been growing scarce and are very firmly held. In a jobbing way No. 3 or Fair Rio cannot be bought under 20½c.; good yellow Cucutas are very scarce, with 20½c. asked for good and sales of some fine at 21c. The receipts in Santos have recently been very heavy, and on Monday reached the total of 30,000 bags. They have averaged for the past few weeks over 105,000 bags per week, which is about double the receipts at the same time last year. There is a good distributive demand for all grades. Padang Interior, 25 to 25¼c.; fancy mats, 25½ to 27c.; Mocha, 24½c.; other mild grades, 17¾ to 23½c.

DRIED FRUIT.

The shipping of dried fruits on orders taken for future delivery is a leading activity in the week's trade. The stock of Valencias for this market brought by the Draema's direct shipment last week had been to a considerable extent sold before its arrival. Off-stalk Valencias are selling as low as 6¼c here. Smaller quantities are going off at 6½ to 7c. Selected are 8c. The receipts of Malaga raisins up to the present are small. Few wholesalers have any. They include London layers and black baskets. The layers are offering at $3.25, and the black baskets at $4 to $4.25. Sultanas have relaxed none of their firmness. They are 14 to 16c for fine, 15 to 17c. for finest, and 16 to 18c. for extra. The only figs in yet are Elemes. They are worth 12c. for 14 oz. boxes, 14c. for 10 and 20 lb. boxes, and 20c. for 7-Crown. Cooking figs are not yet in stock. Currants tended to easier prices last week, on account of the increased offerings. But firmness at the seat of production is causing a return to stronger prices in this market. Last week's prices hold, but are firmer. They have made an advance in Greece equal to ¾c. The stock in the country appears to be rather light. This seems to be a fair deduction from the fact that sales have been made in Montreal since the advance, which shows that the importers of that city had not laid in their usual reserve wherewith to stock the usual number of wholesalers who usually hold off for some reason and do not order at the outset. There is no likelihood, therefore, that there will be weakness in this market on account of the extent of the operations of importers. There is no ground for weakness in the situation of the producing market. Cask prunes advanced 2s. a hundred on Tuesday, and on the same day case prunes advanced 1s. per hundred, according to advices from Trieste.

NUTS.

The market has not begun to receive its stock of new nuts. These will commence to arrive in three weeks. There is a rather quiet demand now. On account of the smallness of stocks, and firmness at points of production, there has been no easing of prices since our former report. The crop of Grenobles and Naples is said to be very small, so that the present high prices are not likely to be lowered greatly by the accession of the new stock of these kinds. Until the setting in of the Christmas demand there will be but a quiet trade in this market.

RICE AND SPICES.

Except that there is a stronger feeling in the rice market, there is no noteworthy feature in the trade carried on here. The demand is easy, stocks are light, and replenishment can be at an advance upon the figures paid for the stock yet held here. Penang cloves are 45c. Zanzibar cloves are 25c.

SUGAR.

These are not sugar times. A very light demand is all that is now operative, and trade is quiet. Nevertheless, prices are firm, both in this country and in outside markets. The only change in white sugars, and that a somewhat puzzling one is a reduction of ⅛c. on Paris lumps, the price of this grade in barrels being now 7⅝c. Granulated is unchanged at 7 to 7⅛c. This market is now 1-16 to ⅛c. below New York on granulated. Yellow sugars of all grades have advanced ¼c., the inside figure now quoted being 5⅜c. The demand, although not strong for any class of sugar, is better for yellows just now than for whites.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their weekly statistical position of sugar, say: Raws advanced 1-16c. Receipts 9,988 tons less than last week, and meltings 8,790 tons less than last week, but 8,021 tons greater than receipts, thereby reducing stocks 8,021 tons for the week, and bringing them to a very low point for the season. The market opened with strength and activity, leading to such important transactions that importers' stocks were reduced to 10,000 tons. With this small amount of disposable material, there has been scarcely sufficient sugar on the market to make any further movement either up or down, and the close of the week is quiet enough. If sugars were to be offered, they would perhaps be taken only at a loss of the 1-16c. advancement made at the start, but the statistical position is such that firmness should be renewed again. A gain of 1-16c was made in several grades of refined the early part of the week, but it was lost again at the close. Although the influence of the Louisiana crop is not yet felt, meltings of raws have begun to be curtailed by the shutting down of some refineries, both trust and non-trust, as is always customary at this season, and has no special significance. The Spreckel's refinery, Philadelphia, have reduced the price of granulated to 6½c., or ⅛c. per pound under New York.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Trade in syrups has not appreciably improved, but the smallness of stocks has caused an advance. Redpath's D is now 3⅝ to 3¾c., and M is 3¾ to 3⅞c. per lb., 14 lbs. being the weight of the gallon that wholesalers are obliged to give. There has been fair activity in the demand for molasses. West India is up 2c., going at 40 to 42c. per gallon in barrels, and 40 to 42c. in half-barrels. Molasses run at 13 1-2 lbs. to the gallon.

TEAS.

An improvement which looks like the beginning of a return to the strong movement that was the most interesting feature in the grocery market a few weeks ago, is now distinctly observable. Retailers who bought anterior to or even in the midst of that movement were fortunate, as prices have got away from the uncertain moorings that then held them. The outlook favors a still further advance. Japans and Young Hysons are very firm. It is about impossible to buy any low grade green tea now at a low price. There are some wholesalers here who have no tea for which they paid less than 22c. However, there are Japans to be bought yet at 19c. The one good result of the scarcity of low grade teas is the clearing of the market of rubbish, stock which has been a source of loss to importers and wholesalers in the past. It is not a certainty, however, that low grade Japans and Young Hysons will not be forthcoming yet. What will bring them is a good price. Now that prices are up we may have yet a third or fourth picking shipped to this market before the scarcity has affected prices muchfarther. Indian teas continue dull, and not much business has been done. In London the enquiry for the finest grades continues strong, and previous values were well supported, while medium sorts sold at less firm rates. The principal decline has been in pekoes and broken pekoes under 1s. which have fallen 1-2d., the former were nearly approaching last year's prices. Common souchongs and broken teas have also declined, but to a less extent. Ceylon tea still continues firm and freely dealt in at present rates.

PETROLEUM.

Trade continues good at last week's prices. These are firm, the position of crude being unchanged.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

Business goes on tranquilly. No line manifests great activity. Prices are unchanged in everything but carbolic acid, in which there is a reduction of 5c, and bicarbonate of soda, which has gone up to $2.40 and $2.50.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

This week's receipts are larger and the line of average quality is considerably higher. Ordinary butter, as distinct from fancy, shows marked improvement. The old complaint, the superfluity of bad butter, must be passed still on the Toronto market. Despite the signs of improvement noted above, there is no closing one's eyes to the extensive opening of further improvement. Stock has come in this week that will probably not go out till next spring. No sales of round lots are reported, though a car of dairy received considerable attention at figures that were below those asked. Creamery tubs were worth 22 to 23c. Not many are moving. Creamery rolls are 22 to 24c. Good dairy tubs are 15 to 17c. Medium dairy tubs and choice new store packed are 10 to 12½c. Large rolls are 13 to 15c., as are also crocks and pails. Pound rolls in strong request, are 17 to 19c.

Cheese very firm at 10 to 10½c. Makers will make no concessions for large orders. The market in England is very strong.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

APPLES—Are firm at $2.50 to $3 for good fruit. The stock now coming forward is made up of snows, greenings, golden russets, etc. There is a sharp consumers' demand.

BEANS—Are worth $1.60 to $1.75. There is a fair stock in jobbers' hands here. Growers are offering more freely, and the prices now holding may be said to be those settled by market movements, not experimental prices. A car has been distributed among the trade at $1 65; a fear that prices will go lower deters buyers from taking more than will supply immediate wants.

DRIED APPLES—Are scarce and wanted at 7 to 8c. There are very few in dealers' hands here.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Have not apparently got to state of equilibrium, as there is some diversity in the prices asked by different buyers. Fifty pound boxes are being sold on the street at 13c. while certain holders still ask 16c. The market is undoubtedly strong, and the views of the adherents of the higher price appeared to be on a good basis.

EGGS—Are scarce as a consequence of the time of year, and are firm at 18 to 19c.

GAME—Partridges are 60c. per brace, ducks 70c per brace, and venison, now coming in, is 7c. per lb.

Hay—Is dull and unchanged at $9 to $9.50 on track.

HIDES—Cured are 7½ to 7¾c. Green are 7c. for No. 1, and 6c. for No. 2. The trade is quiet.

HONEY—There is no change in the state of the market. Clear honey, good, is 12½c, medium is 11c., and low grades are 7 to 8c. In sections prices are 14 to 20c.

HOPS—Of the present year's growth are firm at 35c. Yearlings are 12 to 15c. The new hops are evidently fine stock, but there is a low supply so far. Growers appear to be slow to offer. It was reported that considerable purchases had been made by American buyers from Canadian buyers; 100 bales Western Ontario sold last week at 40c. Recent mail advices quote Kentish hops in London at 37 to 52c. for fair to choice.

OATS—Are 39 to 40c.

ONIONS—Are $1.75 to $2 in car lots. They are standing at this price after yielding to a weak spell on Tuesday. The prices quoted are firm. A car of onions sold Friday at 1¼c. per pound f.o.b. at an outside point for shipment to Nova Scotia.

POTATOES—Have got down to 40c. in car lots. The supply seems excessive. Out of store lots are 60c. It is said that consignments have recently been sent by Canadian buyers to the United States, and that the stock spoiled on the market. The result of the experiment was loss, as the price realized did not suffice to pay freight and duty this year. Sweet potatoes are also in stock, selling at $3.50 to $4.

FISH.

A quiet trade is being transacted in fish at present. The local dealers are receiving more than there is call for. Lake herring is very plentiful this week, and has the best demand. British Columbia salmon are only to be had in frozen quantities now, as the fish dealers are having all that are received frozen. Of the dried fish, Finnan haddie has the best demand, although all are in very good request. The prices reported are: fresh fish—trout 6 to 6½c.; British Columbia salmon (frozen) 16c.; lake herring $2 to $2.50 per hundred; Lake Nippising pickerel, 4 to 5c.; Lake Huron pickerel, 6c.; pike 4c. Smoked fish, Finnan haddie, 7½c.; Labrador herring, 6½c.; cod (40 lb. boxes) 6½c.; 1 lb. rolls, 8½c.; boneless fish, 4 1-2c.; boneless cod, 8 1-2c.; shore herring, 5 to 5 1-2c.; cod fish (quintels) 5 to 5 ½c.; Bigby herring 16c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The quiet of the past six weeks has been maintained throughout this week. Very little inquiry has been made yet for the big trade that begins a short time before Christmas. Nor have prices got to the range they will then play within. Jamaica oranges are $7. Floridas are in rather liberal supply and are worth $5.50. The full effect of their incoming has not yet been felt on the market, however. Messina lemons, not yet plentiful, are worth $6.50. The new Malaga lemons are now coming in and are dear yet. Half-chests are $11, and chests are $15. They are very firm.

PROVISIONS.

Briskness is yet a steady feature of the provision trade. Most classes of stock share in the activity. Smoked meats continue to shrink in compass, but before a state of depletion is reached, the packers will have new stock ready.

BACON—Long clear is 8 to 8¾c. Backs are 10½ to 11c. Bellies are 10½ to 11c. Rolls are 9½ to 10c.

DRESSED HOGS—Are worth $5.75 to $6.

HAMS—Are firm at 13c. for smoked, and 11c. for sweet pickled.

LARD—Is 9 to 9½c.

MESS PORK—Is $15.00 to $16.50.

POULTRY—Ducks are 50 to 75c. per pair. Chickens are 40 to 45c. per pair. Turkeys are 10 to 12c. per lb. Geese are 6 to 6½c. per lb.

SKINS—Are rather dull at 85 to 90c.

STRAW—Is $5.50 to $6.

TALLOW—Is 2c. for rough, and 5½c. for rendered.

WOOL—Is quiet at 20c. per fleece.

DRY GOODS.

Business is kept moving at a fairly active gait, but there is no particular line receiving special attention. Prices hold evenly at the points they have been keeping for some time. The scarcity of money is the leading characteristic in payments, The same cause is a hindrance to trade, of course.

SALT.

In view of the fact that there is now considerable inquiry from large consumers, the prices of salt are growing firmer. A Toronto refiner is negotiating with certain packers, etc., for a large overturn. This makes business good and gives a tone to prices. Labrador salt is reported to be scarce this week. The following are the sales by the Toronto Salt Works for week: 3 cars sacks at 70c.; 2 cars bbls at $1.40.; 2 cars dairy at $1.25. Smaller lots sell at $1.55 to $1.60 for bbls.; 85 to 90c. for sacks, and 55 to 60c. for ¼ sacks.

GROCERIES.

The season is now sufficiently advanced for a general review of it to be made, and the impression conveyed after a careful survey is that it has been a fairly satisfactory one taken on the whole. This was plainly indicated when the fall movement commenced in earnest, and it was found that stocks generally were light and the position a healthy one for fresh supplies. An intelligent idea is conveyed by a summing up of the leading features that have arisen during the season having a bearing on the general position. Taking them in rotation, the first was the annual spring sales of important green fruit. These are now an established fact, and this year's series were in every respect as successful as the preceding ones. In fact they are now a recognized factor in the distribution of stock of this description throughout Canada; and not only Canada, but through several sections of the Republic to the south. The St. Lawrence route during the spring and early summer possesses peculiar advantages for the conveyance of green fruit over the more southern one by way of New York, which fact is receiving more recognition every year That this fact is unpalatable to New York jobbers was instanced by the attempts they made at the time to belittle and injure it through circulating false reports which alleged that wholesale damage had been done to the fruit by frost in the Gulf. These concoctions were proved to be utterly untrue; in fact it is in this comparative coolness that our route has its advantages, for owing to it the fruit can be laid down in Montreal perfectly fresh without any expense being incurred in securing the requisite temperature by artificial means which has to be resorted to at times on the more southerly passage. Over 80,000 to 90,000 boxes of oranges and lemons were turned over at these sales, and the fruit was distributed over a wide area of territory, the sales being attended by leading buyers from Toronto, Hamilton, London (in Ontario), Chicago, St. Paul, Milwaukee, and other cities in the Western States, and also from Eastern American cities, as New York and Boston, had representatives of the fruit trade in attendance. As we stated above, all the fruit was in excellent condition, and the results of the sales so gratifying to the consignors that they have intimated to their agents on this side that the St. Lawrence route will in future always receive their attention.

Aside from these fruit sales little occurred of a special nature in other lines during the summer months. Trade moved along in a healthy way throughout, and stocks generally were well reduced by the time fresh supplies commenced to arrive. Firmness in tea and sugar, through the summer was a noticeable feature, for allowing for some little flunctuation that is bound to occur at all times, these two lines maintained a pretty steady position all along which developed into positive strength by the time the fall movement commenced This was especially the case as regards sugar, the supply of the raw article on spot being reduced to very slim dimensions, very early substantial advances being made and the stock in first hands outside of that held by the refineries reduced to the holdings of one jobber. Molasses also was a prominent feature of the market under active speculative buying on American account, the supply on this contineut being exceptionally light and the article still occupies at the moment an unsettled and feaverish position, owing to the uncertainty regarding the disposal of these purchases which are still held on this side the line in bond. However it may be though the tone of values is pretty firmly maintained by holders at the moment. By the time the first excitement in molasses had subsided, importers here were agitated by active enquiry for fine brandies and wines on American account, caused by a desire to secure supplies in anticipation of the new tariff. A wholesale clearance was effected of the stock in bond here which was not heavy, some $50,000 to $75,000 worth of stock being turned over in one week which is a fair illustration of the buying that was done. Therefore, stocks at present are light, and the first direct steamer from Charente, the arrival of which is expected shortly brings but a light cargo, so that stocks here are likely to continue so for some time. Following up this deal in wines and liquors come the first direct importations of foreign dried fruits, old stocks of which were very light. Our consumption of these is increasing annually, being now estimated at 300,000 boxes annually, so that when it becomes known that this year's importations would fall far short of the average, under reasons which THE GROCER has already explained, there was some anxious buyers, and the first receipts, some 68,000 odd boxes, ex Dracona, were promptly cleared out of first hands before they were landed on the wharf almost. Prices averaged about as usual, but they bare a stiffening tendency at present, as the fresh supplies afloat for this port are inconsiderable in comparison with consumptive requirements. These comprise the main features noted, and the brief resume given above will refresh the memories of THE GROCER'S readers regarding them and their consequences. The present week shows but little change from the previous one. Business generally has been quiet, except the steady jobbing movement, which is moving along steadily. In a wholesale way, however, there has been nothing of special importance.

FRUIT.

The only feature of business in a strictly wholesale way has been currants; in fact it is the only line of stock in first hands at the moment, as raisins have been well cleared up. Currants are firm here at quotations, and advices from primary markets quote the market one shilling higher for all grades, Patras, Filiatria, and Provincial. Supplies have been moving pretty freely out of importers hands during the week, sales of Filiatria being made readily at 5¾c. in bbls., and the range is a fraction higher than that. Some transactions in low Provincials have occurred a fraction under this, but for business in a general way our quotation of 5¾ to 6c. may stand as a fair basis. There has been nothing doing in raisins during the week in a wholesale way, for the reason that, as we stated last week, stock has been well taken out of first hands. There has been a pretty active enquiry for stock to arrive, but the position in this respect is unsettled. As we have stated supplies now afloat for this port are inconsiderable, and as importers do not know exactly how they stand they are holding back. The Florence, the last steamer, only brings a limited quantity, and the Escalona, the second steamer, with 38,000 boxes, which is now on her way around from Halifax, has but little stock to offer on the market, as the bulk of it is on jobbers account, while a considerable portion is for the West. The New York market, however, is on the easy side, but prices on that market differ from ours by only a ¼c., so that supplies cannot be brought from there yet and laid down at a profit. On the other hand, advices from Denia are firm at 19 to 19s. 3d. cost, freight and insurance brands. In other lines of dried fruit there is no change, a quiet jobbing business proceeding. New evaporated apples are offering here at 14 to 15c., and there has been some little business. Green fruit presents no notable feature. Jamaica oranges are selling in a jobbing way at $5 to $6, and lemons at $11 to $12 per case. Figs are offering at 10 to 15c. for Eleme, with a fair distributive movement.

SUGAR, SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The raw sugar market rules strong elsewhere and this has its effect on our local market which is firm. Refined sugars continue strong and now that a Maritime Provincial refinery has got through its undiscriminate offerings in Ontario, the market may be expected to stiffen. Granulated is unchanged at 6⅝ at both refineries, and yellows are selling at from 5⅛ to 6⅛. Syrups are in good demand and stocks are light so that holders are very firm, the range being 3⅝ to 4⅜c. Molasses remain unsettled and will continue so until the holdings of the American syndicate are either taken to the states or sold here. In the former event the market may be expected to stiffen and in the latter it may ease of a little, but not materially as stocks are away below the average, even with this lot considered. Prices are nominally at 37½ to 38c. but it is doubtful of any stock could be moved under 40c.

TEA AND COFFEE.

There is no change to these markets and little doing in a wholesale way. Japans are scarce and some sales have occurred at 19 to 20c. while blocks are strong, but we hear of no business. The coffee market is firm with no business of importance noted.

RICE.

The rice market continues in about the same condition with a fair business for the week. We quote: Common, $2.70, Japan, $4.10 to $4.25 and Patna, $5.50.

SPICES.

Matters generally in relation to goods of this description are steady to firm. There is no Jamaica ginger in first hands here but some new crop is expected shortly, but no quotation has been made upon it. Nutmegs continue firm and other lines are about the same.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

As regards country produce the results on the market would create the idea that farmers have nothing very much to complain of during the past summer, if butter be excepted, perhaps, and even in connection with this article a satisfactory feature has been the steady consumptive movement that has prevailed throughout, good varieties readily commanding fair figures. It was hops, however, that had the best opening, the figure realized on the first sale, affording a gratifying comparison as against the figures that prevailed last year. The growth of this product elsewhere, during the current year, was disappointing, except on the Continent, Consequently growers expected good figures for their stock, and so far their expectations have been realized. The first sale here was at very long figures from 49 to 50c. for choice early Palmers for export to Great Britain, and since then figures in the country have been pretty firmly held. Brewers however are pursuing their usual tactics of holding off so that business here in new crop has been unimportant, in fact only one sale in any quantity has been made, which was at 35c. a very good figure, when last years range is considered when the ruling price seldom went over 20c. Eggs are another article that have encountered a favorable season on the whole. One cause and perhaps the most influential one was the extensive buying on American account on anticipation of the new tariff, whereby a pretty general clearance was made in the country of late. Prices have ruled pretty steady throughout the summer and fall, and now the tendency is decidedly firm for the reason mentioned above. A new feature and one worthy of note, is the experimental shipments to Great Britain by enterprising dealers here who are not going to sit down and suck their thumbs because a gentlemen named McKinley has been instrumental in building a fence to keep Canadian products out of the States. Returns from the first consignment have already been received and they are gratifying on the whole, the London house to whom the lot were consigned having nothing but good things to say of their quality and condition on arrival. In consequence of this several other shipments will follow and it now seems likely that a profitable trade will be built up for our surplus stock of eggs.

Another interesting subject has been the apple market and its prospects. Early in the season the prediction was made that we were going to have a profitable season, and it now seems likely that this prediction will be verified, so that the few firms who went in on "spec" are likely to make something out of their deals. Returns were to hand from the first sales in Liverpool last week, and they showed prices from 25 to 50 per cent. better than last year's figures, the first consignments ex Lake Winnipeg and Oregon being turned over at a handsome profit to the shippers. Of course there are pessimists who do not take a cheerful view of the situation, and they point to the fact that already

TELEGRAPHIC MARKET ADVICES.

We are frequently asked by telegraph for information regarding markets here and abroad by interested parties throughout the country. As our representatives are on the market daily we have given such information to all inquirers. We will gladly continue to do so, but as the inquiry frequently entails a good deal of work a reasonable charge will be made for special telegraphic reports asked for by those who are not subscribers to THE CANADIAN GROCER.

THE TARBOX SELF-WRINGER.

Sometime ago we had occasion to speak of this mop. At that time we mentioned a few predictions as to its future. Although but a very short time on the market, to retail at 50 cents, complete, fitted with a special knit cloth and wringer, it is having a large sale. It is not only extensively sold in Canada, but is being exported to Great Britain in large lots. From fall to spring, or throughout the winter season, all wish to avoid the evil effects of exposing their wet hands to the cold and winds. This mop can be used with gloves or mittens on, using scalding water, and the hands need not be wet at all. We would suggest to those who have not yet ordered, that they supply their own customers rather than allow their opposition to take a cash sale. What is realized on the sale of these mops is pure original profit, not the substitute for profit derived from some other article supplanted by this one, as this mop displaces no similar article. The mop is manufactured by Tarbox Bros., 73 Adelaide st. west, Toronto.

Mr. Wesley Cockburn, who left Thorold some nine years ago for Winnipeg, is paying a visit to his old home. Evidently the western climate agrees with Mr. C., who looks hale and hearty, and weighs considerably over 200. He is conducting a prosperous grocery, flour and feed business at Winnipeg. He is very enthusiastic about his new home.—Thorold Post.

Merchants in town complain of a number of dead beats who run up credit in the shops and refuse to pay They only laugh at their creditors. A black list will be published eventually.—Deseronto Tribune.

In an up-town store the proprietor has a silver dime stuck to the lower side of the glass show case. Before the crowd got on to the fake nearly every man, woman and child made an attempt to pick up that piece of lucre. It's a good way to make money fast.—Thorold post.

The demand for fine groceries increases year by year. This is especially noticeable in foreign dried fruits. Turner, Rose & Co., Montreal, are now showing the finest sample of Eleme figs—"Levant Beauties" they are appropriately called—that we have yet seen on the Canadian market. They are exceptionally good.

stock is sprouting up where no one thought there was any. This may be all very true, but every one has to admit that our apple crop was light, while the indications are that the United States will have but little surplus stock over her own requirements. On the whole, therefore, the impression is that we will see a fairly steady apple market this fall.

The season in dairy produce has been notable for the steady movement of cheese and the comparative steadiness of butter. With regard to the former, the English market kept up a good consumptive demand for the early makes right along, and by the time the fall keeping varieties were on the market the position seemed to be healthy and no doubt is still so. A speculative deal in the first half of Augusts, however, sent the price up considerably, and then those who had loaded up worked the usual "blood game" with regard to fancy bids in the country, which had the effect of holding up the factorymen, until the stock of summer cheese was worked of on the other side. It seems, therefore, from all accounts that a fair margin was had in most instances in England on the early stocks. When later made varieties came to be considered, however, there was the usual difference of opinion between buyer and seller, and of late the market has dragged along rather slowly, as the English buyer has not as a general thing gone over 50 per cent. which factorymen have not been disposed to accept. Recently, however, the latter have in some instances shown an inclination to meet buyers, but the latter do not appear to be very anxious. Consequently, the market may be summed up as dull, but steady at the moment.

In butter the make this season has been rather below the average, but beyond the jobbing movement other business has been light. During August a splurge was made by one dealer "going in" and doing some extensive buying at pretty long figures. This filled the farmers with the idea that they could get fancy figures for the later makes, and they have been firm holders ever since, so that the market generally has ruled rather quiet. Of late, however, some enquiries have been coming over the cable, which have led to some business, but it has not become general as yet. At about 22c., we think, a movement would occur, so the market, although in a sense slow, is essentially steady.

Flour and grain have presented few features during the season. The former moved forward on a pretty shady basis, and during the early summer there was some export business which imparted a fair degree of firmness to the position. It was intermittent, however, and of late there has been no trading outside of the home movement in Manitoba grades, although some little exporting of Ontario goods has been doing direct until very recently.

The feature of the grain market is the scarcity of Manitoba wheat, which made its appearance considerably earlier than this, last year, on spot. So far no business has transpired on spot, in it, but it seems very likely, according to all accounts that we will have but light receipts comparatively between now and the close of navigation, One leading miller, who is one of the largest recipients here, does not expect to have more than 150,000 bushels at the outside between now and the time mentioned. In other lines there have been no features, except that as a general thing business in lake freights this year has been lighter than last, owing to the firmness of the markets at Chicago, and elsewhere in the west, prices being generally too high for exporting. This at least is the universal complaint with the forwarding companies.

APPLES.

There has been no alteration to this market since our last and the firm feeling noted then continues. Holders are operating in a careful way here and best fall varieties cannot be had here under $4.50, which is an inside price on them. Further cables received from Liverpool repeat the good news published in these columns last week, a recent one with reference to the sales Monday, stating that range was 24s. to 30s. which is a somewhat higher basis than the one noted last week. It is easily understood therefore that holders are firm. Locally, there is a fair business moving at outside figures on any stock that is really worth mentioning. A recent trade circular from Liverpool under date of Oct. 11th states that the prospects for the season are most encouraging and that although the receipts were rather off in quality, the prices were considerably ahead of last years. The range on the best varieties was 26s. to 28s, and it will be seen therefore that there has been an advance since then. The total receipts at Liverpool to the 11th were 14,009 barrels against 20,304 last year. The total shipments from this port to the 15th Oct. are appended.

EGGS.

The egg market continues steady and there is no change in the general position of the market. Receipts come forward in limited supply, and the local demand is more than sufficient to keep stocks in a normal condition. For strictly fresh new laid stock 18½ to 19½c., and held stock 16 1-2 to 17 1-2c. The experimental shipments to Great Britain, which are referred to elsewhere, have turned out well and several more will follow.

ASHES.

There has been a fair movement in ashes during the week, in fact they have picked up considerably under buying on American account and prices are firmer, several large shipments having gone forward to the States in the past few days. First pots are stiff at $4.50, with anything choice a fraction more, with seconds $4, and pearls unquotable, as there is none here.

HOPS.

The position of this product is unchanged. Brewers as a general thing remain indifferent and will not respond to offers made them, except at figures which prevent business. It is understood, however, that some western grocers have been placing odd lots here with brewers at about 35c.; but nothing definite could be learned. Operators talk a quiet market, and complain of no business. They are holding for 35 to 40c., as growers are now asking prices equivalent to this in the country, and are firm at that.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is unchanged, with a quiet steady movement in pork. Smoked meats dull and unchanged. We quote:—Canadian short cut, per brl $17.50 to $18; mess pork, western, per brl $16.50 to $17; short cut, western, per brl $17.00 to $17.50; hams, city cured, per lb 12 to 12½c.; hams, canvassed, per lb 12 1-2 to 13c.; lard, western, pails, per lb 9 to 9¼c.; lard, Canadian, in pails 8¼ to 8 1-2c.; lard, C. O. P., 10 1-2c.; bacon, per pound, 9 to 10c.

BUTTER.

This market has not developed any marked change since our last report. There was some little business doing on export account in western creamery during the week on a basis of 13 1-2 to 14c., but none has been done since. The lots in question comprised 2,000 odd packages, and came for the Bristol market, Some "straight creameries" were also turned over at 19 1-2 to 21 1-2c., but holders are altogether too high in their terms for any general business to result in this direction. They are asking 21 to 22c. in the country, which is a shade too high for exporting. At about 21c. or fractionally around it, we think a movement in an export way would result. We quote :—Late made creamery, 20 to 22c.; summer makes, 17 to 18c finest townships dairy, 18 to 20c. ; western dairy, 14 to 14 1-2c.; medium do. 10 to 12c.

CHEESE.

The cheese market has been uninteresting during the past week, which was a dull and quiet one generally. Buyers were and are yet indifferent, while factory men, except in a few instances were indisposed to concessions so the market dragged. The tune on the whole is easy just now and something will have to give pretty soon one way or the other unless there is a move. Several recent purchases in the country have the appearance of being made as "stiffeners" to the position rather that transactions in the regular way, while business on spot has been confined to some odd shopping around during the week, which did not result in much. As to the values 10¼ is an extreme and would only be allowed on some pet lot with all the frills on, while at the wharf on Monday only the "pick of the basket" brought 10c., the bulk of the trading being fractionally under that figure. We quote: Finest September's and October's, 10⅛ to 10¼c., fine stock 9¾ to 10c., medium 8 1-2 to 9 1-2c.

ST. JOHN MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Oct. 22.

A review of the markets for the past week show very little change in prices. Trade is reported fair, and in some lines good.

FLOUR AND MEAL—Prices are steady, with a good demand. We quote:—Medium patents, $5.25 tc $5.35; Canadian high grade family, $5.50 to $5.60; Manitoba spring patents, $6.50 to $6.60; oatmeal standard, $4.90 to $5.00; roller oatmeal, $4.90 to $5.00; pot barley, $4.25 to $4.35; cornmeal (kiln dried), $3.10 to $3.15; granulated, $3.50 to $3.60.

FISH—The chief feature in the fish trade during the past week has been the placing on the market on a cargo consisting of about 500 barrels No 1, Shelburne herring. This lot is one of the finest that have been placed on the market for some time, and it is quoted at from $4.75 to $5 per barrel. A choice lot of Labrador herring has also been received this week. This lot is being repacked in half-barrels, and is selling at from $3 to $3.25 per half-barrel. A couple of cargoes of pickled herring from Grand Manan have also been placed on the market. Another feature of the week was the exportation to the West Indies of a large consignment of smoked herring, pallack and alewives. Codfish, which showed some weakness a couple of weeks ago, has again regained firmness, owing to a ittle scarcity. Following are the quotations:

Codfish, per quintal, large, dry, $4.75 to $4.90; codfish, per quintal, Tolquol, $4.40 to $4.50, codfish, per quintal, medium, $4.15 to $4.25; pollock, $1 75 to $1.85; haddock, $1.75 to $2.00; herring, bay, per bbl, slit, $3.50 to $3.75; herring, bay, per half-bbl., $1.90 to $2.00; herring, Shelburne No. 1, $4.75 to $5.00; herring, Shelburne No 2, $3.00 to $3.50; herring, canso, $6. to $6.50; herring, labrador, $4.50 to $5.00.

SMOKED HERRING—Grand Manan, sc'd, per box, 11 to 13c.; tucktails, lengthwise, 10 to 11c.; shad, per half bbl, $.50 to $7.00.

PROVISIONS—The market is steady at following quotations: Morgan's S. C. Pork, per bbl. $16.00 to $16.50; Clear Pork, $16.50 to $17; Am. Mess Pork, per bbl. (new) $15.50 to $16; Am. Mess Pork, per bbl. (old) $15.50 to $16; P. E. I. Mess Pork, per bbl. $16.50 to $17; Ex. Prime Pork, in bond, per bbl. $12 to $12.50; Plate Beef, in bond, per bbl. $8 to $8.25; Extra Plate Beef, in bond, per bbl. $8.25 to $8.50; Cheese (new) 9 1-2 to 10c.; Butter, per lb. (choice) 17 to 19c.; Butter, per lb. (old) 12 to 14c.; Lard, per lb. 9 to 11c.; Eggs, per dozen, 15 to 17c.

ST. JOHN'S GROCERS.

During the past week a number of the retail grocery men of St. John, N.B., held a meeting for the purpose of taking into consideration the advisability of forming a union for mutual protection, and the general furtherance of the trade. An informal discussion took place, and an adjournment was made for a few days. There is no doubt such a union would be of great benefit to the trade here, and it is to be hoped the work of organizing will be consumated at the next meeting.

TRADE IS KING.

(Written for the special number of THE GROCER.)

Sing not to me of music's powers
Or charms of brush or stone,
Nor write in glowing words of flowers
That bloom and then are gone.

But tune your harp and strike the chords
With ringing vigorous hand,
And wake the sounds in echoing hearts
In every clime and land.

Sing out the praise of mighty Trade
That rules—the world's great King.
Atune your hearts, ye nations all,
And here your tribute bring.

Raise high your voices, sturdy sons,
Of Commerce be your song,
And buckle on your armour bright
For yet the fight is long.

Let perseverance be your guide,
Emblazoned on your shields,
And bear aloft the honored flag
Which never breaks or yields.

Let women and the weakly ones
Touch chisel, brush and lyre,
But men must wage life's earnest fight,
And break through smoke and fire.

Sons, once again your voices raise,
Let loud the paean ring,
The oldest song the world has known—
"Know all ye, Trade is King."

WM. H. SEYLER.

Toronto, Oct. 20th, '90.

MRS. MALONEY AND HER PAIL

(Written expressly for the special autumn number of THE CANADIAN GROCER, by G. F. G. D.)

T'is Mrs. Maloney, who
Sthamps and who shwares,
Cause she's busted her pail
Whilst scrubbin' the sthairs,
"Bad luck to the spalpeen,"
In anger she cried,
"Pravious to makin' that pail
I wish he had died.
The man at the shtore
Was a snivellin chate,
I'll go round an I'll tell him
He's a dirty dead bate."
Just when she was starting
Her husband came in,
Attracted perchance
By the terrible din.
Says he, "Bridget Maloney,
I'll have yers to know
That round to the shtore
I'll not let yers go.
So just wash yer face
And tidy yer hair,
For I'll buy you a pail
Of INDURATED WARE."
The pail it was purchased
And turned out so good,
That Bridget would never Again buy one of wood.
And every day after
While cleaning the stairs,
She'd bless E. B. Eddy
For "Indurated Wares."

Burglars attempted to force the door of Campbell's grocery and liquor store, Kingston, on Saturday night, but were unsuccessful. Other stores were also tried.

St. John, N.B., has many prosperous merchants, among which are Chas. F. Francis & Co., successors to C. B. Mason, Charlotte street. The firm do a large retail trade in fine groceries and fruits, and have steadily improved on the volume of business held by their predecessor.

At this time of the year retailers can increase their profits by handling cough drops for coughs, colds, sore throat, hoarseness, etc. They are put up by R. & T. Watson, Toronto, in boxes that will attract attention on the shelves and sell themselves. Send a postal card for prices and samples.

We would call the attention of grocers throughout the country to the advertisement of Messrs. James Watson & Co., Toronto, on page 2. This firm has been doing business for 25 years in spices, mustards, etc. Their goods are known by the trade to be thoroughly reliable. The scale which they offer with their spices, etc., is manufactured by the Gurney Scale Co., of Hamilton, and is the most complete grocers scale made. It has nickle plated beams and sliding poises, handsomely finished. It has a large platform in proportion to room occupied. The beam can be easily read from either side, and it has a capacity of 200 pounds. A brass scoop accompanies each scale, and by moving a loose poise on beam, scale can be used either with or without scoop. We have no hesitancy in recommending James Watson & Co.'s goods to our readers, as their long experienced business standing is a guarantee that all orders sent out will be satisfactory to their customers.

As well as for all forms of

SKIN DISEASES

Mr. Geo. H. Smith, of Galt, Ont., writes:

I wish all who are sick would convince themselves of the wonderful curative powers of the Microbe Killer by trying it as I have; I cannot express in words all that it has done for me in a short time, where previous to its use all other remedies failed, and I was getting worse daily.

A Word to Agents.

There are over 3,000 Storekeepers in the United States that have taken agencies for the sale of this wonderful remedy, and who have not only found it all that was claimed for it and more too, but also a good seller after once introduced. No noxious Drugs of any kind; Acids or Spirits are used in the manufacture of this great medicine.

It is pure water charged with powerful gases, which make it the greatest Anti-Septic ever known, for internal or external use. Absolutely guaranteed to be as represented or MONEY REFUNDED.

We want a live agent in every town in Canada. Call for Pamphlets, etc.

NOT AN EXPERIMENT

CHICAGO YEAST POWDER passed that stage years ago. It is an assured household and commercial success. It has been complimented by imitations of its name and its label, but its quality has never been matched. It sells on its merits; it never had a prize scheme attachment; neither C.Y.P. nor a gold dollar needs crutches. It has been subjected to the severest mercantile tests, and its sterling worth has enabled it to maintain its place as the leading 25-cent powder in the market. It pays the merchant a good profit, and NO COMPLAINT OF ITS QUALITY IS EVER HEARD

SPECIAL TO OUR READERS.

As the design of THE CANADIAN GROCER is to benefit mutually all interested in the business, we would request all parties ordering goods or making purchases of any description from houses advertising with us to mention in their letter that such advertisement was noticed in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

OUR SPECIAL NUMBER.

More than 12,000 copies of our Special number have been mailed, and congratulations, both numerous and hearty, have been the tokens sent us of their receipt. We cannot deny that we are slightly susceptible to a compliment, and we would do much to deserve one for its own sake, but the commendations we have received we take in another significance than that of intended laudation. We take them as utterances of a unanimous popular verdict that our efforts to serve the trade are well directed, in the same way as we should take a formal resolution worded so as to state that fact plainly. If the manifestations had nothing gratifying in them, if they were mere expressions of fault-finding, we should still value them as indices whereby we would be enabled to regulate our efforts.

THE POLICY OF TRUTH.

In business a man has often to choose between conscience and expediency. This is a very cardinal fact in trade experience, and if the bubble which trade journalism has recently brewed from it have not yet burst its film, we may be allowed to blow it a little farther. The question, Does a trader need to lie? discussed on so many hands lately is startling. It almost implies that it is now in controversy whether honor or total depravity be the better basis of business success. Of course, there is no serious controversy on this matter. There are cynical people who say everything is fair in trade, but they do not hold to it as a principle so much as they thrust it forward as an apology. It is the utterance of a would-be philosophy of knavery. There is plenty of practice which this maxim covers as with a veil of decency, but such practice is rooted in something shallower than sense of right or deep policy.

But there are things done in business which lack the moral sanction, and are at variance with the intellectual conviction, of the man who does them. The trader who makes a habit of maiming prices or the truth, knows that either practice is both bad and foolish. He very seldom defends such practice by any attempt to prove that it is right or that it is wise. But he holds fast to the doctrine of necessity. His habit of giving overdue praise to every article he has to sell, he excuses by the libel that every trader does it, and that those who do not must lose. Thus his plea is that he is forced by the usage of the majority. If he is to sell a pound of tea for 25 cents to a given customer, he declares he must persuade that customer to believe that the same tea would cost 40c. in any other store, even if he knows its value to be under 25c. If he did not do this he holds, the customer would mistrust the quality of the tea and would go elsewhere, to buy from some more exaggerating salesman. Further, the trader addicted to this bad habit, not only pleads that he is drawn into the whirlpool of a universal trade usage, but that this universal usage has educated the public to expect of a salesman a verbal warrant with every article they buy.

The last person to take all this seriously is the man who advances it in explanation of the mendacity of certain traders. Lying is no more necessary than it is moral or discreet. It is in trade like many other artifices that cannot be traced home to any fundamental conception of business. Dulness of wit is the parent of trade lying. There is no man more often required than is the trader to answer on the spur of the moment. If he is a clever fellow he may be able to answer apropos without lying. If he is a dull fellow, he will do the thing all men can do, he will lie. And this will happen often enough to make lying one of the habits of such a salesman, until perhaps it becomes one of the great resources of his calling, the thing on which he chiefly depends.

The thing however is impolitic. As a policy it will not last long. A fellow-feeling is said to unite men, and birds of a feather will flock together, but lying is not a bond that will knit a group of people into a close union. There is no sympathy among liars. No matter how great a liar a customer may be, he appreciates truth in others, and has as great a horror of untruthful traders as the most honest man can have. Extravagance on the part of a trader is not condemned, therefore, because there is in the world of consumers a high standard of practical veracity, to which the trader must come. There may be or there may not be. We hope there is. But if this were a nation of Munchausens, there would not be a citizen among us who would not be a seeker after truth in the market place. The mendacious trader lies in tokens, and therein causes uneasiness to all who buy from him. Consequently, he cannot last long. It is possible to imagine a thoroughly unprincipled man taking cold-bloodedly to a policy of rigorous uprightness, a man who metes out truth quantity, quality, value, in honest measure to every customer. This man would have little sympathy with the moral principle underlying such a course of action, but he [illegible] be able to appreciate the business policy of it. He would not be a good man but he would be a discerning man. It is a pity that more of those traders who are so given to introducing innovations into their method, would not introduce the innovation of truth-telling, not from love of it but from a conception of its business value.

THE EGG MARKET.

It is not quite a month since we lost the United States market for our eggs, and we have already replaced it. Not only was the suspense very temporary: it was also very light. The obstruction was laid across the course of our trade, just when the year's production had begun to decline, so that only the minimum of inconvenience was suffered. Not only has it been found practicable, but it has also been shown profitable, to substitute the British for the United States demand to sustain our egg industry. The physical obstacles which were supposed to cut us off from the former demand have been overcome. Experiments have proved that the eggs can be put before English consumers in as acceptable condition as can those of any other country now supplying the London market. The steamship companies, stimulated by their interest in increasing trade between the two shores of the Atlantic, are vying with each other to produce the best facilities for carrying eggs unbroken and wholesome to the English market. The great reduction in the time required to cross the Atlantic is a circumstance that is friendly to the development of a market for Canadian eggs in England. Our success in annihilating time, distance, weather, motion, as hindrances to our egg trade with Great Britain is not to be nullified by the cost of transit. It is said that we can get on the English market at very little more than the expense of getting on the United States market when entrance to the latter was unrestricted. The physical and pecuniary obstacles being removed, the all-important question of finding sale for our eggs when we get them to Britain, remains. That has been settled also, if we may take the experience of the pioneers in this trade to be typical. A consignment was sold last week in London at a price equivalent to 24c. a dozen. That high figure was realized in the face of competition against stock from Belgium, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy and Russia. Only the finest French and German eggs sold at a better figure. The means and cost of transit presenting no impediment, and the strength of the demand being sufficient, we have all the essentials of a market.

The price realized on the consignment referred to is equivalent to 19c. here. The 5c. difference represents the freight from Toronto and the cost of package. This is perhaps not above a cent more than freight and cost of package would be to New York from this city, and the New York market required to be at its best to yield 19c. net to the Canadian shipper. We should now have to pay about 9c. to get our eggs to the New York market. Not only is it therefore four cents cheaper to get upon the London market, but it is more profitable if the cost of access were equal. The cause of this is that production in the United States is approaching by slow degrees more closely to the needs of consumption, a circumstance which would in time have spoiled that country as a market even if there had been no McKinley Act. United States eggs come quite freely into this country in February.

The capacity of the English market, on the other hand, is steadily increasing. A comparison of the egg imports of that country for several years back shows this to be a fact. It is said that the United States consumes 1,820,000 dozen, but of this only 15,000,000 dozen are now imported. Great Britain imports 100,000,000 dozen. It is plain, therefore, which country is the better market. The first nine months' egg imports this year cost England $12,000,000. This indicates a consumption of outside stock which is easily capable of stowing away all the Canadian excess. Our egg industry has not been made a vagabond on the face of the earth by the McKinley Act.

THE POULTRY TRADE.

By the imposition of a specific duty of 5c. a pound in place of a former ad valorem duty of 10 per cent. on all dressed poultry, the United States has practically closed its market against Canadian poultry-raisers. Before the passage of the McKinley Act, a 12-pound turkey, sold at 8c. a pound, would including duty, cost the importer about $1.06. At present a turkey of the same weight, sold at the same price, would, including duty, cost the United States importer $1.56. This, it is clear, is a price that makes it impossible for United States consumers to buy poultry from us. The immense quantities of poultry we shipped yearly to Boston, will now have to reach outside consumers through some other outlet. That outlet will, there is little doubt, be the English market, which can as easily absorb our surplus poultry as it can absorb our surplus eggs. The feasibility of placing our stock upon that market is all but demonstrated. The poultry exporters are not thrown entirely on their own invention to find out means for the economical transport of their poultry in a well-preserved condition to the English market. The steamship companies, in this as in the incipient egg trade with Great Britain, are at work to facilitate the poultry trade. Refrigerators are being put in, and everything is doing that can be done to make the English market available. That is all that is needed to establish a profitable trade on that market.

Although Boston was our market in the past, it was not a sufficient market. Just after snowfall, the stock usually began to accumulate in Toronto, and the Boston demand would not keep pace with the supply which would stock this market. The result would be a depression of prices, to prevent total loss on stock which a spell of soft weather would occasion. Soft weather was an almost continuous feature of last winter, and prices were low and stock was wasted, the Boston market being too limited to afford relief.

A cause that has been heretofore prolific of loss should be guarded against as much as possible now. It is the untidy preparation of dressed poultry for the market. The country traders do not dress the poultry, but should use their position as the controllers of the local market to see that poultry is acceptably dressed to bring the best prices. Many farmers' wives scald the feathers off. This gives the skin a torn appearance, which affects the value in the eyes of consumers. If poultry raisers knew how a broken skin depreciates the value of a fowl they would not be swayed by the consideration of ease in plucking which now tempts them to scald the feathers off. Dry-plucked fowls will always sell better than scalded fowls. Another thing dressers should attend to, and that is the removal of the crop. If it is not removed by the dresser, it will be cut out by the market inspector, and his rough way of doing it will leave the appearance of the fowl disfigured, and will make its value less. The crop is removed in the market because of the suspicion that stones and other heavy particles are artificially thrust into it to increase the weight.

We do not know whether to advise our readers to use their influence for or against the practice of drawing poultry. For the Boston market drawing was indispensable, but that market will take no more of our poultry, and we cannot say what the English market prefers. In this market consumers are willing to pay more for poultry that is not drawn. Unless the English market is well opened up for our poultry we may expect prices to be low this winter.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

He says none of the mills will be closed, but some will be kept entirely employed on goods for export to Australia, the West Indies China and Japan.

On Friday afternoon as one of Mr. D. D. Wilson's men, W. Carnochan, was engaged loading two cars of eggs at the Seaforth station a train in the yard caused the team to run away, upsetting the waggon and throwing some of the boxes on one of Mr. Carnochan's legs, breaking it, The eggs were for the English market, and were packed in very heavy flat cases.

A pleasant occurrence took place at Messrs. Davidson & Hay's a few evenings ago when the staff united in expressing their sincere wishes for the future happiness and prosperity of their fellow-employee, Mr. Albert Oakley, on the occasion of his marriage, and took the opportunity of presenting him with a very handsome dinner service as a slight token of the esteem in which they held him. Mr. Oakley returned his thanks in a few well-chosen words.

A suggestion made by a contemporary anent cutting prices, is as follows : "Let the neighboring grocers combine, and every day each one send a man to the cutting shop and purchase some of the articles at cut prices, and—nothing else." This would doubtless soon shut up the man who wanted all the trade and adopted such a onesided and foolish method in endeavoring to obtain it.

The Department of Agriculture has been advised that Canadian cheese stood in the front rank and received the highest awards at the annual show of the British Dairy Farmers' Association. The Times, speaking on the subject, said : For foreign and colonial soft cheese and for a collection of dairy produce, Mr. Jubal Webb, of Kensington, took the first prizes. Mr. Webb's stand was a most attractive one. On it could be seen not only the familiar cheddar (some weighing two cwt. each), the tasty Gruyere (up to two and a half cwt. each cheese), the well-known Canadian (as handsome looking as the big cheddars), Gorgonzola, double Gloucester, Wilts loaf cheese, Stiltons, etc. Mr. Webb's handling of Canadian cheese, it may be stated, dates from the time of the Indian and Colonial Exhibition, and he is now one of the leading representatives of Canadian dairy produce in the mother country.

CROWDED OUT.

Owing to the pressure of advertisements in this issue a number of articles and communications have been crowded out, but will appear next week.

RALLY OF THE TRADE

A general meeting of the Toronto retail grocery trade will be held in Richmond hall Monday evening, to consider the report of the committee appointed by the Association to devise the best means for fighting the wholesale grocers combination. All grocers, whether members of the Association or not, are invited to be present and take part in the discussion. A simple and feasible scheme has been agreed upon and will be submitted.

To Grocers!

There are three articles which the consuming public have decided are the best of their kind in the market, and it will pay every grocer to keep them in stock. They are

The "Horseshoe" brand of canned fruits and vegetables.
Packed by Bowlby Bros. & Co., of Waterford, Ont.

"Cairns" Home-made marmalade, jams and jellies.
Packed by Alexander Cairns, Paisley, Scotland.

The "Trident" brand of canned salmon.

AN ATTRACTIVE WINDOW.

Our representative was struck with the original window of Eb. Browne, the well known wine, liquor and grocery merchant of Ottawa. We must say that Mr. Browne carries one of the finest stocks of groceries, etc., to be had, and knows how to handle his customers to get them to revisit his store. He makes a special effort to push his teas and coffees, and it is on the latter that his window now shows to good effect. The coffee mill has been placed in the window and is run by water-power, the handle on the wheel being left on. Mr. Browne who, by the way is quite a dresser, has an elderly gentleman rigged up in a checked coat, dark pants and good old Irish falseface, working away on this handle, turning out Browne's choice coffee. It is needless to say that this life-sized automatic figure attracts and stops the passer-by. This has now been running about three weeks and still the people stop to see it.

Messrs. Hall and Ashbaugh, of Aylmer, who sold out to G. G. Street, Essex Centre, were in the city on Monday last.

Mr. W. C. Breckenridge, manager of the Norton Mfg. Co., Hamilton, was in Toronto, this week, on his way from the east. He says the lobster packers are now beginning to use his machine-made tins. They will soon all come to it.

DRUM TAPS.

Leaves from the Diary of a Commercial Traveller.

BY WM. H. MAHER.

CHAPTER VIII.

"We sell a great many goods to Heman & Co.," said the Buffalo drummer.

I pricked up my ears, but before I could say anything, supposing I should have cared to say anything, Mr. Clymer turned around to me with:

"I forget your name."

I told him.

"Let me introduce you to Mr. Fleming, of Buffalo. You may have heard of him, as he says he sells a good many goods to your house." Then, turning to Fleming he informed him that I was selling goods for Heman & Co.

Mr Fleming was equal to the occasion. Though he had told a lie, and knew it, he turned to me with an air of pleasure at making my acquaintance, and was good enough to say he was happy to meet me. I think if the incident had taken place when I had a little more experience on the road I would have said nothing to Mr. Fleming about his remark to Mr. Clymer, but I now felt as if it was my duty to fight for my house on every occasion.

"You are mistaken about selling goods to our house, sir," said I; "I have been the book-keeper, have had charge of all the bills and never heard of your house till to-day."

"I may be mistaken," said he, "and have mixed your house with some of the other houses there."

This was enough to get from him at that point, and in a few minutes he took his leave of Mr. Clymer, giving me a very cool but civil "good day."

"Well," said Clymer. "have you stocked the town with hardware?"

"I've done all I could."

"Whom did you sell?"

I told him.

"What did you sell the grocers?"

"Cutlery and woodenware."

"And you sold my Dutch friend, did you? He must be buying wildly, for Fleming said he sold him a big bill."

"I have good reason for knowing that Fleming did not sell him at all. I sat at the stove while he was there, and he did not make an entry in his order book," said I, with some warmth. "It was of a piece with his story about selling us." I was provoked.

"Well, hold your horses; when you know drummers as well as I do, you will know when a man is lying. I've known Fleming for some years, and I never take stock in anything he says."

"And you will buy of such a man?" I said, surprised.

"Yes; he represents a good house, and the men sell low. If I can make any money out of him, I buy of him; I would patronize the devil if he did five per cent. better than any saint would do."

"Well this is a revelation to me," I an-sewered; "I supposed everything depended on the man."

"A good deal does depend on the man," said he ernestly; "dont let my words teach you anything else. Of two men with the same prices the best man gets the order invariably. Low prices will always sell, but no one house can sell under the market. I know some Eastern men that I always look up an order for; they are gentlemen, solid, business-like, and straightforward. If their prices aren't right I tell them so, and they come down. Then there is a conceited class like this young Fleming. I buy of them because their houses are A 1, and because they cut under in prices."

This lesson I treasured up.

"My idea," said I, "was to sell goods for just what they were; whenever I said anything was first quality it was warranted to be first quality; when a man wanted only one-quarter dozen to send just that amount, and to go through the country without style and without blowing. I've only been two days on the road, but I have made up my mind that I can sell goods and I'm going to stick at it."

After more chat of this sort I came down to business.

"You have looked through your stock," said I: "have you found yourself out of anything?"

"Yes, a few items. I'm going to give you a small order, and a very small one, but I don't need any goods now. If I can sort up with you fellows at anything like fair prices, I may do considerable with you."

I thanked him and took out my order-book.

"What do you get for 10 in a Rothery file?" he asked.

"One dollar and seventy-five cents."

"That's what mine cost in New York."

"You can't expect me to beat the New York jobbers?"

"Oh no; your price is all right; you may send me two dozen. Nine-inch and other sizes in same proportion, I suppose?"

I nodded.

"Send me a dozen each, 8, 9, and 12 inch. What do you ask for copper rivets?"

"Twenty-seven and a half cents."

"You are a little under New York there. Send me ten pounds of 1-inch."
